YORALTY CONTEST CLOSEST ON RECORD N BELLEVILLE SINCE ITS INCORPORATION

erman Was Elected Mayor By A Majority of 9--Two of The Old men, Wallace and Robinson, Were Defeated--Eight of The Alder- Candidates Endorsed By The Property Owners' Association Elected

EXCITEMENT PREVAILED WHILE WAITING FOR RETURNS

Yesterday was anything but an ideal day for a municipal election. In the early morning a drizzling rain was falling, and continued until about 11 a.m., when it was succeeded by a heavy fog, which finally lifted in the afternoon. But these depressing conditions in no wise discouraged the workers on behalf of the Mayoralty candidates who worked with great vigor during the day and succeeded in rolling up one of the largest votes ever polled in Belleville. Per contra, the majority for the successful candidate, Alderman H. W. Ackerman, was found, when the returns were all in, to be the smallest ever recorded in this municipality, namely 9.

Waiting For the Verdict.

After the polls had closed the electors commenced to gather at the City Hall to await the returns, while a small party, among whom was Ald. Ackerman, assembled in the City Clerk's office. The first returns favored Ald. Thomas, the tremendous majority cast for him in Bleecker Ward seeming to foreshadow victory for him, but Foster Ward, with only 9 majority, and Coleman Ward, with 47, were disappointing to them. But so was Ketcheson Ward with 78 and Baldwin Ward with but 3 to Alderman Ackerman's supporters. Then came Samson Ward with 70 for Ackerman, and now all depended on Murney Ward. The first return which came to hand was from Poll No. 13, which gave Ackerman 18 majority; next came Poll No. 14, which had been expected to be hostile, but which gave Ackerman 3 majority. Finally all depended on Poll No. 12, the upper part of the Ward, which was looked to with hope. At this stage Ald. Thomas had a majority of 10, but No. 12 came up to expectations, giving a majority of 19 for Ald. Ackerman, who was hailed with cheers as Mayor-elect for 1911.

After the result was known a public meeting was held in the City Hall, which building was filled to its capacity.

Mayor-elect Ackerman was loudly applauded upon ascending the platform. He thanked the electors for placing him at the head of the polls. His course in the Council had evidently been approved of, and at the end of the year he hoped his course would be such that the electors would be still confident in him. He wished all a Happy New Year.

Ald. Woodley thanked the electors of Murney Ward for electing him for the third time. He would do all in his power for good old Belleville. He could endorse the words of the late Sir John A. Macdonald: "A British subject was I born, and a British subject I will die." He (the speaker) was born in Belleville and he wanted to die in Belleville.

Ald. Canning was profuse in his thanks to the electors of Murney Ward for re-electing him for the second time. His best judgment would be for the good of the city.

Ald. Chown stated his course in the Council had been approved of by the vote he had received in Baldwin Ward. He had endeavored to do his duty and he would in the future, as in the past, do all he could to boost and boom Belleville. He wished all a happy and prosperous new year.

Ald. Sills was proud of Samson Ward. He had headed the poll, which was an unexpected honor to him. While in the Council he would do all in his power for the interest of the city, and hoped the city would prosper.

The singing of the National Anthem closed the proceedings.

Half a million people crowded the vicinity. The neighboring buildings were riddled with bullets. Six dead anarchists were found in the ruins, and others are believed to be dead. A score of the attackers were wounded. Nine firemen are missing.

BLOODHOUND PACK TEARS MAN ASUNDER, OWNER EXONERATED

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Jan. 2.—A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated John Roberts, owner of a pack of bloodhounds, which killed an unindentified man trailed as a burglar and tore him to pieces.

The hounds, which followed the trail from Carrier's Mills into the country, upon getting close to the suspect, broke away from Roberts and cornered their victim in a shed. Worn out by his flight, the man was unable to get out of danger, and was pounced upon by the maddened animals before Roberts reached the scene.

No clue to the identity of the man has been found. His face and body were so badly lacerated by the hounds that he was absolutely unrecognizable. The body was buried in the paupers' field to-day.

The dead man was suspected of robbing a house at Carrier Mills of several hundred dollars. The constable was unable to trace him and called on Roberts to aid with his pack of hounds.

CASE OF PLAIN DRUNK

Two young men, named E. P. Burnett and Wesley Merritt, were on Saturday afternoon arrested on a charge of being drunk and acting disorderly on Front Street. They were subsequently allowed out on bail to appear to-morrow before the Magistrate.

SAMSON WAS THE STRONGEST MAN

Interesting Illustrated Lecture By Rev. Mr. Smith, Pastor of The Baptist Church

About sixty men and boys attended the meeting in the Palace Theatre Sunday to hear the illustrated lecture given by Rev. Mr. Smith, of the Baptist Church on Semson, the strongest man in the Bible. Before the lecture there was some good congregational singing of familiar hymns, the words of which were thrown on the screen by the theatre lantern. Mr. W. Smith also played a cornet solo, "O Paradise, and Mr. Ernset Ridley sang "Joy to the World, both of which selections were well rendered and greatly appreciated. Mr. Hess, the chairman, then introduced the lecturer, Rev. Wm. Sfith, who handled Samson, the strong man, without gloves in a way that was striking, original and witty. His comments on the manners, and customs, particularly with reference to courtship and marriage that prevailed in that period, drew many a laugh from the men and boys present, who understood and appreciated the colloquial language in which the story was told. The illustrations showed only a few of the more familiar incidents in Samson's career, but Mr. Smith revived the whole life from birth to death, and drew many morals from the strong man's mistakes. The subject next Sunday will be the life of Samuel, the name of the lecturer to be announced later.

CURRENT EVENTS.

ACKERMAN!

WHAT ABOUT PUBLIC BATHS?

A small majority, but it will do.

THE "RING" DID NOT TRIUMPH.

Now for clean municipal government.

The January thaw blossomed out at earliest possible time.

The "burning" question of the day is that city stove which Ald. Lott berrowed.

Belleville will not this year have any steam rollers to rent at $2 per day and transportation home paid.

Mayor Marsh's candidate for the Mayoralty was swamped because the load which was placed on his back was too heavy for him to carry.

Mayor Marsh claims that his dealings with city property were lawful. True. So was the company which was formed to build that gas holder.

Mr. George I. Thomas is reputed to be a "good sport"—every sport likes a good loser. It is to be hoped that George is still "a dead game sport."

The Property Owners' Association endorsed nine candidates in the three wards in which there were contests and of this number eight were elected.

Treasurer Price is a day behind the market with his request for an investigation as to his relatives' land deals. The investigation will be held regardless of Mr. Price's position in that regard.

'Twas easy to move
That citizens' store,
But nothing's too hot
For Alderman Lott.
—From an unpublished poem by the wraith of the late James Gay.

The ward system got a heavy jolt in the Mayoralty campaign. Nobody had a word to say in its favor, but many denounced it. And no wonder, looking at the results in the aldermanic elections, as a consequence of which the ratepayers will be saddled with the cost of two additional elections.

WILL ASK FOR A RECOUNT

Ald. Thomas informed a member of The Intelligencer staff this morning that he will ask for a recount of the votes cast in the Mayoralty election.

JOHNSON—NEVILLE.

A quiet wedding was celebrated at the residence of Mrs. E. H. Neville, Scotland Avenue, Fort Rouge, Winnipeg, on Christmas Eve, when her youngest daughter, Flessie was married to Mr. Fred C. Johnson, of the C. N. R., formerly of Belleville, and son of Mr. R. Johnson, locomotive forman of the C. P. R. at White River, Ont. The charming young bride looked elegant in a taior made costume of grey cloth, and was attended by Miss Caren Tetlock, while Mr. Bob Cumming acted as best men. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. G. B. Wilson, of Augustine church, after which the company sat down to a sumptuous repast. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson will take a trip to Montreal in the near future.

Seven Year Old Girl Fatally Burned in Township Of Carlow

A Bancroft despatch of the 2nd inst. says: The seven-year-old daughter of Mr. William Reddick, of Carlow Township, near Fort Stewart, was burned to death yesterday morn- and went back to bed, and the little girl was playing around the stove alone, when her clothing became ignited. Before assistance reached her she was so badly burned that she died shortly afterwards.

Yesterday a telephone message was received from Trenton to arrest an Italian named Giovanni de Martino, who, it was alleged, had stolen a horse and vehicle from a fellow countryman and driven to this city. The accused was located here and the outfit recovered. Last evening Chief of Police Taylor, of Trenton, came to the city and took the Italian back to that town for trial.

It was reported to the police on Saturday by Mr. John R. Thatcher, of this city, that a black and tan hound, a rather valuable dog, had been stolen from him. The police, upon enquiry, learned that the dog had been shipped to Cobourg, where it was located. A man named Samuel McBrien was subsequently arrested and charged with stealing the dog. The accused gave bonds for his appearance in court to-morrow.

QUIET HOME WEDDING

Gilbert-Johnson Nuptials--The Bride Received a Handsome Present

At 10 o'clock on Monday morning a quiet wedding occured at the residence of Mr. and Mr. Wm. Johnson, Charles street, when their youngest daughter, Miss Lilie B., was united in marriage to Mr. James Scott Gilbert of Sherbrooke, Quebec. Only the inmates of the house witnessed the wedding ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr Bishop, pastor of Bridge street church. The couple were unattended. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert left for their home in Quebec. The bride received many gifts, including a handsome pearl pendant from her Sunday school class in Bridge street church, which was accompanied by the following address:

Dear Miss Johnson:

We are all very sorry to hear that you are going to leave us and we shall very much miss your brightness and kindness in our class, to which you have so faithfully given your best work and effort for the past two years.

But while we so much regret your going we are glad to wish you God-speed in the new life you are entering, knowing that you will not only be happy, but that you will make happy wherever you are and we hope that the future may hold for you health, wealth and great happiness.

We ask you to accept this gift and hope that in days to come you will often think of us and visit us, and you may be sure you will alway find a place and a warm welcome awaiting you in Bridge street Methodits primary class.

"The Lord bless thee and keep thee and cause his face to shine upon thee."

What! Do men play volley ball? Well, I guess so; at least they were playing yesterday and had a good time, too. In the morning Rev. C. Smith and C. M. Reid were matched against Messrs. TWO WEDDINGS AT FOXBORO

Pretty Matrimonal Ceremonies At The Homes Of The Brides

DENYES—HENDERSON.

Riverside Cottage, Foxboro, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Abert Loucks, was the scene of a very happy event, when on the morning of the 22d of December, 1910, their granddaughter, Edleen Gertrude Henderson was united in marriage to Lewie Ernest Denyes, formerly of Foxboro, but now of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. E. Cragg, B. D., in the presence of about seventy relatives and friends. To the strains of Lohengrin, played by Miss Florence Wickett, the bride entered, leaning on the arm of her grandfather, looking exceedingly charming in a gown of liberty satin with real lace and pearls; wearing a veil and orange blossoms and carrying a boquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Little Miss Alpa Denyes, only sister of the groom, with a basket of pink carnations and lilies of the valley, made a sweet little flower girl. During the congratulations Miss Hattie Gowsell sang in her inimitable style 'Beloved it is Morn.'

The gifts to the bride were many and beautiful. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome diamond ring and to the pianist a set of beauty pins. The bride's going away gown was a tailored suit of amethyst breadcloth with velvet trimmings.

Mr. and Mrs. Denyes left on the 1.45 train amidst showers of confetti and good wishes and music furnished by the Foxboro Brass Band. Their home will be at 113 Bernard Ave., Toronto. The groom is a promising young business man on Bloor street, west.

ROSE—EGGLETON.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Eggeten, Foxboro, was the scene of a very quiet but pretty wedding when their only daughter, Flessie, was united in marriage on December 28th, to Mr. Jacob Frederick Rose, of Sidney township. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. E. Cragg, B. D., under an arch of evergreens and roses. Entering to the strains of Lohengrin, played by Miss Hattie Gonsell, the bride looked beautiful wearing a handome gown of Atlantic Blue iberty satin, with real lace and oriental trimmings.

The gifts to the bride were beautiful, the groom's token being a pearl pendant.

Mr. and Mrs. Rose left on the noon train for Brockville, Ottawa, Montreal and points east, after which they will take up their residence on the Rose homestead, Sidney.

The bride's going away gown was Wisteria broadcloth, with hat to match. They left amid showers of confetti and congratulations. Music was furnished by the Foxboro Band, several of whom played in the old band when the bride's father and mother were married, twenty-seven years ago.

BELLEVILLE BOYS WERE BADLY BEATEN

Champion Frontenacs Defeated Ontarios, Last Night By 9 to 0

The expected happened in the O. H. A. hockey match which was played last night at the Arena between the Frontenacs of Kingston, and the Ontarios of Belleville. The Frontenacs, who last year won the junior championship in the O. H. A. series, presented six of their last year's team, while of last year's Bellevile septette, but two were in the line up, the other five being new to O. H. A. hockey. So it was not difficult to forecast the result.

"Gem" Sutherland's boys, carefully groomed by Sam McCullough, were in perfect condition, and knowing what they were up against were full of confidence, and so it was that they won easily and prevented their opponents from scoring.

There was a very big crowd who were full of enthusiasm and the game was very fast and fairly clean, as a whole, with the exception of one mix-up. There was a good deal of water on the ice in some places but that seemed to make no difference in the speed of the skaters, but the puck was difficult to handle.

The visitors had much the best of it in the first half, making a string of six goals, but in the second period the Ontarios made a much better showing. Although they could not score they had many shots on the Frontenacs' goal, but it is also true that Wardrope defeated many attempts by the champions to net the rubber. In this half the visitors tallied three times and the tally at the close was:

Frontenacs—9.
Ontarios—0

The home boys made, all things considered a highly creditable showing, and will be heard of to advantage in the future.

The line up—

Ontarios		Frontenacs
Wardrope	Goal	Marchand
Brown	Point	Davidson
Tuite	Cover Point	McCammon
Bone	Centre	Hunt
Thompson	Rover	Brough
Connolly	R. Wing	Boyes
Moore	L. Wing	Millan

Mr. Lou Marsh of Toronto, was the referee.

HOCKEY NOTES

There ought to be a fast game tomorrow night when the Belleville and Cobourg Intermediates will meet in their first scheduled game in the O. H. A. series. Cobourg's team is known to be very fast; but the local management claim to have got together an extra good bunch of players. The game will be well worth witnessing.

Picton professionals beat the local team at Picton yesterday 8—2.

The Belleville professionals will play their first scheduled game with Port Hope here on Thursday night.

Fast hockey at the Arena to-morrow night. Belleville Intermediates vs. Cobourg.

Harvey Sproule will referee the game to-morrow night between Belleville and Cobourg.

The Mayoralty Election

The fight is over, and by a small majority the electors have chosen Mr. Ackerman as Chief Magistrate for the ensuing year, and they have made no mistake. Mr. Thomas may feel proud of the vote he polled, though it was secured in some respects by means not creditable to those who resorted to them. We acquit Mr. Thomas entirely of the disreputable tactics by which the vote on his behalf was secured.

When it was learned that a number of leading Liberals were objecting to the tactics resorted to in order to secure lots at low prices for themselves and families, they openly denounced it, and assisted in forming the Property Owners' Association, and spoke plainly in condemnation of what had been done. But, unfortunately, none of them appeared on the platform on the night of the public meeting, which gave those who put party before good government, whether in Dominion or municipal affairs, an excuse to raise the party cry, and Mr. Marsh joined in the cry by modestly telling an interviewer in Montreal that he, being the leading Liberal in Belleville, it was an attempt to crush him. Let us hope that the members of the Property Owners' Association, composed as it is of such Liberals as S. S. Lazier, John J. B. Flint, Peter Forin, Henry Pringle, Frank Dolan, P. Wims, D. Leavens, and many others, had more patriotic objects in view than making an attack upon the self-constituted leader of their own party. These men are not babes; they knew well what they were doing, and have given strong evidence of the faith that was in them. The Intelligencer has always opposed the introduction of party politics in municipal contests, not because it feared the result, but because it believed a municipality could be better governed outside of partyism than in it. If, however, we are to have municipal elections fought on party grounds, we are prepared to fight it out on those lines.

There were other cries raised equally disreputable, which may require a passing notice ere long.

It is now for the Council to act, and that, too, promptly. Mr. Price asks for an investigation; he must have it. No one will be more delighted than The Intelligencer if it be shown by a competent judge that he was within his duty in selling city property to himself and family at ridiculously low prices, while other citizens were trying to secure it.

CHINESE TONGS SWEAR PEACE EVERLASTING BEFORE GOD OF WAR

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.— There is peace among the Tongs again, not only in New York, but all over the United States. The "gun-men" have been disarmed and ordered back to the laundry tubs. The Highbinders must seek honest employment; they will no longer be permitted to slay and maim.

In New York's Chinatown—as in every Chinatown in America—there is consequent rejoicing. The Four Brothers and the On Leong Tongs have been at peace before, but it was only temporary. To-day's peace is to be everlasting; the sages have drained the Samsu cups of the rice wine in commemoration of the end of the war.

The past was signed last night in the headquarters of the On Leongs, in Mott Street. Two high officials from the Chinese eLgation at Washington witnessed the signatures. The signing of the treaty was impressive. In the centre of the low ceiled room stood a high, round table, about which were grouped the head men of the two Tongs in bright raiment. About them stood 40 Chinese merchants, preachers and students, together with the minor officials of the Tongs. At each end of the room stood two altars of the God of War, before whose wrinkled form burned two red candles, with the emblems of the Tongs painted in white on their sides.

Between the candles rested two roast pigs, banked about with candied sugar loafs. Burning incense sticks quivered in the hands of the Joss. Behind the Joss knelt, two Hok-rah boys, bearing lacquer trays, upon which were the Chinese ink pads and bamboo ink brushes to be used in signing the treaty.

Under the terms of the peace that is to extend to the remotest section of America, each Tong agrees to turn murderers over to the Chinese Merchants' Association, who are to deliver them to the police and insure a speedy trial. Each Tong shall pay the debts its members owe to the other. All gambling debts are to be liquidated promptly and when one Tong member kills a member of another, indemnity is to be paid. The wronged Tong is not to seek retribution—the law will be allowed to do that.

SAD STORY OF SOCIETY FOLKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—A judgment for $1,023 has been entered today in the County Clerk's office in favor of Princess Zoltykofff against Captain Charles Glen Collins, former husband of Natalie Schenk, the society beauty. According to the Princess, who sued under her maiden name, Ethel Clinton, the amount represents part of the value of some rare vases, which, she alleges, Captain Collins secured from her in London and disposed of, converting the proceeds to his own use. She alleges that he used this money to finance his American tour which ended in his marriage to Natalie Schenk, who later divorced him when each discovered that the other was practically penniless.

Collins admitted securing the vases from the Princess in London, but said he had forgotten the transaction and was willing to pay her, but had not the money at the present time. The Princess claimed that she lost track of Collins after he got the vases, but she saw him dining in a local hotel last month and demanded payment. He gave her a number of notes which were not met, so suit was entered.

Collins was formerly an officer in the British Army and served with distinction in the Boer War. Returning to England, he met the Princess, who at that time was entertaining lavishly in London. He admired certain vases, sent appraisers to value them, agreed to buy them and carried them away, leaving a promise to send a check. Shortly afterward he came to America and was taken up by society. His marriage to the beautiful Miss Schenk followed. They started on a honeymoon trip and when they reached Honolulu he told his bride that his money was exhausted and asked her to cable for some. She informed him that she too was poor and they separated, she returning to the United States and getting a divorce. Collins went to Boston and worked for a time as a laborer. Later he came to this city as the promoter of a marble quarry in the South and there the Princess met him and instituted the suit.

Mrs. Schenk-Collins is now the wife of William Lambeer, whom she married on October 30, 1909, following the suicide in Boston of Laimbeer's first wife, who was Clara Bloodgood, the actress.

MUCH GOLD "IN SIGHT" AT PORCUPINE.

Mr. H. E. T. Haultain, one of the best known and reliable mining engineers, contributes a special article on the Porcupine gold camp, in the third annual statistical review and outlook number of The Monetary Times, published on January 7th. "Porcupine has now more gold 'in sight,'" he says, "that is actually proved to exist by exploration and development, than the total output of gold in Ontario up to date. Will Porcupine eclipse such districts as Johannesburg or Cripple Creek? Good as are the showings at Porcupine, there is no evidence of any such extent of richness as characterizes these big districts. But Porcupine can be a very successful and a very important gold camp, and yet fall far short of these big camps. Porcupine already has done a great and lasting service to Ontario in that she has brought into the district some of the world's best miners, and mine financiers, and has made them believers in the probabilities of the future.

"The nickel mines were considered a freak. Cobalt was considered a freak. Ontario's gold was always a failure, but now even a small gold camp with a real dividend payer coming on the top of Cobalt would change all this. Porcupine, without question, will be a good small camp in the immediate future, and may develope into one of the big camps. Meanwhile there will be much activity in farm lands, townsites, transportation by sleighs, rail and by water, power distribution, mill construction, real mining and wild-catting."

Sleeves, tunics and skirts of chiffon are now finished with hemstitching, an odd bit of needle work above as opague hem, which, by the way, is often edged with fur.

Barbaric effects in beadwork trimming are much seen on chiffon ove blouses.

MOVING PICTURES IN UNION STATION

PITTSBURG, Jan. 2.—Moving picture shows to while away the time while waiting for trains will be presented free to travellers over the Pennsylvania Railway soon, as a result of negotiations now being conducted by the railroad and the Exhibitors' League of Moving Picture Men.

The moving picture promoters will establish a nicelodeon in the big Union Station here, and it will be so placed that the spectators may leave hurriedly for their trains. The moving pictures will do away with the necessity of raucous voiced train callers announcing the time of departure Announcements will be thrown on the screen, so that the passengers may be at their ease about making connections.

HIS LAST BET.

(Victoria Colonist.)

A penniless Russian prince made a bet with a wealthy landowner that he could drink a gallon of liquor at one time. He was to receive deeds to a valuable estate if he won. He won, but his heirs will have the estate. He placed the jug to his lips and drank until every drop in it was gone. Then he put out his hand, received the title deeds to the estate, fell over and died.

Exposes Methods of Dealers in Destinies

Magizine Writer Describes a Typical Medium--How Fortune Tellers Dupe Their Victims

Roy L. McCardell exposes fortune tellers in an article headed "Dealers in Destinies" in the January Hampton's Magazine. Here is his description of a typical "medium" and a scene in her studio:

"Madame Seera, blonde, unkempt, standing beneath the gaslight of the poorly furnished back parlor of her second-class boarding house, brushes back an unkempt yellow lock and looks at an elderly gentleman with thin, grey hair, and a lean and anxious expression, clad in a garb of the deepest black. Then she gazes at a five-dollar bill which her visitor has just given her.

"'I'll see what I can do for five,' she blinks. 'But sometimes my control don't work very well, and I have to stop in the middle of a seance just because little Baby Ruth gets cantankerous and says I didn't buy her any spirit candy. If you want real results, something that will satisfy you, I'd really oughter have ten.'

"But your advertisements all say two dollars,' protests the elderly gentleman. 'However as this is only an experiment I am making to-night, I am willing to pay whatever you ask. If it is true no sum of money can be great enough to keep me from my loved ones; and if it is a fraud, a few dollars more or less will not serve to hide that fact from me.'

"As her visitor seats himself in the darkened room, Madame Seera reclines in the large easy chair, and breathes heavily.

"'I'll see which control comes first,' she explains. 'You know I have only two controls now, the spirit of little Baby Ruth, a sweet child who passed out when she was only five years old, and that of Mohawk the Indian, who was a Sioux brave, killed at the battle of Wounded Knee. Baby Ruth is playful and childish, and always plays pranks, but you won't mind her, will you?'

"The medium sinks back in her chair as though completely overcome. She sighs deeply. Then she suddenly straightens up, and, if she is as good as the average actress under such circumstances, she emits several childish chuckles, and talks in baby talk, something like this:

"'Dood evenin'. I's little Baby Ruth, I's come from the most booful land, everything white and gold, where everyone is happy. I's so happy, but I's hungry too. I wants some spirit candy. Oh, yes here's a nice old man to buy me some spirit candy! I's going to sit on the dood gentleman's knee and beg for spirit candy.'

"This is the cue for the medium to try and sit on the knees of her victim. Of course the lady is supposed to be under the influence of her 'control,' Baby Ruth and is personally oblivious to all that is going on. In case the genuine seeker after truth repels such advances, the medium returns to her seat and the baby talk continues:

"'Oh, the nice old gentleman isn't kind to 'ittle Baby Ruth' Baby Ruth doesn't like him any more. He is horrid, so she's going away, back to the land where everything is bright and sunshine and gold. Dood-bye, dood-bye,' and with a voice growing fainter and fainter the spirit of Baby Ruth departs, while the medium shudders, and endures physical convulsions supposed to be due to the passing of the spirit of the angel child.

"The mythical Madame Seera—or Madame Vashti, or whatever highfalutin name she calls herself by—then falls back on the good old Indian control, the standard refuge of all mediums when their baby talk is squelched. Let us see what happens to Seera as an Indian.

"'I'm Mohawk, the Indian,' comes in deep, guttural tones from the lips lips of the medium, after she has thrown several more fits. 'I come from happy hunting grounds. Mohawk don't like being called from happy hunting grounds. Mohawk happy there. But now Mohawk here. Mohawk answer questions. Who called Mohawk?'

"This is the cue for the visitor to ask advice or any questions he desires. If he asks about stocks, he will find that Mohawk displays a wonderful knowledge of Wall Street, but if he persists in requests for explicit advice he will get something like:

"'Mohawk say don't hurry. Mohawk examine trail, see sings, consult great medicine man. Mohawk think best consult others in happy hunting grounds. Then Mohawk tell next time—next week, mebbe—whether better buy or sell stocks. Mohawk tired now.'

"Then, if you are credulous enough to pay a second visit to Mohawk's advice, you will get something more definite, but you will first have to explain to the medium herself how much money you have and how you want to invest it. The medium, of course, gets a rake-off from the broker she recommend in addition to her fee from the visitor, and as she usually works the[illegible] 'pairs' advising one client to [illegible] a certain stock, and another to [illegible] the same stock, she cannot lose, [illegible] one of the 'suckers' is sure to win [illegible], as happens quite frequently, [illegible] medium or the 'broker' has worthless stock to sell outright."

Street skirts and day dresses are still worn several inches from the ground.

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

"I am not a bit tired," he commented, still looking at her.

"That is more than I can say," she answered, "but I am so delighted that we managed to save so many poor people."

"How many?"

"Seventy-eight. But I dare not ask you now how many are lost. It would make me cry, and I have no time for tears. Will you really help to carry a tray?"

"Just try me."

At the top of the stairs Constance called to her father:

"Anything you want, dad?"

"Yes, dear. Find out the chief officer, and send him to me. He can eat and drink here whilst we talk."

CHAPTER VIII.

AN INTERLUDE

"Please be careful; these stairs are very steep," said Constance, swinging the lantern close to her companion's feet as they climbed down the topmost flight.

"If I fall," he assured her, "you will be the chief sufferer."

"All the more reason why you should not fall. Wait here a moment. I must have a look at the hospital."

The visiting-officer's room, which also served the purposes of a library and recreation room in normal times, now held fourteen injured persons, including two women, one of them a stewardess, and a little girl.

Most of the sufferers had received their wounds either in the saloon or by collision with the cornice of the lighthouse. The worst accident was a broken arm, the most alarming a case of cerebral concussion. Other injuries consisted, for the most part, of cuts and bruises.

Unfortunately, when the ship struck, the surgeon had gone aft to attend to an engineer whose hand was crushed as the result of some frantic lurch caused by the hurricane; hence the doctor was lost with the first batch of victims. Enid discovered that among the few steerage pasengers saved was a man who had gained some experience in a field-hospital during the campaign in Cuba. Aided by the plain directions supplied with the medicine chest of the lighthouse, the ex-hospital orderly had done wonders already.

"All I want, miss," he explained, in answer to Constance's question, "is some water and some linen for bandages. The lint outfit in the chest is not half sufficient."

She vanished, to return quickly with a sheet and a pair of scissors.

"Now," she said to Mr. Pyne, "if you come with me I will send you back with a pail of water."

She took him to the kitchen where Enid, aided by a sailor, pressed into service, was dispensing cocoa and biscuits. Pyne, who remained in the stairway, went off with the water and Constance's lantern. The interior of the lighthouse was utterly dark. To move without a light, and with no prior knowledge of its internal arrangements, was positively dangerous. All told, there were seven lamps of various sizes available. Brand had one, four were distributed throughout the apartments tenanted by the survivors of the wreck, two were retained for transit purposes, and the men shivering in the entrance passage had no light at all.

Constance took Enid's lantern in order to discover the whereabouts of Mr. Emmett, the first officer, the tray-carrying sailor offering to guide her to him.

When Pyne came back he found Enid in the dark and mistook her for Constance.

"They want some more," he cried at the door.

"Some more what?" she demanded. It seemed no time for elegant diction. Her heart jumped each time the sea sprang at the rock. It seemed to be so much worse in the dark.

"Water," said he.

"Dear me. I should have thought everybody would be fully satisfied in that respect."

He held up the lantern.

"Well, that's curious," he cried. "I imagined you were the other young lady. The water is needed in the hospital."

"Why didn't you say so?" she snapped, being in reality very angry with herself for her flippancy. She gave him a full pail and he quitted her.

Constance, having delivered her father's message to Mr. Emmett, was greeted with a tart question when she re-entered the kitchen:

"Why on earth did'nt you tell me that young man was attending to the injured people? Is he a doctor?"

"I think not. What happened?"

"He came for a second supply of water and nearly bit my head off."

"Oh, Enid! I am sure he did not mean anything. Didn't you recognize him? It was he who climbed the mast and flung the rope to us."

"There!" said Enid, "I've gone and done it. Honestly, you know, it was I who was rude. He will think me a perfect cat."

"That isn't what people are saying," exclaimed Mr. Pyne, whose approach was deadened by the outer noise. "There's a kind of general idea floating round that this locality is an annex of heaven, with ministering angels in attendance."

In the half light of the tiny lamps he could see Enid's scarlet face. There was a moment's silence, and this very self-possessed youth spoke again.

"The nice things we all have to tell you will keep," he said. "Would you mind letting me know in which rooms you have located the ladies?"

Constance, as major domo, gave the information asked for:

"They are in the two bedrooms overhead. Poor things! I am at my wits' end to know how to get their clothing dried. You see, Mr. Pyne, my sister and I have to spare clothes here. We only came to the rock this afternoon, by the merest chance."

"That is just what was troubling me,' he answered. "I am sort of interested in one of them."

"Oh," said Constance, "I do wish I could help. But, indeed, my own skirts are wringing wet."

"From what I can make out, then, my prospective step-aunt will catch a very bad cold."

The queer phrase puzzled the girls, but Constance, rarely for her, jumped at a conclusion.

"Your prospective step-aunt. You mean, perhaps, your fiance's aunt?" she suggested.

"I don't know the lady. No, ma'am. I was right first time. Mrs. Vansittart is going to marry my uncle, so I keep an eye on her stock to that extent."

"How stupid of me!" she explained, whilst a delighted giggle from Enid did not help to mend matters. So Constance became very stately.

"I will ask Mrs. Vansittart to come out and speak to you—" she began.

"No, no!" I don't wish that. You might tell her I am all right. That is the limit. And—may I make a suggestion?"

"Pray do."

"It will help considerable if the women-folk take it in turn to get into the beds or bunks. Then, some of their linen could be dried at the stove. I will take charge of that part of the business, if I may. Otherwise, some of them will die."

The girls agreed that this was a capital idea. Constance went upstairs. In the first room she inquired:

"Is Mrs. Vansittart here?"

"Yes," said a sweet but rather querulous voice.

A lady, who had already appropriated the lower bunk, raised herself on an elbow.

Past Help.

The man with the old clock under his arm laid it on the jeweler's showcase. "I wish you'd see what is the matter with this," he said.

The jeweler removed the dial, screwed his eyeglasses into place and inspected the works of the ancient timepiece.

"Nothing is the matter with it now. Its sufferings are over."

"Well, how much do I owe you?" asked the man.

"Nothing," answered the jeweler. "This isn't a professional treatment. This is a coroner's inquest."—Youth's Companion.

Counter Case.

Upon being called in the police court at Asheville, N. C., charged with an assault upon a clerk at a soda water fountain, the defendant arose and said, "Your honor, I am guilty, but I plead a counter case," whereupon the aforesaid clerk arose and replied: "Your honor, the counter didn't have anything to do with it. I walked around the counter before I struck him."—Case and Comment.

George Was Not the Only One.

"Come in this evening and our daughter will play and sing some of her own compositions."

"All right."

"Now I know that Washington was not the only one who could not tell a lie."

"Why so?"

"You might have said you had another engagement."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Live Table Talk.

"I hope you will be interested in yonder gentleman," said the hostess. "I have assigned him to take you out to dinner."

"I shall be," responded the lady addressed. "That gentleman was formerly my husband, and he's behind with his alimony."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Question.

Molly is a sweet young miss
  On whom I call o' nights,
And long we sit close up—likethis—
  Both lost in dreamy flights.

Now, as we coddle up to each
  A question grips my noddle:
While she's what fellows call "a peach,"
  Am I a mollycoddle?

Earl Grey Reviews Boys.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—The boy scouts of various parts of Ontario and Quebec took part in a field day south of the city yesterday afternoon. About 150 scouts took part representing Peterboro, Montreal, Galt, Arnprior. They were divided into two forces, one which formed a circle a mile in diameter, and the other force tried to pierce it unobserved, to carry despatches in. Secretary Todd of Toronto, was the chief umpire, and the scouts successful in getting through the line were: Scout W. A. Smart of Westmount, (chief despatch); Efauffen, Moffatt, Fryer and Rutherford of Galt; E. S. Almon of Westmount; C. Ketchum, D. Poaps, Ellis Butler and G. Fellows, Ottawa.

After the contest, the boys had dinner in the open, and were later reviewed by Earl Grey, who regretted that he had not known of the field day sooner, as he would have been glad to entertain them at Rideau Hall in the afternoon. He spoke of the chivalry among the boys, as shown in respect for their elders, politeness for women, giving their seats to elders in the street cars, etc. He complimented the winners, and particularly referred to Peterboro, which had done so well in the dramatic competitions.

The annual New Year levee was held at the office of the Governor-General, Parliament Hill, and hundreds of citizens attended, as well as members of the Government, judges, military, etc.

The Governor-General also called on the Governor-General's Body Guards at the officers' mess, where the usual receptions were held.

Epistle to Eastern Church.

Rome, Jan. 3.—The Osservatore Romano, the Vatican organ, yesterday published a papal epistle to all Oriental churches, which aims at neutralizing the effect which the article recently written by Prince Maximilian of Saxony may have produced, and to explain which the prince a few days ago appeared before the Pope and Cardinal Merry del Val.

The epistle says that, since the separation of the Roman and Oriental churches in the ninth century, the Popes have always endeavored to heal the breach, harmful both to the east and west. It enumerates the six dogmas, which, according to Prince Maximilian's article, should be waived to facilitate the return of the Oriental to the Roman Church, demonstrating that this was impossible, as dogma is truth, and truth cannot be waived.

Town Recaptured.

Chihuahua, Jan. 3.—An official report last night states that the town of Batopilas, recently occupied by the revolutionists, was taken by 500 federals yesterday afternoon without casualties. The insurrection force was small and most of them, it is stated, were taken prisoners.

The report telegraphed a week ago that the insurrectors as a retaliatory measure recently executed ten prisoners, is confirmed by Americans arriving here. Volunteers from Casas Grandes, it is officially reported, have met and defeated the insurgent band under the leadership of a chief named Guerrero.

No Consistory Soon.

Rome, Jan. 3.—The Pope has accepted the resignation of Mgr. Branito di Belmonte Pignatelli as papal nuncio at Vienna. From this the inference is drawn that the holding of a consistory cannot be near, as otherwise the nuncio, who is one of those scheduled to be created a cardinal, would not have resigned. The conferment of the red hat would have meant his withdrawal from Vienna.

Barrie Hotelkeeper Dead.

Barrie, Jan. 3.—Wm. Kennedy, proprietor of one of Barrie's leading hotels, passed away Sunday. He was born at Trafalgar, in Halton County and came to Barrie in 1881. Deceased was a member of the Masonic and Orange Orders, and is survived by a widow and two sons.

Six Persons Killed.

Ashland, Ky., Jan. 3.—Six persons were killed in a wreck on Mutter's Creek Railway near Van Lear, a few miles above Paintville, Ky., Sunday night.

What is believed to be the largest playable band instrument in the world is a tuba owned in Los Angeles, weighing 90 pounds and standing more than five feet high.

HAPPY NEW YEAR
FROM THE STAFF!

STORM AND WEATHER FORECASTS, JANUARY, 1911

By Rev. Irl R. Hicks.

A regular storm period is indicated for the 2nd to the 7th. January will open cold and fair in western and central States, with low barometer eastern extremes. By the 4th, higher temperature, falling barometer and gathering storms will appear to the westward. During the 4th to the 7th, rain and snow will visit most parts of the country, passing from west to east. Electrical manifestations to the southward will culminate on and touching the 7th, after which high barometer, attended by fair and much colder weather, will prevail generally for three or four days. The first three or four days of January are embraced in a seismic period, which is central on December 31, 1910.

A reactionary storm period will bring change to warmer weather, attended by falling barometer, cloudiness, rain and snow, passing eastward during the 10th, 11th and 12th. Each section—western, central and eastern—will get these changes first in the order named, and in the same order, behind the storms, each section will get change to rising barometer and cold, fair weather. Fix this periodic order of things in your mind, arrange your business accordingly, and you will be the winner.

A regular storm period will be the order from the 14th to the 15th, central on the 16th. This period promises two distinctive storm paroxysms, the first on and near the 14th—the second on and near the 19th. Low barometer, threatening cloudiness, and rains turning to snow, will pass eastwardly across the country during this period. A very marked high barometer and change to severe cold, fair weather, will follow these storms. Plan for these things, accordingly as you are located along the line from west to east and thus outwit the inconveniences and danger of storm and weather. A seismic wave will pass through the earth during a period of six days, central on the 14th.

A reactionary storm period will result in falling barometer, rising thermometer, cloudiness, rain and snow, on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th. These disturbances will lead up to the beginning of the Mercury period on the 24th, with the promise of a prolonged time of stormy, disagreeable weather. At most the interval of fair weather will be short after this period.

A regular storm period blends with the Mercury disturbance from the 25th to the 30th. This period is central on the 27th. It will culminate on the 27th to 30th in fierce storms of rain, snow and sleet, amounting to blizzards north and west, and bringing in a general cold wave that will reach far into the south as we pass from January into February. This is one of those Mercury "sleet god" periods that will give us a maximum fall of the barometer, sleet and storms that will destroy shrubbery and wires, and open the gates of the northwest for blizzard and cold wave. A seismic period covers three or four days before and after the 30th. The Mercury period is also central on the 31st, extending eight to ten days into February.

Expect to Arrest a Hundred.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 3.—As a result of New Year's Eve riot here, thirteen young men have been arrested and are locked up in the police station. The following charge is entered on the police books after their names: "Riotiously and tumultuously disturbing the public peace and unlawfully and with force stopping street cars, breaking down arc lamps, breaking windows, pulling down signs, breaking car windows, taking fenders off cars, and assaulting the police."

All the prisoners are well connected, one being the son of an alderman. The police say they expect to arrest a hundred, but many of those wanted are said to have left town.

A Costly Game.

Paris, Jan. 3.—Edmond Thery, the French economist, figures that the maintenance of Europe's armed peace footing in the last twenty-five years cost one hundred and forty-five billion francs, approximately twenty-nine billion, which involve an increase in the public debt of the European states of from one hundred and five to one hundred and fifty-one billions of francs, and constantly excluded from productive industry 195,000 officers and 2,800,000 men.

Duty on Steel Rails.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—An order-in-council has been passed, now that a mill has been established in Canada, adapted and equipped for rerolling in substantial quantities rails used in railway tracks weighing not less than 56 lbs. per lineal yard, ordering that the customs duty, specified in item 388 of customs tariff, 1907, shall be abolished, and all such rails when imported shall be subject to such duty as otherwise provided in the customs tariff.

Five Children Burned to Death.

Pottsville, Pa., Jan. 3.—The five children of John Markasvage lost their lives at Minersville, near here, early yesterday, in a fire which destroyed three houses in the foreign quarter of the town. The children ranged in age from two months to eight years. The origin of the fire is credited to a New Year's celebration of boarders in one of the houses, an upset oil lamp, it is said, starting the blaze.

Vancouver's Magistrate.

Vancouver, Jan. 3.—A. E. Bull, formerly of Toronto, Vancouver's magistrate for the past year, has resigned that office. The Provincial Government has appointed as his successor H. C. Shaw, K.C., who came to Vancouver from Charlottetown, P.E.I., in 1892.

Reciprocity Negotiations.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—The Canadian Government has decided that Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. Wm. Paterson shall proceed to Washington on Thursday to resume the reciprocity negotiations on Jan. 7.

MARK TWAIN ONCE SAID

"It is Spring Fever that causes the general unrest, lack of ambition and run-down condition which pervades the human system in the Spring of the year."

The sudden change from frigid to torrid weather occurs within a few weeks, especially in our nothern states.

No wonder pulmonary troubles—pneumonia, spring fever, and all such ailments are almost universal.

If people in this vicinity only knew the value of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, (without oil) at this season of the year, we would not be able to get enough to supply the demand.

Vinol tones up the digestive organs, purifies and enriches the blood, promotes healthful sleep and a normal appetite.

Old people, delicate children, run-down, overworked and tired women, those suffering bonchitis, chronic coughs and colds, all derive great benefit from its use.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THERE are some of us keeping up appearance so strenuously that we may have to do the disappearing act in order to average things up.

Poetic justice, raw and strong,
That is the kind you draw
When you are guilty of a wrong
That is not against the law.
Suppose your temper you mislay
And rave and throw a fit
About the food, that very day
The hired girl may quit.

You take advantage of a chap
Who isn't over bright,
And coax him gently in a trap
That robs him left and right.
And as you lead him to the deep,
To push him o'er the brim,
He gives his arm a careless sweep
And drags you in with him.

You scold a boy who by mistake
May step upon your corn;
His little heart begins to ache
As he receives your scorn.
When something rough to him you do
At almost nothing riled,
He may, when you are out of view,
Make faces at your child.

Evict the widow from her cot
Because the rent is due;
Doubt not that fate at once will plot
To get it back on you.

Your cat or dog may die.

Elegies For Old Year.

"Of all sounds of all bells, most solemn and touching is the peal which rings out the old year," wrote Charles Lamb. "I never hear it without a gathering up of my mind to a concentration of all the images that have diffused over the past twelvemonth, all I have done or suffered, performed or neglected, in that regretted time. I begin to know its worth as when a person dies."

Longfellow, too, looks at the solemn side of the old year, for he says in his "Midnight Mass For the Dying Year:"

Through the woods and mountain passes
The winds like anthems roll.
They are chanting solemn masses,
Singing: "Pray for this soul!
Pray, pray!"

Tennyson's "Death of the Old Year," however, looks more to the New Year and voices the sentiment of the "king is dead, long live the king." It is not well to dwell upon the mistakes of the past.

He was full of joke and jest,
But all his merry quips are o'er.
To see him die across the waste
His son and heir doth ride posthaste,
But he'll be dead before.
Every one for his own.
The night is stormy and cold, my friend,
And the New Year, blithe and bold, my friend,
Comes up to take his own.

Set a Bad Example.

THE MAYORS FOR 1911

Elections in Ontario Occasion Some Hot Contests.

Toronto Returns Mayor Geary By the Largest Majority In History of the City—Hamilton Elects Mr. Lees By a Big Plurality and Makes Several Changes In Its Administration—The Successful Ones.

Toronto, Jan. 3.—The results of the Toronto elections yesterday were a triumph for the sound sense of the ratepayers, who showed a discrimination alike in the municipal field and in the contests for the Board of Education that should make for a year of good civic and educational administration.

The return of Mayor Geary for a second term was never in doubt, but a majority of more than twenty-seven thousand votes over both his opponents is a striking proof that the citizens regard the choice of chief magistrate as a serious business.

The controllers for the coming year are: Hocken, Spence, Ward and Church.

In Hamilton.

Hamilton, Jan. 3.—Ex-Ald. George H. Lees was elected Mayor of Hamilton yesterday by a majority of 504 over Controller Allan. The power question was the principal issue. License reduction also played an important part. The council was cut down from 25 members to 21, including the Mayor and Board of Control. Twelve of the new Council are pledged to sign a co-operative contract with the Hydro-Electric Commission. Ten members ran on the temperance ticket. Five bylaws were submitted and all carried. One provides for a reduction of Council to introduce legislation in favor of compensation of those who lose licenses, another is for the purchase of a site for a new hospital, another for a detention home and a fifth was to raise $125,000 for good roads.

In the Outside Service.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—The Secretary of State will at the present session of Parliament introduce a bill placing all employes of the Printing Bureau in the outside service, on the same footing as letter carriers.

Superintendent Boardman, the chief foreman, Draper, Superintendent of Bindery Allen, and Loose Leaf Ledger Expert McCarthy of the Government Printing Bureau left last night for a three weeks' tour of the big American cities, to inspect all the largest printing establishments. The object of Hon. Charles Murphy, who has despatched the officials on the trip, is to secure pointers to put in effect the improvements recommended by the commission, which recently investigated and reported upon conditions at the Bureau. The party goes direct from Ottawa to Washington, where the U. S. Government Printing Bureau will be inspected.

Coach Roof Blown Off.

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 3.—The blizzard sweeping over Kansas gave passengers on Rock Island Railroad train No. 24, due here early yesterday morning, an unusual experience. While running at full speed the top of a passenger coach was blown off, giving the passengers a chill, but no one was injured. The damaged coach was abandoned, and the train reached Topeka two hours late.

Governor Dix Sworn In.

Albany, N.Y., Jan. 3—John Alden Dix, a Democrat, was formally inaugurated governor of New York State at noon yesterday. He succeeds Governor Horace White, who became chief executive last October when Governor C. E. Hughes resigned to become an associate justice of the U. S. Supreme Court.

AYLESWORTH A K.C.M.G.

Six New Knights Are Created In New Year Honors.

London, Jan. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Among the list of New Year's honors conferred by the King, the names of several Canadians find a place. Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, K.C., Minister of Justice, is made a K.C.M.G. Included among the new knights bachelors are: Townshend, Chief Justice of Nova Scotia; William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway; Donald Mann, vice-president of the same road; George C. Gibbons, K.C., chairman of the Canadian section of the Waterways Commission, and Thomas Tate, lately chairman of the Railway Commission of Victoria. Lt.-Col. H. N. Smith, deputy sergeant-at-arms of the House of Commons at Ottawa, is made a C.M.G.

SIR ALLAN B. AYLESWORTH.

Lord Balfour of Burleigh, and Lord Robson are both honored with K.C.M.G., the former for his connection with the royal commission which enquired into trade with Canada and the West Indies, and the latter for his work on the North Atlantic fisheries arbitration.

The London Graphic, commenting on the honors conferred, says: "Public opinion will emphatically endorse this recognition of the patient and valuable work performed by both Robson and Aylesworth in a historical arbitration."

TRAVERS ARRESTED.

He Is Again Put In Jail on a Further Charge.

Toronto, Jan. 3.—W. R. Travers is in jail on a second charge in connection with the Farmers' Bank. This time the indictment is for the alleged theft of $40,000 cash. Mr. Travers was arrested at ten o'clock on Saturday night. It looks as if still other charges are to be laid, and it will therefore, be impossible to get him released until the trials are over. There is a determined move to enforce the law in all its ramification in its relation to the failure of the bank.

The first charge was for making false returns to the Government regarding the bank's condition. The second charge is for taking the bank's funds.

The transaction in question is said to have taken place on 28th January, 1910, when Mr. Travers advanced to himself $40,000 of the bank's money, assigning as collateral security therefor a grist of mining stock, of nominal value, which is said now to be practically worthless.

Other improper transactions are reported to have been uncovered. Suits have also been instituted to recover money that was paid to depositors on the last day of business. These depositors were, on the terms of the deposit, bound to give notice of the intended withdrawal of the funs. This was not done. The authorities claim it was a wrongful use of the resources of the bank ,and that payment should have been refused by the manager or his officers when the demand for payment was made.

The investigation of the bank's affairs is going on apace and every day brings a blacker outlook. A number of the shareholders have petitioned the Government at Ottawa to appoint a commissioner to make an investigation of the whole affairs and workings of the bank and its management.

Turned on the Power.

Dundas, Jan. 3—Hydro-electric power was turned on for the first time in Dundas last evening, temporary connection having been made with the main interswitching station, which is situated just outside the town limits. The first place to be lighted is the Collins' Curling Rink, one of the proprietors of which is Charles Collins, the well-known baseball player and curler, who is chairman of the civic lighting committee.

The new transformers are being installed to-day, and Dundas users will have light and power here in a few days. The main station being at Dundas, there will be no cost of transmission.

The bylaw to raise money for the installation of a municipal power and lighting plant carried yesterday by a large majority.

Sent Back to States.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Jan. 3.—Provincial Officer McNamara arrested Helena Cuonzo, 17, and Joseph Moralabite, aged 24, in Welland on Sunday for the Slean, N.Y., authorities. The pair were sent back to the States, the man to answer to a charge of abduction, while his pretty sweetheart will be charged with violating the penal code.

OPTIONISTS ARE HIT

Proportion of Victories For Prohibition Is Small.

Fifty-Five Liquor Licenses Must Go In Ontario as a Result of Yesterday's Polling; But the Aggregate Result Is Disappointing to Temperance Workers — Eighteen Three-Fifths Fights Failed.

Toronto, Jan. 3.—Local option met with a reverse in thirty-seven municipalities reported last night, and lost in twenty-one.

Particularly did the sentiment against the curtailment of "privileges" show itself in the larger places. Guelph, the only city voting on the question, turned down the temperance issue, and of the thirteen towns interested, only two carried the measure.

The three-fifths clause saved five towns from the drought, namely, Barrie, Brampton, Huntsville, Napanee and Smith's Falls.

Alexandra and Bracebridge are to go dry on May 1. Beaverton, Newburgh, Paisley and West Lorne will be dry villages on May 1.

Four townships, according to returns, will lose their licenses. They are: Bostard, E. Camden, E. Flamboro and Wolford.

The three repeal contests in Cremore Village, Beverley Township and Goulburn Township, which have been under local option, failed, and it will necessarily be three years before another contest will be waged.

It is noteworthy from a local standpoint that the municipalities surrounding Toronto which there was a polling combat resulted in the victory for the license-holders.

One of the features of the local option campaign was the fight in Brampton to regain license. The required three-fifths was obtain a year ago, but was quashed on a technicality. The Government did not issue licenses, but a re-vote was taken yesterday, with a vote for the bylaw of 491 and 376 against.

Rev. B. H. Spence said of this result: Brampton carried local option. It became a no license town. By 115 majority the citizens declare a desire to stay no license. Will the Government force licenses back upon Brampton? It is one of these instances which show the utter iniquity of the three-fifths requirement.

A coincidence of the vote was an exact total of 133 both pro and con at Merrickville.

The failure by a handful of votes to add Barrie to the dry list evoked a declaration by Rev. B. H. Spence that it was "a scoundrelly law."

The wet majority in Guelph was a keen disappointment, as a majority was hoped for, even it not a full three-fifths. The vote was a clear defeat of the bylaw, 1,335 against to 1,210 for the bylaw.

All three repeal contests resulted in the municipalities concerned remaining dry.

A lull in the returns was enlivened by a long distance 'phone message from President Joseph, Ingersoll. Secretary Spence said that the president congratulated the workers on their efforts, and assured them that the alliance would immediately "pick up the fight just where they left off."

Carried—Beaverton, 2; Alexandria, 4; West Lorne, 3; Camden E., 7; Flamboro 1., 1; Paisley, 1; Lancaster, 2; Bracebridge, 5; Howick Township, 1; Vankleek Hill, 5; Newburg, 1; Loughborough, 6; Kenyon, 4; Thorold Township, 2; Wardsville, 1; Wolford, 1; Bastard, 2; Gwillemburg N., 2; Huntsville, 4; Burk's Falls, 3; Rodney, 3. Licenses gone, 55.

Sustained by failure to get three-fifths—Creemore, Beverly, Goulburn. Total, 3.

Failed to get three-fifths—Brampton, Erin, Napanee, Grand Valley, Sutton, Puslinch, Scarboro, Floss, Zorra W., Barrie, Guelph Township, Crowland, Albemarle, Newcastle, Smith's Falls, Port Rowan, Kitley, Humberstone. Total, 18.

Defeated on straight majority—Arnprior, Port Colborne, Rochester, Sherborne, Bothwell, Perth, Merrickville, Drayton, Guelph City, Amherstburg, Bertis, Thorold, Welland, Fort Erie, Mara, Stamford, Port Elgin, Willoughby. Total, 18.

C.P.R. Appointments.

Montreal, Jan. 3.—Circulars were issued by the Canadian Pacific yesterday announcing the appointment reported some days ago of J. F. Schwitzer, first assistant engineer of the company's western lines at Winnipeg, to the position of chief engineer of the system. The appointment of F. P. Butelius, general superintendent of the eastern division with headquarters at Montreal, was announced. Mr. Butelius is succeeded by J. G. Taylor, superintendent at Medicine Hat.

Overcome by Gas.

Dundas, Jan. 3.—Silas and Mrs. Fuller and Miss Walker, sister of Mrs. Fuller, were overcome by escaping coal gas Sunday. They retired early Saturday night, and on Sunday evening neighbors having noticed that no one came out of the house all day, notified relatives. The door was broken in and Mr. and Mrs. Fuller were brought to by Dr. Bertram after some effort. Miss Walker was still unconscious to-day and will likely die.

Barrie Man Dead.

Barrie, Jan. 3.—Henry Sewrey, formerly mayor of Barrie, and a prominent business man, passed away Saturday evening, aged 76 years. He had been a resident of Barrie for fifty-six years, and filled the offices of chief magistrate from 1881 to 1886 inclusive. For many years he was the proprietor of the Barrie foundry. He is survived by a widow and three sons.

VICTIMS OF UPPER AIR.

Moisant and Hoxsey Are Killed on Same Day.

New York, Jan. 3.—John B. Moisant and Arch. Hoxsey, aviators extraordinary, were killed Saturday. Both fell out of the treacherous air currents with their machines—neither from a vast height—and Moisant's remaining minutes of life were so few as to count as naught. Hoxsey was killed instantly.

Moisant met his death at 9.55 a.m., attempting to alight in a field a few miles from New Orleans; Hoxsey, who went into the air early in the afternoon at Los Angeles, at 2.12 p.m., was crushed into a lifeless mass in view of thousands who were watching the aviation tournament.

Thus, the last day of 1910, in bringing the total number of deaths of aviators to 35, capped the list with two of the most illustrious of those airmen who have been writing the history of aviation in the sky of two continents.

Both men met death in almost the same manner. Each machine was headed for the earth, and suddenly seemed to stop, hover in the air, then turn over onto its nose and dive headlong to the earth and to destruction.

Moisant's aeroplane was a Bleriot monoplane. In addition to the heavy engine in front of the main planes, he had fastened a tank holding 35 gallons of gasoline. Aviation experts believe a sudden puff of wind stopped his machine dead in the air and the heavy weight ahead dragged the light framework behind it, flipping the then useless rear elevator toward the zenith. From his position, partly back of the main planes, Moisant was flipped out, clear of the machine, and struck the ground on his head, breaking his neck. He died on a flat car on which he was being rushed to New Orleans.

Hoxsey likewise was returning from a journey into the clouds. He was within 500 feet of the earth, and cheers were going up to meet the conqueror of the higher air, when his machine seemed to stop, shudder, and whirl over and over to the ground. As in the morning's tragedy, the rear elevator, rendered useless when the momentum was gone, flipped around helpless to aid the fated machine. Hoxsey vainly endeavored to right his craft by warping the main planes and by use of the rudder, but before sufficient momentum was gained the frail structure crumpled upon the earth, the heavy engine being torn loose.

Fighting the Sugar Trust.

New York, Jan. 3.—Three corporations and one individual defendant filed appearances yesterday in the U. S. Circuit Court, in reply to the Government's suit to dissolve the so-called Sugar Trust, under the Sherman law. Two-score other defendant individuals and corporations, including the American Sugar Refining Co., have been granted extensions until Feb. 6 next for filing answers.

Those filing yesterday were the Menominee River Sugar Co. of Michigan, capitalized at $825,000; the Union Sugar Co. of California, capitalized at $1,500,000, and the Alameda Sugar Co. of California, capitalized at $750,000. John L. Howard of San Francisco, president of both the Union and Alameda companies, filed his answer as an individual defendant.

Panama Commerce.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Commerce of the countries of North and South America and the necessity of their preparing for the opening of the Panama Canal will be discussed in their various phases at a Pan-American commercial conference to be held here during the week beginning Feb. 13 next, under the auspices of the Pan-American Union.

The purpose of the conference, as announced by John Barrett, director general of the union, is to awaken the commercia organizations, business men and general public of North and South America to an appreciation of the possibilities of Panama commerce, and the necessity of getting ready for the commercial changes which will be brought about by the opening of the Panama Canal.

Venus Inhabited, Says Scientist.

Montgomery, Mo., Jan. 3.—In a letter to relatives T. T. J. See, astronomer in charge of the U. S. Naval Observatory at Mare Island, California, says the planet Venus probably is inhabited. He says: "Just as the earth never rotated very rapidly, and has not been appreciably retarded by the effects of tidal frictions, so also Venus has escaped a corresponding retardation of axial rotation, and still rotates in 23 hours, 21 minutes, as has been held by observers since the day of Cassini, 1667.

"The planet Venus, therefore, is habitable and probably is inhabited by some kind of intelligent being."

Denounced Divorce.

London, Jan. 3.—Rev. Dr. Thomas Manning of Dundas Centre Methodist Church, in a sermon Sunday night denounced any legislation to secure greater freedom of divorce in Canada. "It is better for us to have the wild Indians breaking into our homes than to permit this evil to spread throughout the country, devastating our homes," said Dr. Manning. "I consider any legislation which makes it possible to secure a divorce in this country as nothing less than a national calamity."

Government House Reception.

Toronto, Jan. 3.—The New Year's reception at Government House was one of the most successful in recent years. His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Gibson received, assisted by Sir James Whitney and Hon. J. J. Foy. A large number of officers of the district staff were present, also the chief justice and judges of the high court, representatives of the clergy and many prominent citizens.

Conference Held With Hon. George P. Graham Is Said to Be With Regard to Hudson Bay Line—Mackenzie and Mann Are Gratified as Result of Their Elevation to the Knighthood.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann had a conference with Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways yesterday, and as a result Mr. Graham will submit to Parliament, it is understood, a proposal that the Canadian Northern Railway undertake the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway. It is expected that this will provoke a storm of disapproval from the west, whose farmers desire construction by the Government, ownership by the Government, and operation by the Government.

Sir William Mackenzie was the recipient of a large number of congratulatory messages from all over the country. He dined last evening with Admiral Kingsmill, and telegrams kept coming in while he was at the table.

"Of course I am pleased," he remarked when questioned as to how the knighthood affected him. "Nobody was more surprised than I was. I do not look upon it so much as an honor to myself, as a recognition of the work the railways are doing in Canada."

Sir Donald Mann, the other Canadian Northern Railway magnate, is also in the city. He also expressed surprise at the royal favor, but his remarks betokened extreme pleasure. The telegraph messengers were also kept busy in his case, and, as Sir Donald remarked, it won't be easy to reply to all the kind congratulations in a hurry.

Sir Allan Aylesworth is always reserved when it is a matter of mention of himself. Last night he would not say much, but it was very evident that the token of the regard of the King for his services to the state is much appreciated by the Minister of Justice.

"I am gratified," he remarked. "Any man would be."

Naval Pay Roll Increased.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—The following wages have been scheduled in the latest pay roll: Instrument allowance for bandmaster, 25 cents a day extra; band corporal, 15 cents; bandsmen, 10 cents; naval schoolmaster (to the petty officer acting as such), 15 cents a day.

The wages provided for shipwrights, carpenters, mates and chief carpenters' mates have not proved sufficiently high to obtain suitable candidates and the Minister of Marine has made a new schedule as follows: Shipwright $1.25, after three years $1.35, after six years $1.50; carpenters' mate $1.65, after three years $1.75, after six years $1.90; chief carpenters' mate $2, after three years $2.20.

The increases are from 25 to 40 cents

SALE OF LAMPS

Each year we estimate, when buying our supply of Lamps, our requirements, based on the sale of Lamps the preceding year. Invariably these deductions work out about right. This year, however, we find we are overstocked in two lines of Lamps, viz., FANCY CHINA OIL LAMPS and GAS PORTABLE LAMPS.

At this season of the year there is generally a hue and cry about 20 p.c. sales. Now we don't intend to hold any 20 p.c. sale, but we do intend to clear all odd lines and lines with which we are overstocked at prices less than you have ever seen the goods marked before.

The first of these sales will be our Sale of Lamps, as above.

Just 100 Oil and Gas Lamps in This Lot

These Lamps have all been placed together in one Department, each one bearing a special price ticket. You will have no trouble in choosing yours.

MARSH DONS WAR PAINT AND SAILS INTO ACCUSERS

Asks That Charges Regarding Land Deals be Made--Mr Harry Corby Makes A Spirited Reply To Mr. Marsh--The Gas Holder Transaction Exposed--Mayor Marsh Got Very Hot--Mr. J. W. Johnson's Scathing Indictment--Effective Speeches By Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Mr. Flint

When the result of the election was known and the figures given out by the City Clerk, a meeting was held in the City Hall, as noted elsewhere in these columns. This was thought by many to have completed speechmaking for the evening, but such was not the case. A second meeting was held, and it proved to be one of intense interest and was exceedingly lively in its character. It was presided over by Mayor-elect Ackerman, and upon the platform were, among others, Mayor Marsh, Ald. Lott, Ald Chown, Ald. Bogle, Ald. Sills, Ald-elect Anderson, Ald. Adams, Ald. Vermilyea, Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., and Ald.-elect Dr. A. O. Marshall.

MAYOR MARSH.

Mayor Marsh, in opening the meeting, said he thought Mayor-elect Ackerman was in rather a peculiar position. He claimed to be a temperance man, supported by the temperance people, and had also been supported by the liquor end by Mr. Corby, whom he referred to as "Boss Corby." Personally he congratulated Mayor-elect Ackerman. In regard to the sale of lots he wanted charges made and then he would say something.

MR. HENRY CORBY.

Mr. H. Corby, ex-M.P., went upon the platform and received an ovation when he commenced to speak. He wanted Mayor Marsh to understand that he, the speaker, was not "Boss Corby." Mayor Marsh, he said, had not repudiated the charge that had been made against him in regard to the sale of lots. The city needed an investigation, and as a citizen and a property holder he (the speaker) had a right, with others, to see that this was done. Mayor Marsh should never have been elected Mayor of the city over a man like Ald. Panter. Pointing to the basement of the city building, Mr. Corby said there was $4,000 worth of material lying there, unused, for a gas holder, and furnished by whom? The Gas Holder and Boiler Construction Company, and for the benefit of Mayor Marsh, who was interested in that company. In this and other matters there should be an investigation.

ALD. CALDWELL.

Ald. Caldwell spoke briefly, stating that he would do all he could to promote the interests of the Belleville.

ALD. BOGLE.

Ald. Bogle did not agree with some remarks which had been made at a previous meeting about the Mayor and the City Treasurer. Mayor Marsh, he claimed, had been a worthy Mayor of the city. Serving in the Council was a time of self-sacrifice.

MAYOR MARSH GETS HOT.

Mayor Marsh again spoke at some length. He said that certain insinuations had been made against him, but no direct charges had been made. There were two statements made against him which he wished to nail. It was a lie that he had profited by the sale of certain city lots, or was in conspiracy with Mr. Price in this matter. It was also an unqualified falsehood that he had any notice of the public meeting called for Friday evening last. He went to Montreal on business, and as a result of that trip he closed a contract for the construction of 48 boilers and four hoisting engines, which meant considerable for the mechanics of the city. In regard to the sale of lots, it was true his mother-in-law had bought seven lots and paid for the same some $400. If she, in selling same, made a profit, was it wrong? He did not make a cent out of the transaction. Ald. Ackerman, he said, on the 13th of September, initialed certain lots, and they were sold on the 15th of September. Why should these sales be picked out and not other sales which had been made? It had been insinuated that he intended to run for Mayor this year and had backed out or was afraid. He did intend to be a candidate, but as he would this year be appointed Colonel of the Fifteen Regiment he had been advised by the Department of Militia not to hold both positions. That was his reason for declining to be a candidate. He was ready and willing to have the matter of the sale of lots investigated by a judicial commission. No charges had yet been made, only insinuations. If I have done wrong, put me in jail. He claimed he had not destroyjail. He claimed he had not betrayed his trust and had not acted illegally. He stood on his dignity as Mayor of the city and if there were any charges preferred against him he was prepared to defend the same. He claimed the Property Owners' Association was a political organization, and he cited such members as/Sir M. Bowell, H. Corby, Jas. Roy and J. F. Wills.

A voice—Mr. Flint, Col. Lazier, P. Porin.

MR. J. W. JOHNSON, M.P.P.

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., contended that there was $1,600 in the pockets of Mayor Marsh and the City Treasurer, or their relatives, which should be in the city treasury. In his (the speaker's) mind a conspiracy in this matter was formed. They did not sell the lots to themselves, but to relatives. If a lady's name was brought into this controversy, whose fault was it? Mayor Marsh and the City Treasurer's. The proper course in this transaction would have been to have let the citizens generally know that these lots were for sale, but such was not done. Will Mayor Marsh tell us why he put the money in his, or his mother-in-law's, pocket? The citizens have a bill against Mayor Marsh in this matter There had been graft at Ottawa, graft at Toronto and graft in Belleville. As far as Mr. Corby was concerned, there was not a cowardly drop of blood in his veins, but he and other citizens would not stand idly by and see the city treasury depleted.

ALD. LOTT'S QUERY.

Ald. Lott arose and said, let us hear about the rolling mills transaction and the sale to the city of the gas plant. Did any person, including Mr. Johnson, profit by them.

MR. JOHNSON'S REPLY.

Mr. Johnson—I had $1,000 stock in the gas works and sold same at 7c. on the dollar, thereby losing $930. The rolling mills were here, and if they were rolling to-day he claimed some share in having them in the city. No man dare charge him with a corrupt act.

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell said that Mayor Marsh had stated he did not know of the public meeting called for Friday last. At the Englishmen's banquet, at the Queen's Hotel, on Wednesday last, the Mayor, in conversation with the editor of The Intelligencer, had complained that he had not been consulted about the meeting. This was evidence that he knew the meeting was to take place. In referring to the lot matter, Sir M. Bowell said if the transaction was not illegal, it should not have taken place. The Intelligencer had always taken the stand that politics should not enter into municipal elections. As far as the Property Owners' Association was concerned, he was not at the first meeting when it was formed and was not a member then. Many Liberals were identified with the Association, which was not a political organization. What he would like to see was that members of the Property Owners' Association should have the courage of their convictions. If Mayor Marsh should get into politics he (the speaker) would fight him. The civic elections had gone in a manner that was satisfactory to him.

MR. FLINT.

Mr. J. J. B. Flint said he arose to speak to remove a wrong impression in the minds of some in reference to the Property Owners' Association. He was a member of the Executive and Col. Lazier suggested the idea of forming such an association. He was a Liberal, as all knew. If Mayor Marsh through the Association was a political organization, then he was mistaken in that view. It never, he thought, entered into the minds of any of the members that it was organiezd for a political purpose. The object of the Association was to do all it could for the interests of Belleville. He supported Ald. Ackerman because he thought the best intellect possible should be secured as the head of the Council. He knew Ald. Ackerman was a wise accountant and a commercial man. It was a boon to get such a Mayor. Mr. Thomas was a gentleman and he had not a word to say against him. He made a grand fight and showed his popularity. As far as Mayor Marsh is concerned, the city is indebted to him for many acts he did in the interest of the city. Some things he had done he did not approve of. We all regret the unfortunate affair in reference to the sale of lots. It was to his mind essential that we have a judicial investigation into this matter.

MAYOR-ELECT ACKERMAN.

Mayor-elect Ackerman spoke a few words, again thanking the electors for placing him at the head of the polls.

ALD. VERMILYEA.

Ald. Vermilyea spoke briefly, tendering his thanks for the support given him by the electors of Murney Ward by placing him at the head of the polls.

The meeting closed with cheers for the King.

THE CAT THAT NEVER WENT.

Buff Was Locked In While Owner Was Lamenting.

OUR cat has left home. Well, I'm glad of it. Let her go. I was sick of seeing her around. She was no good, anyway.

It all goes to prove, I say, that a cat isn't capable of affection. Some say that cats do have affection for people. Pooh! Nothing in it. Cats merely love places.

Why, just look at that cat of ours! There wasn't a thing that wasn't done for her. She had the best of everything. We fed her things right off the table. And I've got up nights to let her in. And what does she do? Runs away! No more cats for me, thank you!

Gone over to some of the neighbors, I suppose. They're welcome to her. Good riddance, and I hope they get enough of her. If she thinks she can come back here after they get sick of her she's mistaken.

I guess they had something to do with her going too. Likely they've been feeding her and tolling her away. Pretty business that is. Thank the Lord, I've got common decency enough not to steal my neighbors' cats and dogs. I'd sell and move out of this place tomorrow if I could get my price.

"It'll seem kind of funny without a cat around. A cat certainly does keep mice away, even if she doesn't kill many. And she looks comfortable-like, sitting around, spitting on her hands and washing her face.

I ain't saying that Buff wasn't a good cat either, mind you. She was an uncommonly good tabby. Clean as a whistle. Every one used to remark about her tidiness. I've had loads of chances to get good money for her. I don't think I ever saw her climb up on the table, not since she was a kitten. And then she had the funniest look on her face, a kind of "riddle-me-a-riddle" expression that was comical, wasn't it, though? I've laughed at it many a time. Heigho! Queer, ain't it, how attached you can become to a dumb animal?

The baby will miss her. She was just getting so as to grab out at her and pull her tail. And do you know that good old Buff never would let out her claws, no matter what the baby did. You can't say that of many cats.

I'd like to know who stole her. Why, certainly they must have stolen her. She never would have run away. Before I'd steal my neighbor's cat I'd—What's that? Why, she came to us one day. She looked so lean and peaked that we just had to take her in. She's been with us ever since till now.

Well, she's gone, and what's gone is gone, and there's no use crying over split milk. But every time I think of her—

What? What's that? Upstairs? Locked in a closet? Now, what do you think of that! Come here, Buff! Come, Buff; come, Buff! Poo-oo-r little Buffy! Did they lock her up in the cubby? Did they so? Lock up the dolgarnest petsy in a dark closet—Myrtle! Mrytle Jones! Here's Buff! Got any milk handy?

Poo-oo-r pussy! Pretty kitty!—Freeman Tilden in Puck.

Fear Not

Start the New Year Aright—Fear God Only

Get Rid of Superstitious Fear, Replace With Love, Joy, Peace.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Pastor Russell preached a New Year's sermon from Isaiah xliii, 1-9, "Oh Israel, fear not." The speaker declared fear to be the bane of the world of sorrow, pain and death, he declared. Fear is the outgrowth of sin. The holy angels have no fear; their perfect confidence in God and his arrangements for them precludes fear. Similarly, father Adam, before he sinned, when he was in harmony with his Creator, knew no fear, but directly following his transgression we read that he was afraid and tried to hide himself from God. Likewise, fear has to do with the dread of God which is upon the world to-day. All who realize God's perfection, realize also their own imperfection and unworthiness of Divine favor. Then superstitious fears are developed. The loving sympathy of the infinite Creator for his fallen creatures is unrecognized. Fear paints phantoms and attributes to the Almighty the characteristics of a demon.

WONDERFUL WORDS OF LIFE.

When the Great Teacher appeared amongst men he presented our Creator in the light of a gracious Father deeply interested in the welfare of his creatures, depraved and burdened by sin. The Master invited all the fearful, weary and heavy laden, through faith in his teachings, to take rest of heart and mind. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest"; "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed"—free from the power of the Adversary; free from the delusion and misunderstandings which he creates; free from the ignorance and the superstition of the world; free from slavish fear of God, which will give place to reverence, and free from the "fear of man, which bringeth a snare"—hinders true joy, peace and liberty.

True, not many of the Jews really heard the Great Teacher—really comprehended his message, but those few who heard were greatly blessed. It is also true to-day, that, although the nominal followers of eJsus are counted as four hundred millions, only a mere handful of these know what it is to be made free from the superstition and fear common to the world of mankind.

The speaker said that a gerat falling away occurred shortly after the death of the Apostles. The dominant feature of that falling away was the falling into fear and superstitious dread. Some fell into a fear of Purgatorial sufferings and sorrows of thousands of years, and others fell into the error and fear of eternal torture, sufferings without end. All claimed that only the merest handful escaped these horrors. All charged the Creator with responsibility for this provision and declared that God had thus purposed and arranged the matter by foreknowledge and intention, from before the foundation of the world.

Now we are seeing, said the speaker, that all this was a great mistake that it is not the teaching of the Bible, rightly understood and properly translated. Now we see that these soul-distressing fears which have burdened us for centuries, were a part of the great evil which St. Paul denominated "doctrines of demons"—by which these demons would alienate and separate man from faith and confidence and love toward his Maker.

"FEAR NOT THEIR FEAR."

God's provision for the future is that all mankind shall ultimately be set free from the bondage of superstition, sin and death, under the reign of Messiah's Kingdom, in which the church, consisting of the saintly few, glorified with their Lord to the spiritual plane, will be his associates. As that Kingdom shall uplift mankind from sin and death conditions and shall flood the world with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, the true Light, it will scatter the darkness which now rests upon the civilized world, and the still greater darkness upon the heathen world. Then the "Sun of Righteousness" shall shine into men's hearts with healing, restitution and uplifting influences. Then "all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. (Isaiah xxxv. 5).

All mankind, in proportion as they get rid of the incubus of fear and in proportion as they come to the true knowledge of God, reach possibilities of hope, faith, rest, peace, joy. Nevertheless, comparatively few attain God's highest provision in the present time. No royal road leads thereto, but a "narrow way" of faith, obedience, self-sacrifice—following in the footsteps of the world's Redeemer. These who thus follow our Lord are accepted by him and by the Father as joint-heirs with Christ to the Kingdom glories. And even in the present life they are privileged to enjoy hopes, peace and fearlessness such as others, not specially taught and specially kept by the Great Teacher, cannot know. The steps necessary to this condition, Pastor Russell declared, were (1) a hearty renouncing of sin and turning from it; (2) the acceptance of the Redeemer by faith and also his ransom sacrifice for the sins of the whole world; (3) the full consecration of their all to the Lord—followed by the begetting of the holy Spirit. These may have the fulness of joy possible now and absolute fulness of joy when they shall awake in the Redeemer's glorious likeness in the "first resurrection."

THUS VIEWING THE TEXT.

The Bible cannot be thoroughly understood except by those who recognize that God has two Israels—an earthly and a heavenly; and that the Scriptures frequently refer to both—"Jacob" always signifies natural Israel, as in Romans xi, 26, which foretells that as soon as spiritual Israel shall have been completed Divine mercy shall return to natural Israel and they will "obtain mercy through your mercy"—the mercy of the glorified Church.

As soon as this Gospel Age shall expire, with the completion of Spiritual Israel, the return of Natural Israel to Divine favor will be in order. Their Ancient Worthies will be resurrected as perfect men, and be the "princes in all the earth," the representatives of Messiah's spiritual and invisible Kingdom. Ultimately, all nations will be privileged to come into fellowship with God through Israel's New Covenant, by becoming Israelites indeed.

Thus Abraham's Seed shall ultimately be "like the stars of heaven," the Spiritual Seed, and "like the sands of the seashore," the natural seed. All of these, in proportion as they come into accord with the Redeemer and recognize their redemption and draw near to God in faith, obedience and prayer, will be liberated from the spirit of fear and bondage "into the glorious liberty of the children of God." First their minds will be freed from superstition and gradually, through the blessings of restitution, all the willing and obedient will return to full harmony with the Creator and full perfection in the world-wide Eden.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleriver, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. EMMA CHATEL, Valleyfield, Belleriver, Quebec.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R.F.D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, to cure female diseases.

WE judge others by what they do and get sore at them because they won't judge us by what we mean to do.

No man can tell in the morning which horse will win in the afternoon.

According to a woman, a newspaper is something a man uses to litter up the house with.

A neat housewife may be a pearl among women, but for solid comfort give a man a good cook.

OH WE KNEW THAT LONG AGO

It takes away the joy of living when a woman rushes over to tell her neighbor an exciting piece of news and finds the neighbor knew it three days ago.

If some women should suddenly stop scolding, their families would immediately call for the family physician.

The worst bore is the man with a very young get-rich-quick scheme.

A woman's idea of a good time is sitting in a rocking chair and telling her next door neighbor how perfectly frightful the new fall hat of the woman across the street is.

It may be neither artistic nor becoming, but if it is fashionable they all shell out the ducats for it.

Too Bad.

"Who is always up in the air?"

"Easy. The aviator."

"Well, here's another. What time is it with him?"

"What time is it?"

"Yes."

"Fly time."

The New Food.

That sharks are very good to eat
 The experts are declaring,
And soon mankind their juicy meat
 Will with himself be sharing.
And then upon the sandy shore
 The salty, sad eyed sinner
Will dip into the wave his oar
 And seize a shark for dinner.

List to the beef trust's doleful wail.
 This bully of the fishes
Will be yanked shoreward by the tail
 And served to dainty dishes.
The monster men, who have been living slim
 Since prices went the paces,
This monster's tail and fins will trim
 And feed their happy faces.

So like a fable or a screed story or a screed
 From those old ancient fables
Appears this tail that man indeed
 At last has turned the tables.
Instead of furnishing the meals
 When sharks would stay their hunger,
He serves them up himself and feels
 Thereby a few years younger.

This is what poets have declared
 The law of compensation.
The shark, who man has never spared,
 Will now be mankind's ration.
And won't it be revenge for fair
 With carving knife to strike it
And serve each hungry one his share
 If we can learn to like it?

THE SILENCE.

IT'S fearful when your loving wife
 Awaits you on the stairs
 And asks in biting accents
 The hows and whens and wheres,
But never this my feelings stirred
As when she never said a word.

And when your boss arraigns you
 In words that sting and smart
And things about your folly
 He tells you heart to heart
There's nothing that can make you crawl
As when he doesn't talk at all.

A man who loud assails you
 And brawling bawls you out
Is one to be avoided—
 A terror without doubt.
But dread the man who folds his paw
And never gives a word of jaw.

And take a babbling maiden
 Whose voice is all a-thrill.
She hales you to her tribute
 And bends you to her will.
But she will never hold her sway
Like one without a word to say.

We set some store by talkers
 And list their wondrous tales;
The chap with conversation
 The lagging hour regales.
But when we want a big thing swung
We choose a man who holds his tongue.

The moral's plain for all to read:
The doing man is what we need.

Poor Learner.

The negro boy was up for the fifth time on a charge of chicken stealing. This time the magistrate decided to appeal to the boy's father.

"Now, see here, Abe," said he to the darky, "this boy of yours has been up in court so many times for stealing chickens that I'm tired of seeing him here."

"Ah don't blame you, sah," returned the father. "Ah's tired o' seein' 'im here too."

"Then why don't you teach him how to act? Show him the right way and he won't be coming here."

"Ah has showed 'im de right way, sah," declared the old man earnestly. "Ah has suttenly showed 'im de right way, but he somehow keeps gettin' caught comin' way wid dose chickens!"—Central Law Journal.

It Might Have Happened Otherwise.

An old Pennsylvania German living in the mountains had a hard three hours' dusty walk to accomplish one morning, and he arose very early to make his start. He had gone but a little way when he was overtaken by an automobile, which was probably the first that had ever passed along that way. The driver picked up the old man, and they were at his destination in about twenty minutes.

"Danks so much awfully mit de ride. If I had known myself to be here already two hours in front of de clock yet I vud be at home fast asleep already to start unless I knew you vud not have picked me up since."—Housekeeper.

Frederick Mills Arrested.

This man says in a letter just received that his attention was arrested by the strong claims we made for Merrill's System Tonic as a positive cure for rheumatism, and after doctoring for seven years without any lasting benefit he was entirely cured with four boxes of Merrill's System Tonic. It never fails for it aids digestion, frees the system from uric acid and promotes regular healthy bowel and kidney action. If System Tonic could cure Frederick Mills, of Wheatley, Ont., it can surely cure you. Get it from your druggist. Price 50c. per box, 6 boxes for $2.50, or direct from The Merrill Medical Co., Merrill Building, Toronto.

GOVERNMENT BY A SMALL COMMISSION

Mr. Flint Tells of An Experiment In A United States City

HOW IT WORKS

Haverhill, Massachuesetts, Is Well Satisfied With The Result

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—There is no citizen who stands higher in the public esteem for business capacity and general intelligence than Mr. P. J. Smith, general manager of the Rolling Mills. The remark made by Mr. Smith, in his address at the public meeting, should sink deeply into the minds of tax payers. He said "that Belleville had run mad in the production of concrete sidewalks." This statement is painfully true. Miles of sidewalks, built by tax payers' money, have been constructed where there was little or no necessity for them. One cause for this is the fact that Councillors, jealous for the wards they represent, determine that their immediate supporters shall be cared for as well as resident of other wards. There is a danger to the city in the manner in which the necessary work of the city is performed. The Council is divided into committees. These committees do not brook interference with their prerogatives in an amicable manner. Councillors, generally, accept the reports of these committees, and do not enquire fully into the work which has been done by the committees. From this cause troubles arise. Something has been done by a committee to which the public sense objects. You ask a Councillor (not a member of the committee) why he allowed this matter to pass the Council without objection, and you will be informed that, as the committee had reported, they thought it was all right, and therefore did not object. If Councillors felt it to be a part of their duty to examine into the work done by the various committees, it might cause more labor, but it would give better satisfaction to their constituents, and such a course would be proper and what the citizens expect and desire. Mr. Smith expresed himself in accord with the views of the Property Owners' Association as regards municipal government by commission. The general public does not understand very well what this government means. I desire to bring before our citizens the case of a city which is now governed by commissions, in order to show what has been accomplished in one city. I regret that I shall be obliged to condense for lack of space.

Haverhill is a city of Massachusetts with 40,000 inhabitants. Socialists were in power for some years, but were finally ousted, and the business and conservative elements in the city began to look over the city to find out

STATUE TO WOLFE WAS UNVEILED

Monument To Famous Soldier Erected--Lord Roberts' Address

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Lord Roberts yesterday unveiled the statue to General Wolfe at Westerham, in Kent the birth place of the famous soldier. In his address he said that to Wolfe the Empire was indebted for the greatest of the British possessions. How Wolfe formed his daring plan and led his troops to victory on the Plains of Abraham was one of the brightest pages in the history of the Empire. It never lost its thrilling interest. The plan adopted was only justified by Wolfe's firm belief in the courage and discipline of the troops, and the same grand feeling was reciprocated toward their commander. No wonder, though mortally wounded, he was able to murmur, "I die content."

Among these present at the ceremony were Lord Strathcona and Sir Charles Tupper. Laurel wreaths, sent by Canadians resident in Britain, were laid on the monument.

BLOWN TO ATOMS BY DYNAMITE

Foreman At Corundum Works, Was The Victim Of The Blast

A man named Volkenstine, a foreman at the Craigmont Corundum Works in Renfrew County, near Bancroft, was blown to atoms by an explosion of dynamite yesterday, and another workman named Gracy received injuries which may prove fatal.

The men were working in the rock cut, and had set off a blast. One of the holes failed to explode, and the men returned too soon, and were standing immediately over the hole when the explosion took place.

Volkenstine's head was picked up some distance away, and this was the only part of the body found.

It doesn't pay to play truant from the school of experience.

TWO BANDITS ROB TRAIN PORTER KILLED ONE DYING

OGDEN, Utah, Jan. 3.—The Southern Pacific train No. 1, the Overland Limited, westbound, was held up by two masked bandits early this morning at Reese, nine miles west of Ogden.

William Davis, a negro porter, was shot and instantly killed, and A. W. Taylor, another porter, was mortally wounded. A passenger was slightly wounded.

One hundred passengers on the train were relieved of their valuables. The robbers did not attempt to enter the express car, but devoted their entire attention to the Pullmans, where they made a rich haul among the California bound passengers, holding the train for more than an hour. No passenger escaped the robbers, and the trainmen also lost their money and jewelry.

At 12.30 this morning Conductor Cunningham advised the superintendents of the hold-up, and posses left for the scene in automobiles and a special train.

RED LIGHT STOPPED TRAIN.

And the reason is the usual one. Two masked men stopped the train at the little watering station by throwing the red light on the signal stand toward the approaching locomotive. As it came to a standstill, the bandits covered the engineer and fireman with their revolvers, and held them until the conductor ran up to investigate the delay. He, too, was placed under guard.

One of the robbers left the trainmen in charge of his companion and started through the train from the forward end. He encountered two porters on his way, and when they disregarded his commands, he shot them. A curious passenger was also wounded.

When the robber appeared with an open sack and a menacing pistol, the passengers were perfectly willing to contribute his collection.

HELD UP GIRLS, TOO.

About four miles from Reese, they met two girls who were returning home from a dance. One of the robbers very politely requested them to hand over their pursesand to "beat it."

After robbing the two girls, the daughters of Bishop Wayment, of the Mormon Church at Warren, the highwaymen drove toward the city.

This is the second train robbery occurring within ten miles of Ogden in the last six months.

BATTLING WITH ANARCHISTS IN LONDON, ENGLAND

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 4.—It was on Friday night, Dec. 16, that the first battle between the police and alien burglars took place, resulting in three officers being killed and two seriously wounded, while one burglar was killed. The shooting followed the attempt of the police to round up the burglars who had been engaged in driving a tunnel from the house in which they lived in Houndsditch towards a jeweller's shop in the rear in which $100,000 worth of stock was carried. The house had been occupied three weeks before, but the only occasion on which the mysterious tenants were seen was when, each morning, a woman removed the shutters from the windows. This secretiveness aroused the suspicions of the police. At 9 p.m., on the Friday night, a neighbor heard noises at the back of the building, and notified the police, who prepared to raid the premises known as 71 Exchange Building.

SERGEANT SHOT.

Sergeant Bentley, with Constable Martin, knocked at the door. The door was opened by a foreigner, who was asked by Bentley: "Are you working late here to-night?" And on the man shaking his head asked: "Is there nobody here who understands English?" "Oh, ha, Engleesh," said the man. "Stairs, oop the stairs."

Bentley, followed by Martin, ran up the stairs towards a door on the landing which stood ajar. Just as the two officers were near the stair-top the door in front of them was pulled a little wider open and two shots rang out. Bentley staggered and fell, knocking down Martin, who was behind him. This fact undoubtedly saved the latter, for as he fell another shot was fired, the bullet striking the floor at the bottom of the stairs close beside Martin's shoulder. At the same time a revolver fire was opened from the windows and the police in the street.

Two of the burglars made their escape to the street, holding their pursuers off with their weapons. A third man was found fatally wounded in a house in Whitechapel, while a young Russian Jewess, who alleged she did not know the man who had been brought into the rooms, was found destroying letters and papers. As London police do not ordinarily carry revolvers, the man must have been accidentally shot by one of his pals.

BOMB PLANT.

It was only last week, while searching rooms that had been occupied by suspects, that the police came across a plant for the manufacture of bombs.

The weapons used against the police were heavy Browning magazine revolvers, as supplied to German army officers, and which carry one of the heaviest pistol bullets known.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S BEST POLICY IS ALLIANCE WITH CANADA

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The Tribune has the following cable from London:—

In a leading article on the Newfoundland fisheries question, the Morning Post says that if there is now to be a settement, it will not come out of the recent award, but out of the different temper which has marked the attitude of both the people of Newfoundland and the United States. Newfoundlanders have learned by bitter experience that, unsupported by Canada, they cannot coerce the United States if only because a "lone hand" policy cannot attract the sympathy of any imperial government.

DIFFERENT POLICIES.

Further the weakness of Sir Robert Bond's campaign was its avowed objective treaty, drafted some years ago, but destroyed then by the American Senate, giving the trade of the United States preference against the Empire. His successor, Sir Edward Morris, has talked instead of strengthening the colony's trade relations with the mother country.

That change of attitude has doubtless been noted by the American Government, which in any case, is anxious, on domestic grounds, to make a show of lowering the tariff. About a fortnight ago it was reported that the United States had relaxed their customs regulations for the benefit of Newfoundland fish, which was regarded as an overture.

ALLIANCE WITH CANADA.

Of course the United States would be very glad if it could bring Canada and Newfoundland together in some fiscal arrangement, which would forestall the British policy of imperial reciprocity, but to Englishmen and to the Empire generally, the brighter aspect of the situation is a possibility that now Newfoundland may ally herself with Canada and make the British preference the cornerstone of her tariff system.

APPLICATIONS EXCEEDED $15,000,000.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 3.—"The favorable conditions in Canada during the year just passed are fairly indicated by the great record shown by the Great West Life Assurance Company in securing a larger amount of business in Canada in 1910 than ever previously written in a year by any company. The total applications received exceed fifteen millions and the business in force is over fifty-six millions."

In the list of Christmas gifts received at the House of Refuge there should be two handsome plants from the Women's Chrisian Temperance Union.

WILL RUSH WORK TO PUGET SOUND

Contracts Awarded For the Island Section of Canadian Northern

The contracts for the building of the Island section of the Canadian Northern, which embraces the whole of Vancouver Island, were let yesterday and construction work will be started at once. Sir Donald D. Mann stated that the work as at present mapped out and which would be pushed to a conclusion, had for its object the extension of the line to Puget Sound. Sir Donald had no hesitation in saying that the successful tenderers for this work were Mackenzie and Mann, although he was free to state that he was not then in official possession of the final awards; this branch of the business being left to Mr. Holt.

Sir Donald would not say nay to the proposition that the entire section as far as Alberni would be under construction by the end of this year.

The railway company is now preparing for an early start on the numerous tunnels to be driven along the banks of the Fraser and the Thomson rivers between Yale and Kamloops which aggregate 2 1-4 miles. These tunnels range from 700 to 2,700 feet. It is expected to work three shifts and bore from each end and over two years will be required for the work.

POLICE NOTES.

Whilst the police made no arrests last night they answered two calls which fortunately were not of a serious nature.

In their rounds last night the police found the front door of a business place on Front street insecure and two back doors of business places unlocked.

RUFFIANLY CONDUCT

Aged [Gentleman Assaulted And Threatened By Young Man

Before Magistrate Masson this morning three cases were brought up and disposed of.

DOG CASE.

Samuel McBrien was accused of the theft of a hound belonging to Mr. John Thatcher, of this city. The accused testified that he found the dog wandering about the street here and shipped it to Cobourg, where on Monday he intended to hunt for foxes. His intention was to return the dog to the city. The case was finally settled by McBrien paying all costs incurred in the matter. Mr. Anderson for Crown and Mr. Carnew for the accused.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT.

Wesley Merrett and E. P. Burnett on Saturday afternoon last acted in a disorderly manner on Front Street. For their fun, as they termed it, they had to contribute $5 each to the city treasury.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Mayor Marsh has illustrated to a nicety how the galled jade winces.

There are eleven new members in the City Council, and they are not likely to disappoint the public expectation of a clean sweep.

The Property Owners' Association was not formed a day too soon. Its membership ought to be largely increased in the near future.

Are all who are opposed to Mayor Marsh in municipal affairs to be classed as "Tories?" That is what he charges. If so, the Conservative party will receive a great accession to its membership in this city.

Ex-Warden Buchanan of Oxford County has been compelled to disgorge some of his grafting commissions. How much worse was he than the man who paid the commission to secure an order? They were two of a kind.

Another strike failure.—A struggle of over thirteen weeks' duration between employers and employees in the plumbers' trade in Montreal has been brought to an end. The men's return to work is an unconditional surrender.

"Chicago bandits hold up a policeman," is a headline in a western paper. The other day thieves stole the furnishings of the Chicago Police Chief's automobile. The way thieves abuse those poor Chicago policemen is something scandalous. Next thing we will hear of some wholesale kidnapping of Chicago policemen unless steps are taken for their protection.

The reports of traffic through the Sault Ste. Marie locks for the past season has been the largest in the history of the lake trade. The total freight movement to and from Lake Superior for 1910 was 62,363,218 net tons. The increase over 1907, the largest previous year's record, was 1,116,041 tons.

Private corporations are reported to be securing every available hydro-electrical site on the Winnipeg River below Lac du Bonnett and Point du Bois, where the city is just completing its $2,000,000 power plant. The activity of these companies is exciting much interest in the city, as it looks like a plan to underbid the city on the sale of surplus power. Is not Tim Conmee at the root of this speculation?

Le Devoir, a French paper, printed in Montreal, points out that the Government organs in Quebec are contractors with both the Government at Ottawa, and that at Quebec, and that they receive large sums in that capacity. Le Canada, of Montreal, it says, has been paid $137,000 by the Gouin Administration during the past four and a half years on account of printing. The same paper has been paid by the Laurier Government with equal liberality. This is the way these papers are kept alive.

London is a larger city than New York, yet in the past 12 months only 19 murders were committed in London to 185 in New York. Such an enormous discrepancy is hard to explain. New York has a larger and more varied foreign population in proportion to its size, yet London has a large foreign contingent. Possibly the explanation may be the fact that English justice is quicker and surer than ours and also that the spirit of regard for law is stronger in London than in New York.—Rochester Times.

A Canadian lawyer tells this story: A bailiff went to levy on the contents of a house. The inventory began in the attic and ended in the cellar. When the dining room was reached the tally of furniture ran thus.

One dining room table, oak.
One set chairs (6), oak.
Two bottles whiskey, full.

Then the word "full" was stricken out and replaced by "empty," and the inventory went on in a hand that straggled and luched diagonally across the page until it closed with:

One revolving door mat.

The west has been more than generous with cold waves this season, as witness the following record of zero weather here: Dec. 8th, zero; Dec. 9th, 4 below zero; Dec. 10th, 6 below zero; Dec. 11th, zero; Dec. 12th, zero; Dec. 21st, 4 below zero; Dec. 22nd, 16 below zero; Dec. 31st, 20 below zero; Jan. 4th, 10 below zero. That beats all records up to date.

The most interesting discovery for a long time has been made at Pompeii. Workmen who were digging for the foundation of a new building outside the area of the buried city found the body of a woman, which had been petrified. Both the hands were full of jewels. Evidently the woman fled from the eruption that overwhelmed Pompeii, carrying her valuables, and was buried in the downpour. The jewels are excellently preserved, they having been protected from the ashes and lava by the body. They consist of bracelets, necklaces, rings, amulets studded with gems, and a pair of earrings which are probably unique. They may be the most valuable specimens of ancient jewelry ever discovered. Each earring contains twenty-one perfect pearls, set in gold, in imitation of a bunch of grapes.

BAILEY-BARTLETT

Quiet Ceremony Took Place At Beamsville, Ontario, On Christmas Day

BAILEY—BARTLETT.

A very quiet Xmas wedding was solemnized at the house of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Bartlett, Brixton Farm, Beamsville, on Friday, Dec. 30th, at 10 a. m., when their eldest daughter, Esther Trith, and Mr. Herman Bailey, graduate of Albert College, Belleville in 1907, were united in the holy bands of matrimony by Rev. T. E. Macleod of Beamsville. The bride who was given away by her father, looked charming in her bridal dress of white silk with veil fastened with orange blossoms. She was attended by her sister, Miss Emma Bartlett, dressed in white silk. Mr. Herbert Bartlett, cousin of the bride, attended the groom. The young couple left immediately after dinner by train for Toronto and Ottawa, being accompanied to the station by guests and friends, who showered confetti and good wishes. The bride travelled in a blue suit with hat of Kings' blue. On their return from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey will reside in their home in Saskatchewan.

HOME JOURNAL—MID-WINTER FICTION.

A roaring fire, a comfortable chair, a magazine, and let the weather outside be what it will it cannot spoil a winter evening's enjoyment.

January number of Canadian Home Journal contains a number of stories that will make the evening pass all too quickly. "The Onfarnal Sarpant" is an amusing character sketch of a happy-go-lucky Irish family.

Western girls learn self-dependence, to decide quickly and act promptly. It would not be possible for Gertrude Powell to remain inactive when Jack Sprague was in trouble and lying witnesses testified against him. What she did is told in "The Law and the Lady," by Mabel M. Clement.

Grace E. Denison (Lady Gay) in "An After Dinner Sensation," tells of the very light coffin and the lady who enjoyed life many years after she was thought to have been buried and who very effectually repaid old scores. "Jeanne of the Marshes," the serial by E. Phillip Oppenheim, is maintaining interest. There is a mystery suggested but what?

All Canadians will be interested in the work of the Hamilton chapter of "Daughters of the Empire" which is typical of the activities of this organization throughout Canada.

THEY MADE MERRY

Members of Oxford Lodge Had Time of Their Lives Last Night

A function of joy and pleasure was experienced last night at Oxford Lodge No. 17 Sons of England. District Deputy Supreme President Bro. J. A. Vickers paid an official visit and installed the officers for the ensuing term.

After the meeting was over the members retired to the dining hall, where they partook of everything that was good. They they returned to their lodge room, where District Deputy Vickers kept the members in roars of laughter for a time with his funny jokes and speeches. Songs were then sung by Bros. Vickers, Cunningham, Hines, Batchelor, Carter, Kalls, Parmenter, Longden, Foldwell, and an excellent patriotic speech was delivered by Bro. Dr. Platt. All the members declared that they had the time of their lives, and after singing the National Anthem the enjoyment was brought to a close by the company wishing each other a Happy New Year, and three cheers for the King were given.

Bro. Thomas Rainbird occupied the chair.

WEDDED AT CORBYVILLE

Pretty Matrimonial Event Was Celebrated at Mrs. S. Chambers' House

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. S. Chambers, Corbyville, on the evening of Dec. 26th, when her daughter, Clara Loretta, was united in holy wedlock to Mr. Francis R. Hicks, also of Corbyville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. A. Kemp, of Cannifton. The bride, who was unattended, was very daintily attired in pale blue voile.

After the ceremony had been performed a bountiful wedding dinner was partaken of and the happy evening was spent with instrumental music, songs, etc.

A large number of beautiful presents was received by the bride. After a short wedding trip the young couple will make their home on the groom's farm, 5th concession of Thurlow.

More Light Wanted

A simple question by a correspondent has led to the unveiling of transactions by civic officials which, to the mind of all right thinking people, are not in accord with their duties as trustees of city property. The one inquiry has led to others, not perhaps of so serious a character, but of sufficient importance to justify inquiry and investigation. Among them is that put by a correspondent signing himself "Citizen." This gentleman, whoever he is, wants "the "inside of the transfer of the late "Water Works Company plant to the "city shown up." Certainly, Mr. citizen, if you know of any grafting, boodling or other wrongs being done by officials or others in connection with that transaction, turn the limelight on it, and let the people know what it is. We confess our want of knowledge of the terms of the sale and purchase of that property, but venture the opinion that those, now alive, who were parties to the transaction will court the fullest investigation. Let's have the facts, if there are any.

While "Citizen" is on his fishing expedition, would it not be well for him to demand a "showing up" and the letting in of a little "limelight" upon the secret history of a certain gas plant purchase by an Alderman?

It might also be of interest, while he is at it, to ascertain whether certain work was not done in one shop and the account sent in for payment in the name of another shop. Such is the rumor upon the streets.

Then, again, rumor says that a certain Alderman's team, or one in which he was interested, found employment, while other teams were idle. Let's have a thorough cleaning out of the Augean stable; the stench has become so strong as to be offensive.

What charlatans there are in the world, and Citizen seems to be a near relative of that class of people. His attempt to divert thinking people from the wrongs which have been brought to light by throwing out insinuations that others had done wrong is evidence of his close relationship to the class of character referred to.

This, unfortunately, is an age in which official misdoing has been rampant. If there was anything dishonest on the part of the Aldermen or officials at the time the transaction referred to by "Citizen," let it come to light. You seem to know something about a wrong doing; if so, do not hide your light under a bushel. Out with it. Or is it an insinuation thrown out to cover up that which has been exposed? That is the impression left upon the minds of thinking people.

Vain Imaginings

Following is the Montreal Herald's report of the interview given to it by Mayor Marsh, to which reference was made in yesterday's Intelligencer:—

"I have got nothing to say except that I have not done anything I am ashamed of," said Mr. L. W. Marsh to The Herald this morning on being told of the resolution passed against him in Belleville last night.

Mr. Marsh, who is the Mayor of Belleville, and is attending the Commercial Travellers' convention here was contemptuous in his references to the graft charges.

"I am the Liberal head of a Conservative administration," he explained, "and the idea is to check any career I might have in provincial or federal politics. Some time ago I notified both papers in Belleville that, owing to military and business duties, I would not again be a mayoralty candidate, but Harry Corby, my accuser, has his own candidate for the office, and I suppose that this is part of his campaign. I am not built the way to graft a few hundred dollars from the city. I can make more money in my own business than by disposing of town lots.

"There were a little over two acres of town lots that reverted to the town as the result of litigation and the only offer we received for them was from a man named Phillips, who was also a party to the litigation. He wanted to get them for $15 a lot, when the taxes were then $18. Furthermore, if he had bought the whole property he could have got a farmer's assessment and depreciated their value. The town asked $25 and Phillips refused to pay that much. One of my relatives bought, in an ordinary manner, four lots at this figure and three at a much higher one. Relatives of Mr. David Price bought perhaps an equal number. Two lots bought by a member of my family have been sold at a profit, but there was nothing except an ordinary business transaction, the town having been saddled with the lots for ten or twelve years.

"The Property Owners' Association that instigated the meeting of last night is not a representative body but merely some residents of Front Street, who organized themselves against the laying down of a permanent asphalt pavement on that street. The matter does not affect me, as I certainly shall not run again, and am not ashamed of my past record."

Mr. Marsh's assertion that the Property Owners' Association is a political organization which was organized for the purpose of checking his political progress has been properly characterized as a mere piece of fiction. If his career has been checked he himself is alone responsible, and if he imagines that he is the head of the Liberal party in Belleville he will have to number that belief among his other mistakes.

where they were. The inspection was discouraging. Names of men of business capacity and ability were conspicuously absent from the City Council. Men of no business training, of no occupation, save that of ward heelers, political tricksters camp followers, unused to large matters in handling property or funds men, some of whom were looked upon with suspicion as probable grafters These were the men who controlled the city's finances and controlled the expenditure and public improvements. For five years the people endured Councils of the above complexion. Each year piled up its deficit until, at the end of 1908, the deficit amounted to $160,000. One of the last acts of the old administration was to issue $40,000 of bonds, the proceeds of which were to be used for current expenses. This issue wiped out the last cent of the city's bonding capacity, just as Belleville has struck the last mill permitted by the law, for municipal taxation. The December bills of Haverhill were refused payment by the City Treasurer for the reason that there were no funds, or means of raising funds Something had to be done. The President of Harvard University addressed an immense audience upon government by commission. An association of citizens was formed to examine into the question. Charters of various cities were examined. In 1909 the bill became law by vote of the people. By the charter all administrative functions are vested in a single board, called the Municipal Council composed of the Mayor and four aldermen. All members are elected for two years, two members one year and three members the following year. All are salaried. All members of the Council are elected at large, without reference to ward lines. Official orders are passed by the affirmative votes of three members of the Council, the Mayor having the right to vote, but no veto.

All meetings are open to the public. Detailed itemized statements of receipts and expenditures are to be published at the end of each month Submission of the books and accounts of the city are to be submitted to expert outside accountants each year at its close. There are the following departments: Accounts and finances streets and highways, public safety and charity, public property. The results accomplished in Haverhill under the commission have been: (1) The application of business methods to city affairs; (2) Fixing of responsibility for municipal administration; (3) A system of permanent street construction and improvement work (4) The securing of personal supervision over departments by men making themselves familiar with details, saving a large per centage in municipal purchasing; (5) A substantial surplus at the end of each year instead of a large deficit. In this city of Haverhill order has been produced out of chaos. A handsome surplus each year, and almost universal satisfaction with the result. A number of Canadian cities, such as Guelph and Edmonton, are now governed most satisfactorily by commissions This system may not be applicable to Belleville, but Haverhill is an object lesson well worthy of study.

Yours truly,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

And leave my troubles all behind
By picking from their list.

And land him on his feet.

So over in my mind I turn
Each project in and out,

Lie wide on every hand
That really I'm distracted quite.

If you suffer from backache like Mr. W. M. Ferguson, of Indian Head, Sask., don't wait until you are laid off work before you give the matter attention. My limbs and feet were very much swollen, and I also had severe headaches occasionally. On learning of Booth's Kidney Pills, I procured a box and found them a fine remedy. The pains and aches have left my back, and it has been greatly strengthened. The swelling in my limbs and feet have also disappeared, and I have not had a headache since. I am very much pleased to recommend this remedy."

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

The little apartment, like every part of the building, save the rooms reserved by Brand's directions was packed almost to suffocation. This, if harmful in one respect, was beneficial in another. The mere animal warmth of so many human beings was grateful after the freezing effect of the gale on people literally soaked to the skin.

The girl, not unmoved by curiosity, held the light so that it illumined Mrs. Vansittart. A woman of forty, no matter how good-looking and well-preserved she may be, is in a sorry plight under such conditions. Constance saw a beautiful face, deathly white and haggard, yet animated and clearly chiseled. The eyes were large and lustrous, the mouth firm, the nose and chin those of a Greek statue. Just now there were deep lines across the base of the high forehead. The thin lips, allied to a transient hawk-like gleam in the prominent eyes, gave a momentary glimpse of a harsh, perhaps cruel disposition. A charming smile promptly dispelled this fleeting impression. Instantly Constance was aware of having seen Mrs. Vansittart before. So vivid was the fanciful idea that she became tongue-tied.

"Do you want me?" asked the stranger, with a new interest, and still smiling. Constance found herself wondering if the smile were not cultivated to hide that faintly caught suggestion of the bird of prey. But the question restored her mental poise.

"Only to say that Mr. Pyne—" she began.

"Charlie! Is he saved?"

Mrs. Vansittart certainly had the faculty of betraying intense interest. The girl attributed the nervous start, the quick color which tinged the white cheeks, to the natural anxiety of a woman who stood in such approximate degree of kin to the young American.

"Oh, yes," said the girl, with ready sympathy. "Don't you know that all of you owe your lives to his daring? He asked me to—to say he was all right, and—that he hoped you were not utterly collapsed."

The addendum was a kindly one. No doubt, Mr. Pyne had meant her to convey such a message. Mrs. Vansittart, it was evident, had received a shock. Perhaps she was a timorous shrinking woman, averse to the sudden stare of others.

"I know nothing," she murmured. "It was all so horrible. Oh, God! Shall I ever forget that scene in the saloon. How the people fought. They were not human. They were tigers, fierce tigers, with the howls and the baleful eyes of wild beasts."

This outburst was as unexpected as her staccato question. Constance bent over her and placed a gentle hand on her forehead.

"You must try to forget all that," she said, soothingly. "Indeed, it must have been very terrible. It was dreadful enough for us, looking down at things through a mist of foam. For you— But there! You are one of the few who escaped. That is everything. God has been very good to you!"

She was stooping low and holding the lantern in her left hand.

Suddenly, Mrs. Vansittart's eyes gleamed again with that lambent light so oddly at variance with her smile. The slight flush of excitement yielded to a ghostly pallor. With surprising energy she caught the girl's arm.

"Who are you?" she whispered. "Tell me, child, who are you?"

"My father is the lighthouse-keeper," said Constance. "I am here quite by chance. I—"

"But your name! What is your name?"

"Constance Brand."

"Brand, did you say? And your father's name?"

"Stephen Brand. Really, Mrs. Vansittart, you must try to compose yourself. You are over-wrought, and—"

She was about to say "feverish." Indeed, that was a mild word. The strange glare in Mrs. Vansittart's eyes amazed her. She shrank away but only for an instant. With a deep sigh, the lady sank back on the pillow and fainted.

Constance was then frightened beyond question. She feared that the seizure might be a serious one, under the circumstances. To her great relief, another woman, who could not help overhearing the conversation and witnessing its sequel, came to the rescue.

"Don't be alarmed," she said. "Mrs. Vansittart is very highly strung. She fainted in the saloon. She does not realize that Mr. Pyne not only saved her, but nearly every woman here, when the door was broken open. Now, don't you worry, my dear, I will look after her. You have a great deal to do, I am sure."

Constance realized that the advice was good. She could not attend to one and neglect many.

Telling the women of the plan to dry their under-clothing in sections, she asked them to help her by arranging matters so that their garments should be divided into lots. Then she went to the second bedroom and made the same suggestion. The case of the sufferers in the hospital required more drastic measures. The little girl she stripped with her own hands and clothed her in one of Brand's flannel shirts and a commandeered reefer jacket.

Two of Brand's spare suits and a couple of blankets enabled the two injured women, who were able to walk, to get rid of their wet garments in the crowded room beneath, and the lockers of Jackson and Bates made it possible for the men who most needed attention to be made comfortable by the invaluable hospital orderly.

Constance was kept busy flying up and down to the kitchen, whilst Enid, having met all immediate demands in the matter of a hot beverage and something to eat, supplemented her labors.

Pyne worked like a Trojan. As each pile of sodden garments was delivered to him he squeezed out as much water as possible with his hands and then applied himself to the task of baking them dry. He did this, too, in a very efficient way, speedily converting the kitchen into a miniature Turkish bath. At the end of an hour, he had succeeded so well that more than one-half of the females were supplied with tolerably dry and warm under-clothing. With their heavier garments, of course, nothing could be done.

Once, on the stairs, Enid detained Constance for a moment's chat.

"Mrs. Vanisttart is odd," she said.

Constance, so taken up was she with many errands, had forgotten the lady.

"How thoughtless of me," she cried. "Is she better?"

"Yes. But when I went in just now to give her her clothes, she said to me: 'Are you the sister of the other—of Constance Brand?' It was no time for explanations, so I just said 'Yes.' She gave me such a queer look, and then smiled quite pleasantly, apologizing for troubling me."

Constance laughed.

"Perhaps she knew dad years ago," she said.

"What do you think Mr. Pyne said about her?"

"How can I tell? Did you speak of her to him?"

"I told him she had fainted when you delivered his message. He said: 'Guess she can faint as easy as I can fall off a house.' Isn't he funny?"

"I think he is splendid," said Constance.

The wreck was now wholly demolished. The first big wave of the retreating tide enveloped the lighthouse and smote it with thunderous silence. Screams came from the women's quarters.

"Go, Enid," said Constance. "Tell them they have nothing to fear. They must expect these things to happen for nearly two hours. Tell them what dad said. Twenty-five years, you know."

Brave hearts! What infinite penetration inspired the man who first said "Noblesse oblige!"

Constance looked in at the kitchen. Pyne loomed through a fog of steam.

"Pay no heed to these—" she was interrupted by another mighty thump and cataract roar—"these blows of Thor's hammer," she cried.

"Play me for an anvil," he returned.

She descended to the depths, to reassure the men. Talking with shrill cheerfulness at each doorway was easy. It helped her to go down, down, feeling stone and iron trembling as every surge was hurled many feet above her head. At last, she stood on the lowest floor. Beneath her feet was naught but granite and iron bars. Here was solidity. How grateful to know of this firm base, rooted in the very world. Her heart leaped to her mouth, but not with fear. She was proud of the lighthouse, strong in the knowledge of its majestic strength.

Nevertheless, in this place, the source of her own sense of security, she found uneasiness among the men. They were all sailors in this lowest habitable region. Their pre-conceived ideas had been rudely reversed. The ship, the noble structure which defied the storm by yielding to its utmost fury, had for them no terrors. But the stark pillar which flinched from no assault bewildered them. It was impossible to believe that it could withstand the strain. Ha! Listen to that. The battering-ram of ocean applied to a thin shaft of stone. Surely it must be pounded into fragments.

Said one, with indefinite bellow amidst the black turmoil: "I can't stand this, mates."

"Up aloft for me!" cried another.

"Let's die with our eyes open, anyhow," chimed in a third.

But a light flashed in the rolling orbs of the man who was already on the stairs. Astounded, he drew back. Constance stood in their midst, a mere girl, radiant, smilingly unconcerned, addressing them in calm wards, broken only by the fitful noises.

"Sorry your quarters—so very unpleasant. Only last a—couple of hours. Twenty-five years—far worse gales. Want any more cocoa?"

"Thank you kindly, miss, we're quite comfortable." This from the man who wished to die with his eyes open.

"Please, miss, may we smoke?" said he who couldn't stand it.

Constance hesitated. Blithely unconscious that a whiff of mutiny had swept through the storm-tossed fold, she pondered the problem. She saw no harm in it.

"Yes," she said. "Smoke by all means. I will ask my father, and if it should be dangerous I will come back and let you know. In a few hours it will be daylight, and if the sea falls he will come and open the door."

By sheer inspiration she had uttered the formula destined to annihilate the necromantic bluster of the hammering waves. Open the door! So this ponderous racket was a mere tidal trick, a bogey, which each passing minute would expose more thoroughly.

"All right, miss, an' Gawd bless yer," growled one who had not spoken hitherto. There was a chorus of approval. Constance gave a little gulp. The cultured and delicate lady lying in the bunk above had not spoken so.

"Indeed," she gasped. "God has blessed some of us this night."

Then she fled, further utterance failing her.

Nearer the sky, Brand tended the lamp and discussed matters with chief officer Emmett. The sailor, with the terse directness of his class, told how the Chinook had made an excellent voyage from New York until she ran into bad weather about four hundred miles west of the Lizard.

"It seems to me," he said, "as if we dropped onto the track of that hurricane after it had curved away to the norrard, and that the d——d thing swooped down on us again when we were abreast of the Bishop Light."

Brand nodded. This surmise agreed with his own theory of the storm, as indicated by the sea.

Mr. Emmett held out a clenched fist with thumb jerked towards the reef.

"I wouldn't breathe a word if he wasn't gone," he said, "but the old man was drivin' her too hard. I knew it, an' the chief knew it"—he meant the chief engineer—"but he wouldn't listen to either Mac or me. Fact is, he was fair crazy to set up a new record for the boat. She's been crossin' the Atlantic forty times a year for upwards of twenty years, and the recent alterations, although they added fifty feet to her length, only increased her engine-power in proportion."

"You surprise me," broke in Brand. "You speak as if the Chinook were nearly as old as this lighthouse, yet I have never even heard her name before."

"You know her well enough all the same," said the other ruefully. "This is her maiden voyage since she was altered: an' they rechristened her, too—always a d——d unlucky thing to do, I say. Bless your heart, man, she is the old Princess Royal. Eh? What's that?"

He guffawed mournfully at Brand's involuntary exclamation.

"Certain! Well, surely I ought to know. I have passed most of my service with the company, in her, and when I took a crew to Cramp's to navigate her to New York after she was smartened up I little imagined I would see her laid by forever the next time we saw the lights of Old England. My goodness, even what was left of the old girl ought to know her way better'n that."

"But what did really happen?"

"Drivin' her I tell you—drivin' her full pelt to land the mails at Southampton twelve hours ahead of schedule. With that awful sea liftin' her, and a shaft twenty feet longer, what could you expect? Poor Perkins! A rare hard worker, too. Now he's gone down with the ship an' over two hundred passengers an' crew."

"Judging by the number saved I feared that more were lost."

"It's the off season, you know. The passenger list was light. For the Lord's sake, think of what it might have been in May or June!"

"It is bad enough as it is. All has not ended with the disappearance of the vessel."

The sailor shot a sharp glance at Brand.

"You can't be thinkin' anyone was to blame—" he commenced. But Brand waved aside the fancied imputation.

"Blame!" he said. "With a broken shaft! In that whirlwind! No, no. I sent for you to talk over the new difficulty which has to be faced. There are food, water and fuel here for three men for two months. If you do a little sum you will find that the available stores on the basis of full rations will maintain eighty-one people for two days and a quarter."

"But we're only six miles from the mainland." Mr. Emmett had not yet grasped the true meaning of the figures.

"I have been here more than once for six weeks at a stretch, when, for all the assistance we could receive we might as well have been within the Arctic Circle."

Again the sailor jerked his thumb towards the reef.

"Is it as bad as all that?" he queried anxiously.

"Yes."

"But six weeks. Good Lord!" Mr. Emmett had done the little sum.

"That is exceptional. A week is the average unless the unexpected happens, after a gale like this. And a week will test our endurance to the limit."

Mr. Emmett whistled softly. A grisly phantom was creeping at him. He shivered, and not from cold.

"By Jove!" he said. "What's to be done?"

"In the first place, you must help me to maintain iron discipline. To leave the rock to-day or to-morrow will be an absolute impossibility. On the next day, with luck and a steady moderation of the weather, we may devise some desperate means of landing all the active men or getting fresh supplies. That is in the hands of Providence. I want you to warn your officers, and others whom you can trust, either sailors or civilians. Better arrange three watches. My daughters will have charge of the stores. By going through the lists in the store-room I can portion out the rations for six days. I think we had better fix on that minimum."

"Of course I will back you up in every way," said Mr. Emmett, who felt chillier at this moment than at any time during the night. "I know you are acting wisely, but I admit I am scared at the thought of what may happen—if those days pass and no help is available."

Brand knew what would happen, and it was hard to lock the secret in his heart. He alone must live. That was essential, the one thing carved in stone upon the tablets of his brain, a thing to be fought out behind barred door, revolver in hand.

Whatever else took place, if men and women, perhaps his own sweet girls, were dying of thirst and starvation, the light must shine at night over its allotted span of the slumbering sea. There, on the little table beside him, lay the volume of Rules and Regulations. What did it say?

"The keepers, both principal and assistant, are enjoined never to allow any interests, whether private or otherwise, to interfere with the discharge of their public duties, the importance of which to the safety of navigation cannot be overrated."

There was no ambiguity in the words, no halting sentence which opened a way for a man to plead: "I thought it best." Those who framed the rule meant what they said. No man could bend the steel of their intent.

To end the intolerable strain of his thoughts Stephen Brand forced his lips to a thin smile and his voice to say harshly:

"If the worst comes to the worst, there are more than three thousand gallons of colza oil in store. That should maintain life. It is a vegetable oil."

Then Constance thrust her glowing face into the lighted area.

"Dad," she cried, cheerfully, "the men wish to know if they may smoke. Poor fellows! They are so miserable—so cold and damp and dreary down there. Please say 'Yes.'"

Getting Along.

The hope to be a millionaire
And live a life of ease
Keeps pushing us to stint our fare
And every cent to squeeze.
When we arrive at that estate
And have a bunch of dough,
At every alleyway and gate
The money we will throw.

But now we have to pinch a dime
Until the lady there
Declares such treatment is a crime
And more than she can bear.
We sock a dollar in the sock
And put the sock away;
We save our money by the clock
For that eventful day.

Alas, how seldom we attain
The grand exalted height
Where common people try to gain
The checks that we may write.
Some crooked sharper comes along,
With smooth and oily tongue,
We listen to his siren song
And that's where we are stung.

The wisest one is he who spends Enough from his supply
To keep things going at both ends
And lay a little by,
Whose nimble purse strings are released
At call of child and wife,
Who knows that money is the least
That one may get from life.

A Cautious Sport.

"I know it," said the man.

"And through crowded streets."

"I know it."

"Then how do you expect him to make it in three minutes?"

"I don't or I wouldn't have made him the offer."

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

SAVAGES AND WHALERS

THEY WERE THE SUBJECTS OF W. L. ALLARDYCE IN FIJI.

Pro-Consul Who Is Now British Governor of the Falkland Islands, Stopped Man-Eating to Avoid Appearing on the Menu as a Piece de Resistance—Left Tropics to Serve Flag on Edge of Antarctic.

Twenty-five years in the south sea islands and six years on the border of the Antarctic are enough to fill a person with a desire to see something of the rest of the world, and that is possibly one reason why W. L. Allardyce, his Majesty's governor of the Falkland Islands, is making a tour of the world.

From 1789, when he first went out to the south seas as a junior clerk, until 1904 Governor Allardyce spent most of his time in the various islands in the Pacific, notably in Samoa, Tonga and the Fijis.

"I first went to the Fijis when King Thakombar was alive," said Governor Allardyce recently. "He was the original 'king of the cannibal isles' who has been sung about. Thakombar was a tall man with a big white beard, and his hands were so big that if you put one of yours in his it would disappear. He always wore the native garb, somewhat modified, for he insisted upon the white shirt of civilization and a necktie, which first he wore tucked into a kilt of native cloth. His legs were bare. He also wore a headdress of some kind of white or smoked native cloth.

"Thakombar always insisted upon the observance of the outward forms of respect. As a rule, the native Fijian doffs his headdress when he comes into the presence of a higher chief, but this was not enough for Thakombar. The man who met the king on the road had to sit down in the road and clap his hands or smite his thighs and shout 'Woh, woh!'

"The missionaries thought the Fijians were civilized in that early day, and the natives had nominally accepted Christianity, but as late as 1894 they were not up to all the forms of Christianity and civilization, for they were still eating one another. In that year, however, it was stopped by force.

"There had been an outbreak in the interior. I was native minister at the time and with the governor, some 2,000 native allies and a few hundred of our own men went up and called upon the cannibals to give up those of their number who had not long before eaten two native missionaries.

"To our amazement the leaders replied that if we did not go away they would put the governor and myself in the oven also. We tried to call them to reason, but they would not entertain our truce envoys. Finally we had to attack them. We captured some 200 of them in the fight, and the licking they got taught them we meant what we said, and there has been no more man-eating since then.

"In the early eighties there were not more than 1,500 white men in all the islands. They were mostly Anglo-Saxons, some being Americans. The white population of the country is now over 4,000. In addition some 40,000 East Indians have been imported into the country from Bengal to work the sugar plantations. The sugar industry has grown so that the exportation is now approximately 80,000 tons.

"We try to preserve the communal system of Government among them as far as possible. The people are ruled by their chiefs, the something like 90,000 Fijians having several dozen head chiefs, and these have many petty ones under them. The heads of provinces are paid salaries ranging from $2,000 a year downward. These chiefs have not the power of life and death.

"There is never any summer in the Falklands," continued Governor Allardyce; "but, on the other hand, the thermometer hardly ever goes down to zero. But what gets to you is the cold wind with a low temperature. Most of the people there are engaged either in sheep-raising or whaling. The whole country is a sheep farm, and the holdings range from 700,000 acres, running 200,000 sheep, to small runs that carry only 3,000 to 4,000. There are 800,000 sheep in the Falklands. In the Falklands group are some fifty or sixty islands, the largest being East Falkland, which is about 90 by 50 miles, and West Falkland, which is 20 by 30 miles.

"The whaling industry is very remunerative. The whalers are mostly Norwegians, and they fish around the Falklands and South Georgia, also going as far south as the South Shetlands and the South Orkneys.

"There are five different kinds of whales in those waters. Of them the right whale, or the nord kappa, as the Norwegians call it, is worth from $7,500 to $10,000, principally on account of the whalebone. Then there is the blue whale, which is the biggest of all, often running to 90 or 100 feet in length. The sperm whale, of course, everybody knows. Then there is the humpbacked whale, so called from an enormous hump, and the sei whale, which is not so important."

The Largest Domes.

Some of the largest domes in the world are: The Pantheon at Rome, 142 feet diameter, 143 high; baths of Caracalla, Rome, 112 feet diameter, 116 feet high; St. Sophia, Constantinople, 115 feet diameter, 201 feet high; St. Maria delle Fure, Florence, 139 diameter, 310 feet high; St. Peter's, Rome, 139 feet diameter, 330 feet high; St. Paul's London, 112 feet diameter, 215 feet high.

Classics and Clothes.

"I suppose you would like to have a customer with a figure like the Apollo Belvedere."

"No," answered the tailor. "Handsome men aren't always the best pay. I'd rather have one with a figure like Croesus."

An English clergyman has sighted a new star; but that's nothing to blow about. Fell and bumped my head the other night and saw about a bushel of 'em myself.

A RUSSIAN MARRIAGE.

The Way the Devils Were Driven Out of Eden.

By WILLIAM ALFRED COREY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Maksim Nagaroff and Natasha Shuben were to be married. It was high time, for Maksim, big and broad shouldered, was nineteen, and Natasha, buxom and pretty, was fifteen.

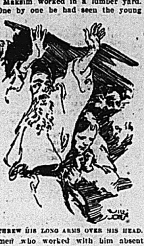
Notwithstanding Maksim and Natasha had themselves nothing to say about their marriage they were neither of them averse.

Yes, Maksim and Natasha loved and were going to marry. So far so good. But how were they going to be married?

By the church, of course, spake the elders of the Molokan sect. No license, no newfangled legal frivolities in theirs, please. These things belonged to the heathen, the pork eaters, the unclean.

But Maksim thought otherwise. He wanted the knot tied in the Los Angeles way. In America, it seemed to him, you should get married as the Americans do.

Maksim worked in a lumber yard. One by one he had seen the young men who worked with him absent themselves temporarily on mysterious errands and be good naturedly rallied by the others on their return. Little by little he had learned the legal steps to marriage—when and where and how to obtain the license and the cost, then to whom to go and what to do and the final cost. And with this knowledge had come the idea, dim and hazy at first, that this was the best way to do. Besides and above all, Rev. Mr. Lowell stood for it—Mr. Lowell, the head of the Good Samaritan Settlement House on Del Mar street, to whom all the foreign quarter looked up and whom Maksim almost worshiped.



THREW HIS LONG ARMS OVER HIS HEAD.

Natasha was like minded and for quite similar reasons. She worked in a cannery. She had gone to school a little, and in numberless indirect ways she had reached the conclusion that, while the Molokan marriage was well enough in Russia, it would never do in the United States.

The Saturday night following the marriage negotiations Maksim came home from his work and, as usual, placed his week's wages, twelve good American dollars, in his father's hands.

"Maksim," said the old man, speaking in Russian—"Maksim, my son, it has been arranged between Elder Shuben and myself that you and the fair Natasha are to be married. You are both quite old enough. You are to be married one week from tomorrow. I trust you are happy at the prospect, my son."

"Yes," assented Maksim. "I want to marry Natasha, but"— And he hesitated, his eyes on the floor.

"But what?" demanded old Evan.

"How are we to be married?" tentatively asked Maksim.

"How married? By the elders, of course. Natasha's mother, Kaiga, is already preparing the feast."

"But," objected Maksim, hesitating, for he well knew the storm he was about to call down upon his head—"but Natasha and I don't want it that way. We want to get married, with a—a paper, by a justice or—or Mr. Lowell, in the American way. It is our wish."

The effect was as he expected. The whole communal family—Evan and Olga, his wife, and the four older sons and their wives—who had gathered about, were inexpressibly shocked. Old Evan's long gray beard swept his breast in his agitation.

"What!" he thundered. "You will forsake the church for the heathen ways—the heathen whom the Lord promised were to be scattered or become our servants when we entered this our Canaan? You will take up with these unclean pork eaters?" And he railed on amid a general family chorus of lamentations.

In the meantime a similar storm had broken out in the family of the Shubens, a storm that beat about the devoted head of poor Natasha.

And the next day the news spread quickly over the whole of "Eden," as some newspaper wag had facetiously named the Molokan quarter, that the expected marriage was not to take place for the good and sufficient reason that both the prospective bride and groom were possessed of devils. There was busy gossip; there was a ferment of excitement; there were wild rumors.

Relations between Japan and China are said to be strained. As the news comes through the cable correspondent's sieve, it doesn't bother me much.

HISTORIC LONDON STREET.

The Scene of Little Dorrit's Girlhood to Be Blotted Out.

In the obliteration of Tabard street, London will do away with a road that is a disgrace to modern civilization yet one familiarly connected with the city's history, poetry and every circumstance of greatness. In the days before the new Dover road wheeled round from the borough into the Kentish highway, Tabard street was called Kent street and was the main approach to London from anywhere in Kent, from Canterbury, from the Cinque Ports, and so one might almost say from Europe.

Up that street nearly 600 years ago rode the Black Prince, conqueror at Poictiers, bringing with him in triumph the captive French King, a pageant compared with which these 20th century shows are but half hearted pieces of make believe. Up Tabard street swarmed the peasants of Kent under Wat Tyler and later on Jack Cade and his Kentish men, pouring in from the heart of England's industry, the "Lancashire lads" of that day.

Down Tabard street some time before either of these events the Canterbury Pilgrims clattered over the stone on their way to Becket's shrine.

Yet as long ago as the 13th century the street was a haunt of depravity and poverty. In Shakespeare's time it was shunned by all respectable folk. For centuries it was deplored that distinguished foreigners coming from the continent should get their first impression of London from Tabard street, and sometimes they used to be hurried through by night so that they would see as little of it as possible.

The recent resource of changing the name to something more poetic has had no effect. Vice and dirt seem to be in its very air, and since the creation of Dover road turned the stream of traffic elsewhere it has just quietly degenerated into a back slum.

Yet the very dingiest — though not the worst—features of Tabard street have a romance for us to-day because of Charles Dickens. Not a hundred yards from Tabard street Little Dorrit was born. At St. George's Church hard by she was married and there, too, the kindly beadle laid her to sleep with the burial register for pillow.

Even the old Marshalsea, the debtors' prison, where Mr. Dorrit was so distinguished a resident, where Dickens' own father was not unknown and to which Dickens himself paid many a visit as a boy—is still to be traced to a far greater extent than is imagined.

One has only to dive into Angel place — the little court on the left just before one comes to St. George's from London Bridge—to find the grim old walls of the Marshalsea standing as they stood a century ago. Following the old walls round by warehouses and offices flanked by grimy little paved alleys that are probably themselves Dickens survivals, one reaches the Southwark mortuary. Close by is a battered old door—once an actual door of the old Marshalsea. Here from across the alley close by the entrance to the mortuary over the wall one may catch a glimpse of the old Marshalsea belfry, practically just as it was when it rang out locking up time for Little Dorrit and her father. Coming round into St. George's churchyard one has completely encircled the famous old prison that was the world of little Dorrit's girlhood.

Royal Servants on Holiday.

The Royal servants will have a much longer holiday than usual this year. As a rule, all the servants except those required to be in personal attendance on Their Majesties would, in the ordinary course of events, be relieved from duty from August to October, when they usually returned to Buckingham Palace. But, as the Court will not be in London again until February, the servants will not be required to return to the palace before then.

A certain number of the Royal servants have, of course, gone to Balmoral, but the grooms of the chambers, the pages, and the state porters, as well as a number of the female staff, have been relieved of duty for the next four or five months.

Many of the late King's servants have been re-engaged in the new Royal household, but two of the most prominent have been pensioned off namely, Mr. Menager, the former head chef, and Mr. Chandler, King Edward's valet. Mr. Chandler's son, it will be remembered, was recently killed in a motor-car accident.

When the Royal servants go on their holiday they must notify the Master of the Household, the Lord Chamberlain, or the Master of the Horse, according to the particular department of the household which they may be in, of their address, and they must be ready to return to duty within twenty-four hours if required to do so, unless they are specially exempted from service for a specified period.

Drumming Immigration.

All through the streets of London, especially in the Strand, one finds handsome shops, rented by various Colonial Governments, filled with most attractive exhibits of their various produce. Rhodesia is one of the latest Governments to start a shop of this kind, and there you can see not only amazing heads of maize and oats, but also beautiful furs, such as otter, the last thing you would expect to find from a tropical country; and you can buy cigarettes of Rhodesian-grown "Turkish" tobacco which compare favorably with the best weed from the Levant. This tobacco is grown near Buluwayo, where only a few years ago the wild Matabele fought and hunted.

Explore Island.

Bathurst Island has just been explored by a British Government expedition. It is situated some fifty miles from Port Darwin, Northern Australia, and has an area of 186 square miles. It is uninhabited, but it is well watered with fresh running streams, and has a fertile soil, capable of growing rice, rubber, cattle and tobacco.

The stock and tie have come back into fashion, affording relief from the monotony of the stiff collar.

Notice that a typographical error has led to a law suit. It doesn't always get that far but the provocation is there every day just the same.

That was some Revolution, little Portugal!
You sure riz up strong
And told the king "So long!"
In a gilt frilled manner
Ordered his banner
Moved to some other lot
Not
In that latitude or longitude.
Maybe it was rude
And smacked too much of the sod,
Not according to Hoyle
Or Chesterfield; but, say,
It was O. K.
And a yard wide!
It made a hit this side
The blooming strand
And
Rounded out the task.
If any one should ask.
Kings are out of date.
A few more wait
For their papers
And cut up capers
As though they were here to stay.
But nay!
Their finish is writ.
The place to quit
Will soon be pointed out.
They are getting too stout
For the delicate job.
The hand of fate is on the knob,
And they
Must soon away.
One by one the roses fade.
Thus with those whose trade
Is to be king.
The common people are in the ring
And ready to say:
"Good day!
We hate to make a fuss.
But a republic is good enough for us."
Well may they tremble as Manuel
And wonder who's next.

The Man With the Gun.

Vancouver, Jan. 4.—One of Vancouver's busy hold-up men went out of business last night on a west-end street, when he tackled Frank R. Cornwall with a gun, and closed his little adventure in the lock-up. Mr. Cornwall ducked, grabbed the would-be robber around the waist, and both went to the pavement together, while the revolver exploded, sending a bullet singing under Cornwall's arm. The latter then reached for the weapon, and after a struggle, secured possession of it.

With the hold-up man covered, he asked a passerby to call the police. The footpad, on his arrival at the station, gave his name as Richard Grey from Ottawa.

Tait To Be Vice-President.

Montreal, Jan. 4.—It is stated here that Sir Thomas Tait will be made vice-president of the C.P.R., with headquarters at Toronto, this being the beginning of a new departure, promised some time since by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, that an executive officer of the company might be located in the Queen City, clothed with power to decide matters of importance to the railway and to the city of Toronto, without referring them to Montreal, as is the case at the present time.

The authorities here deny this, but well-posted people say that Sir Thomas Tait will locate in Toronto, as desired.

Stopped Employment of Children.

Brantford, Jan. 4.—The police here on Monday stopped the employment of a number of children, ranging in age from 4 to 10 years, who were appearing at the Grand Opera House in the performance of the "Lilliputians." The manager of the play withdrew the children from the act and secured permission from the mayor for those between 10 and 16 years to continue. The claim was also put forth that the youngsters were picked up in Montreal, where they had no homes, and that their activity was for their own betterment.

Blaze at North Bay.

North Bay, Jan. 4.—Fire broke out in J. J. Sullivan's boot and shoe store in the Cormoe Block, doing considerable damage, principally by smoke and water, to the large stock valued at $15,000. The fire department did good work and quickly extinguished the blaze. Sullivan's stock was insured for $6,000, and his loss is heavy. The building was owned by Begg Bros., and the damage to it will not exceed $1,000, covered by insurance.

Fewer Vessels at New York.

New York, Jan. 4.—During the year 1910, the total number of vessels arriving at the port of New York was 10,114, of which 6,459 were steamers, and 3,655 sailing vessels. This shows a decrease of 466 vessels, compared with the year 1909. The decrease in steamers was 344, and sailing vessels 302. British ships led all others, with 1,964 arrivals, the United States being second with 716.

Port Arthur Y.M.C.A.

Port Arthur, Jan. 4.—Port Arthur's new Y.M.C.A. building, which was dedicated on Sunday, with Dr. W. H. Solimon of Yale as the principal speaker, assisted by several clergymen and laymen, opened to active business yesterday morning. The building, erected at a cost of $50,000, is the most complete of its kind between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Valuable Paintings Burned.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 4.—It was learned yesterday afternoon that two valuable paintings were burned in the fire which early yesterday caused a loss of $1,000,000 in the business district here. They were "The Wagonsmith" and "Venu de Milo," valued at $60,000.

SHOOTS NEIGHBOR.

Quebec Man Wounds Pursuer of His Daughter.

Quebec, Jan. 4.—News reached here yesterday of a sensational occurrence at St. Michel de Bellechasse, and one which threw the usually peaceful village into a state of great excitement. About 8 o'clock on Monday evening the little daughter of Wilfrid Corriveau ran into her father's house, crying that she had been pursued by a masked man. The father immediately seized a revolver and started off after the man, at whom he fire three shots, one of them lodging in his breast. The injured man proved to be a neighbor named Morrison, who has been subject to fits of sudden mental aberration. A doctor was at once summoned, when it was found that the condition of the injured man was a critical one.

Panama Canal Suit.

Washington, Jan. 4.—By unanimous decision the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday decided that the Federal Government could not maintain the so-called "Panama Canal libel suit" against The Press Publishing Co., publishers of The New York World, in the Federal courts of New York. In so holding, the court affirmed the decision of the Circuit Court of the United States for the southern district of New York, which had quashed the famous indictment.

In effect, the decision was that the Federal Court had no jurisdiction over the alleged offence, because the case might have been brought in a state court.

In effect, the allegel libel was the publication of articles stating that C. P. Taft, D. Robinson and W. N. Cromwell, with J. P. Morgan and others, obtained control of the Panama Canal route for about $43,000,000, and, by the co-operation of Theodore Roosevelt, then President of the United States, and brother-in-law of Mr. Robinson, and President W. H. Taft, then Secretary of War, were enabled to effect the sale of the Panama Canal route to the United States at a profit of $36,000,000.

Election Protested.

Winnipeg, Jan. 4.—A petition was yesterday formally filed against the re-election of Mayor Sanford Evans on the usual charge of impersonation and corrupt practices.

In connection with the attitude on segregation, it is interesting to note the attitude of the police commission, of which the mayor is ex-officio chairman, and Magistrate Daly is a member. The other member is Ald. Douglas, who replaces Ald. Willoughby, who marked his displeasure with the attitude of the majority of the police commission by resigning last November. It is stated on good authority that this action is not directed against the mayor, but to force an investigation into the charges of impersonation and other corrupt practices, which during the municipal election are stated to have been on a scale hitherto unparalleled in Canada.

Fines Aggregating $8,100.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Fines aggregating $8,100 were imposed upon six New Yorkers yesterday in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, after pleas of guilty had been entered by them to the charge of conspiracy to violate the law against conducting bucket shops in the District of Columbia. Jail sentences of two years each were imposed upon three of the men, Richard E. Preusser, Leo Mayer and George Turner, but sentence was suspended on condition that they do not again engage in bucket-shop business. The fines were paid promptly. E. S. Boggs of Robinson and Humphrey Owen were the other three men fined.

A Monument to Hoxsey.

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 4.—The funeral of Arch. Hoxsey, the aviator who was killed last Saturday on Dominguez field, was held here yesterday. In deference to the wishes of his mother the attendance at the funeral was restricted to Hoxsey's personal friends among the aviators and his former associates in his home city.

Officials of the aviation meet just closed joined yesterday in a plan to erect a monument to the memory of Hoxsey on the spot where he met death. The field will be used as a permanent aviation park.

It was announced yesterday that Hoxsey's share of the prizes totaled $6,200.

Douks For B.C.

Winnipeg, Jan. 4.—Peter Veregin, head of the Doukhobors, who arrived in this city yesterday morning, says that two thousand more Doukhobors will be removed from Saskatchewan to British Columbia this year. Fifty thousand fruit trees on their 10,000 acre tract in British Columbia came into bearing this year. With removal of these 2,000 there will be 4,000 in each province.

The plan is to have interchange of products. Saskatchewan members will ship oats and wheat to British Columbia and the coast province Doukhobors will ship fruit to Saskatchewan.

A Shooting Affray.

Sherbrooke, Jan. 4.—A shooting affray is reported from near Thetford Mines. It appears that several people had gathered at the home of one Moise Carrier, including two brothers, named Boutin. During the day, one of the Boutins went upstairs and brought down a rifle. Carrier tried to get it away from him, and in the melee the rifle was discharged, and the bullet entered the shoulder of one of the Boutins, who was lying on the sofa. He is not expected to recover.

Rib Punctured Lung.

Brockville, Jan. 4.—A. E. Sawyer, who has charge of the ashpit at the Grand Trunk yards, was severely injured yesterday afternoon by being crushed between the engine and the fence opposite the pit. Upon being removed to the hospital it was found that his shoulder blade was broken, also several ribs, one of which punctured the lung, causing a hemorrhage. He also suffered other internal injuries. It is feared the man cannot live.

POLICE HELD AT BAY

Anarchists in London Check Big Force For Six Hours.

Huge Force of Policemen, and Soldiers Besiege House In Houndsditch, Where Robbers Are Entrenched and Kill Two Desperadoes —Great Crowds Watch Fight—Winston Churchill Leads Assault.

London, Jan. 4.—All London has been stirred by a terrible battle waged yesterday between anarchists on the one side and hundreds of police, infantry from the Tower, and artillerymen on the other. It is the opinion of some that two desperadoes alone for many hours held the police and military at bay. Thousands, flocking from all parts of London, witnessed the thrilling spectacle—a steady rain of bullets, flashes of fire, smoke pouring from the windows, the issuing flames and finally men on the roof, shouting defiance and falling into the seething mass below.

A police sergeant, searching for the burglars, who only a few nights ago killed four policemen, was reconnoitering around this Sidney street den in the early hours of the morning. Suddenly a shot was fired, and the sergeant fell, with a bullet through his lung. A call for police was sounded, and the entire neighborhood cordoned. People were driven from their houses, and a pitched battle began between those fortressed in the house and hundreds of police. The Scots Guards from the Tower were hastily despatched to the scene, and later a battery of artillery with gatling guns came at double-quick. Three pieces were placed in position, but they did not open fire.

A steady stream of bullets played between the contending forces, and the guardsmen took up sheltered positions, firing volley after volley into the house. Piles of straw were cast in all directions and lighted in the hope that the desperadoes would be smoked out. At last sparks were observed shooting from the windows, accompanied by clouds of smoke, and here and there a jet of flames. A detachment of firemen stretched their hose, and threw water on the adjoining structures. Soon they directed streams against the stronghold of the desperadoes, which was now burning fiercely. Driven from the lower floors the anarchists made their way to the roof, where, it seemed to the watching thousands several forms could be seen amidst the driving smoke. Then the roof collapsed, and with it the men.

A search of the besieged house after the ruins had cooled a little revealed in a cupboard a large number of what appeared to be metal dynamite bombs in an unfinished state.

According to The Daily Telegraph the police are in possession of information concerning a widespread anarchist plot, which is regarded as one of the greatest gravity.

During the battle thousands of shots were fired. In the midst of the struggle Home Secretary Winston Churchill appeared. He led the besiegers right up toward the house, and went to the very door, while scores of shots were aimed at him. It was in vain that the police tried to persuade Churchill to get out of harm's way. He told them to attend to the crowd.

Up to two o'clock this morning only two bodies had been found in the ruins of the house where the London police and detachments of troops were held at bay by anarchists. One of them is believed to be that of "Fritz" Vaars, wanted in connection with the murder of three London policemen on Dec. 16. "Peter the Painter," another of the men wanted, was thought to have been in the house, but the second body has not been identified.

Caught While He Slept.

Winnipeg, Jan. 4.—Bill Walton, alias "the Squirrel," who dynamited the safe in the postoffice at Auvan, Sask., and was trailed by a posse of fifty men, was arrested in a farm house at Nokomis. Magistrate Latta found him asleep and handcuffed him. There had been $31,000 in the postoffice the night before in transit for the Northern Crown Bank. Walton is wanted for jail-breaking at New Westminster, B.C. He stole the dynamite.

Linked to Mainland.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Jan. 4.—The P.E.I. Telephone Co.'s complete telephone system between this province and the mainland was officially opened yesterday. Preparations for this event have been going on for some time, beginning with the experiments of some months ago, and now telephonic communication may be carried on here with Halifax, Windsor, Truro, Amherst, New Glasgow, Sydney and intermediate points.

Delirious, Drank Carbolic.

Toronto, Jan. 4.—While in a fit of delirium, induced by sickness, Mrs. J. Ackerman, 779 Manning avenue, drank about two ounces of carbolic acid from a bottle in the sickroom on Monday afternoon. She died a few minutes later. She secured the bottle while the nurse was absent from the room for a few moments. Dr. Page was called, but could do nothing. An inquest is unlikely.

An Exciting Experience.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Jan. 4.—The sole occupant of a sleigh, 5-year-old Ian Wilson, son of a prominent physician, had an exciting experience in a runaway yesterday. The lad stuck fast to the sleigh, while the horse ran the full length of the city, about three miles. Frank Roberts scrambled into the flying cutter and leaped into a snowbank with the child in his arms. Both were uninjured.

Accidentally Shot.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 4.—While three boys, aged about fifteen, were practicing with a rifle, it was accidentally discharged, and Murray Keefe received a bullet in his body. He may recover.

Tardy Recognition.

London, Eng., Jan. 4.—The statue to Gen. Wolfe at Westerham—described by The Standard as a very tardy acknowledgement to the worth of a great soldier—was unveiled Monday by Lord Roberts. Among those present at the ceremony were Lord Strathcona and Sir Charles Tupper. Laurel wreaths were sent by Canadian residents in Britain.

In his address Lord Roberts said that to Wolfe Britain was indebted for the greatest of her dominions. He described how Wolfe, by a daring plan, led his troops to victory at Quebec. "It is one of the brightest pages in the history of the Empire," he said, "and never loses its thrilling interest for the nation."

The course adopted was only justified by Wolfe's firm belief in the courage and discipline of his troops, and by the fact that the same grand feeling was reciprocated towards the commander.

No wonder, when mortally wounded, he was able to murmur, "I die content."

French-Canadian Governor.

Providence, R.I., Jan. 4.—The present system of a direct election of U.S. Senators was favored by Governor A. J. Pothier, a French-Canadian, in his annual message, upon being inducted into office for a third time yesterday.

With Governor Pothier there were also inaugurated the other state officers and the members of the general assembly, which attracts much interest this year because of the task which devolves upon it of electing a U.S. Senator to succeed Nelson W. Aldrich.

The ceremonies incident to the inauguration bore all the picturesqueness of former years. Troopers with shouldered carbines patrolled the corridors of the State House. Following the swearing in of each officer, a deputy sheriff with sash, cockaded silk hat and mace, made official proclamation of the fact from the State House balcony, facing the city, and when Governor Pothier had been sworn in a salute of 17 guns boomed out the announcement.

Swept by Fire.

Troy, N.Y., Jan. 4.—The entire business portion and part of the residential section of Granville, Washington County, was swept by fire early yesterday morning. Loss, $250,000.

The fire was discovered shortly after midnight, in a clothing store conducted by Barney Yanklowitz.

The firemen were unable to check the fire, as there was no water pressure, the reason being that the reservoir was practically empty.

Owing to the condition of the roads, it was nearly three hours before firemen from contiguous towns arrived with apparatus.

Brother and Sister Burned.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Jan. 4.—Colin McPhail, aged 82 years, and his sister, aged 89, who lived together in a small cottage at Clyde River, about ten miles from this city, where they kept the village postoffice, met death in a sad form Monday night. The old man had gone to bed and the old lady was about to retire also, when she fell, upsetting the kerosene lamp which she carried. She was burned to a crisp, and her brother was taken from his bed choked to death by the smoke. The house was burned to the ground.

Fourteen Families Homeless.

Pittsburg, Jan. 4.—Fire caused by a gas explosion yesterday destroyed nine business houses and two large tenements, besides damaging several other buildings at Woodlawn, a new steel town on the Ohio River just below this city. The fire burned itself out, the firemen having insufficient hose to fight it. Fourteen families were made homeless. The loss is estimated at $80,000.

EIGHT MINERS PERISH

Fire Occurs in Number Three at Florence, N.S.

Under Deputies Ferguson and Purchass and Six Workmen Descend Into Colliery to Start the Machinery at Four o'Clock In the Morning When Flames Start and All Are Burned to Death.

North Sydney, N.S., Jan. 4.—Not since the memorable explosion of 1878, which occurred in the Winning pit, has such a calamity disturbed the community as yesterday morning, when it was announced that Sydney No. 3 was on fire. About 4 o'clock yesterday morning, when the under deputies, Ferguson and Purchass, went into the mine, accompanied by six workmen making preparations for the starting of the mine, the explosion occurred.

The village of Florence was turned into a frenzy. People rushed to the colliery and Supt. T. J. Brown was immediately summoned. The superintendent soon got in touch with the mining department and John Johnstone, accompanied by Robt. Robson and other officers, soon had the dragger apparatus upon the scene, and in a few minutes all the available workmen on the plant were combating the fire.

For eight hours Managar Johnstone, assisted by Inspector Nicholson and John W. Johnstone, worked down upon No. 11 lift, and finally succeeded in finding the charred bodies of the six shift men, who were clumped together, and so burned that it was impossible to recognize one from the other.

The rescuing party worked hard to reach the No. 14 lift, in the hope of recovering the bodies of Deputies Ferguson and Purchass, but owing to the deadly gases were compelled to retreat to a place of safety. Inspector Nicholson said he never saw such a tangled mass of ruins in a colliery, and by the appearance of the inspector when he emerged from the colliery, it looked as if he had been in the fight himself.

The names of the dead are: Amos Teraunt, aged 22, single; Jos. Heralul, aged 25, single; Jas. Tramsen, aged 30, single; Fred Tremen, aged 36, married, with six children; Alex. Vexter, aged 20, single; James Rosten, aged 25, single; Deputy Ferguson, Deputy Purchass.

Would Elect For Six Years.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Extension of the Presidential and Congressional terms of office is favored by Representative Champ Clark of Missouri, who probably will be Speaker of the next House. "I am for amending the constitution," said Mr. Clark yesterday, "so as to elect the President for one term of six years, and make him forever ineligible for re-election. Every time that there is a President extraordinarily popular, a lot of fools boom him for a third term.

"If the present term is made for six years, I am in favor of making the term of Congress three years instead of two. Then the states, falling into that rule, would have an election every three years."

Mr. Clark also is in favor of electing both the President and the representatives in Congress on the last Monday in August, and of inaugurating the President and the members of Congress on the first Monday in October.

Burned to Death.

Liverpool, N.S., Jan. 3.—Under a heap of ruins, the body of Oliver Eminot of Liverpool was unearthed by firemen of that place at 10.30 a.m. yesterday, with the skull burned to a bone, the body scarcely touched and legs severely injured. The fire started in his bedroom, and its origin is unknown.

Jamaica Mails Direct.

Kingston, Jamaica, Jan. 4.—In view of Jamaica's opposition to the transportation of the mails to England by way of Canada, the British Postmaster-General has arranged with the Elders and Fyffes Co., a British organization, controlled by the United Fruit Co., to convey the mails direct, on the termination of the Elder-Dempster service next month. The new arrangement will be on the poundage system.

The Jamaican Government has decided to amend the pure food law, and prohibit the importation of flour in bags, for sanitary reasons. Hereafter, flour must be transported to Jamaica in barrels.

To be a surgeon or physician and save life is a great privilege. Is the preservation or reclaiming of the mental life not worth while?

Flammarion, the great French astronomer, recently described the destruction of a star in the constellation of Perseus, observed in 1901, which owing to the fact that it takes light fully 300 years for light to travel from there to the earth, really took place in 1601, during the reign of King Henry IV. What avenues of thought are opened by the contemplation of this phenomenon! Rays of light projected into space from the doomed terrestial body, travelling on and on, unimpeded, unchanged, not swerving from their course, while centuries rolled by, ultimately finding their way into that human camera, the eye.

Belleville Team Has Secured One of Best Men In The Game

The local club secured to-day, according to Montreal and Ottawa critics, the fastest and most brilliant hockey player of the Ontario Pro. League. The Ottawa reports of this great player's sensational work in the Stanley Cup games last winter between Ottawa and Galt was: Doherty, of Galt, was by long odds the best player on the ice. His fast skating, brilliant stick handling, and persistent back checking won the admiration of every person in the Arena. His gameness in finishing the last 15 minutes at top speed with ten stitches in his face, the result of a mix-up in the corner with Ridpath, won him round after round of applause from the spectators.

At the close of the game, as Doherty was skating to his dressing room, the crowd stood up as one man and gave the boy who had out played the great Kerr, a reception he will never forget.

The Montreal Star said: Doherty's playing in last night's cup game at Ottawa was nothing short of wonderful. It was a bitter pill for the Ottawa people to have to sit and watch this boy out-play and out-general their great Dubby Kerr. At the close of the game Art Ross of the All Montreals and Barney Holden of the Shamrocks tried to induce Doherty to come to Montreal but he left with the Galt team for Cobalt and Haileybury.

Doherty will play cover point against Port Hope here to-morrow night. Belleville's line-up will be:—

Goal—Cross
Point—Sandford.
Cover Point—Doherty
Rover—Dusome
Centre—Crossett

HOCKEY NOTES.

To-night's game between the Belleville and Cobourg Intermediates ought to be worth seeing. Both teams are fast and the ice will be in fine condition.

On Friday night Simcoe disagreed with Referee Sproule's decision at Simcoe and left the ice. On Saturday afternoon the O.H.A. sub-committee attended to their case and relieved them from further duties during the season. Mr. Sproule will referee to-night's game here.

The following registrations have been made with the O.H.A.:—

Peterboro' (junior)—Arthur R. Reynolds, John Coughlin, Harold Matthews, James M. Martin, Frank Heffernan, Arthur P. Hall, E. W. Pratt, Allen Wade, John E. Patterson, Alvin Saries.

Cobourg (junior)—Willie Cunningham, Gerald R. Hornbeck, Charlie C Fairbanks, Roy D. Niles, Wilfred Gliddon, J. E. Doheny, Vincent R. ePachey, James Freeman, Stanley Aitchison.

Cobourg (Int.)—John Lavis, Frank Guy, Kent Payne, M. C. Nicholson, Joseph Hand, Cecil Pratt, Jas. Crowther, jr., H. T. Paton, Clarence W. Dohony.

The Kingston Frontenacs have decided to withdraw their senior O.H.A. team and devote all their energies to their juniors, who are a fast lot, indeed. This decision was arrived at with much regret by the Kingston club as they had figured on a strong senior team for this season.

To-morrow night the Belleville professionals will play their first scheduled game, their opponents being Port Hope. The ability of the local men will then be fairly tested.

The Port Hope Guide says: There is some class to that professional hockey team of ours. They journeyed down to Trenton last evenig and defeated the seven of that town by a score of 6 to 1. Just a week ago they had a difficult task in winning from Trenton here, but the practice of the week and a few changes in the line, made the difference. They outplayed Trenton seven at every stage, and could have made the score much larger had they desired. The teams were:—

Robbers Fled.

Vancouver, Jan. 4.—Two masked thugs, who have been operating in Vancouver pulled off another robbery at Mount Pleasant. The Star restaurant was held up, but during the operation, passers-by alarmed the robbers, who fled without getting any money. Twenty policemen were rushed out on a special car, but no arrest was made.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Jan. 3.—Hans Holmer, well known in Canada, won the professional Marathon on Powder Hall grounds to-day in the record time of 2 hours 32 minutes and 31 seconds, defeating 26 runners of continental and British fame.

The Frenchman, Bouchard, led for fifteen miles in 1 hour 21 minutes and 10 seconds, Holmer runnig strong 100 yards behind. The latter took the lead in the 19th mile, and passed Bouchard at the 20th mark, the time being 1 hour 49 minutes and 29 seconds.

From then on to the end of the 26 miles and 386 yards, Holmer held the lead, finishing three-quarters of a mile ahead of the Frenchman.

MEN FIRST—CAPITAL SECOND.

Mr. J. H. Plummer, President of the Dominion Steel Corporation, one of the contributors to the Globe's Annual Financial Survey, published on the first business day of the year, says:

The consumption of iron and steel in Canada is growing rapidly. The plants are being largely extended, but they will scarcely overtake the demand, and so far as one can judge we are merely at the beginning of things so far as this great basic industry is concerned. Given reasonable tariff conditions, it should grow until it holds relatively as important a position here as in the United States. We have men, ore, coal, limestone and capital, and it will be our own fault if we do not in a few years become, in this as in other lines, manufacturers for other lands as well as our own. It may be observed that I put men first and capital last, but that is the order in which they should come. In our early days we put these requisites the other way. When we had found the capital we thought our difficulties were at an end. They were really only beginning, and we therefore courted 'a heavy blow and a great discouragement.' All that is fortunately past, and the outlook is satisfactory in every respect."

Man Who Broke A Window In Royal Cafe Had To Settle

Last evening the police answered a call to the Chinese restaurant, where some trouble occured. When the police arrived the party quieted down and settled for the damage done. No arrest was made.

1860—GOLDEN WEDDING.—1910

On Monday, December 26th, 1910, Mr. and Mrs. L. Massey, of Hallbridge, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day, when a goodly number of children and grand children, with proper tokens of regard, gathered in the 'dear old home,' to partake of Christmas dinner and to do honor to the occasion. Owing to Mr. Massey's poor health friends and relatives outside the family circle were not invited. The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Massey and family; Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Lane and family; from a distance were Mrs. (Dr.) Palmer and two little ones, from Waldeck, Sask. Two sons, Norman L., B. A., of Moose Jaw, and Alfred Yale, B. A., M. D., of Central Africa, were unable to be present. Miss Lucy, only surviving sister of the groom and bridesmaid of fifty years ago fully enjoyed the whole affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Massey after their marriage spent nine years on a farm near Cobourg. In 1869 they moved to the fifth concession of Sidney, where they have since resided. From early life both have taken a most active interest in church work and have always served in an official capacity. The many expressions of warm sympathy, together with the beautiful array of presents showed that the practical help and hearty Christian usefulness of the honored couple had won for them not only the love and esteem of their own household, but of the community. Their many friends join in wishing them continued peace and holy joy in the eventide of life.

AND "FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED MRS. CADIEUX

Plantagenet, Ont., Jan. 31st, 1910.

About March 1st, 1909, I was taken deathly sick with Stomach Trouble, Backache and General Breakdown. I failed from 125 pounds down to 80 pounds, was confined to bed for eight weeks, and was unable to eat or keep anything on my stomach.

The doctors said they could do nothing for me and as a last resort, one doctor told me to try "Fruit-a-tives"—if they would not cure me, nothing would.

I started taking "Fruit-a-tives" at once, and inside of ten days I was able to leave my bed. My stomach got strong and I could eat and retain my food. I gained rapidly and soon had my usual good health back again and to-day I weigh as much as ever—125 pounds.

THE USEFUL CASSEROLE.

How to Make Cheap Dishes Pleasing to the Palate.

The casserole is a utensil which should be known in the American kitchen.

Awhile ago the casserole was an expensive imported dish. Now it is made in this country and can be bought for a small sum. Any fireproof earthenware dish, large or small, with a cover is a casserole or may serve in the place of one. The food cooked in the casserole is sent to the table in the same dish and has won by the process of cooking a savoriness it could hardly gain in any other way.

To make cheap dishes pleasing to the palate is the object of housekeepers at all times, but especially now, when the cruel rise in prices sends us all searching for ways in which to keep our bills down without letting our families feel they are being pinched in their food supply. In this effort the casserole is of distinct service.

Take, for instance, a casserole of veal. For this you may use the leg pieces or any other cheap lean portions. Cutlet is altogether too good and too expensive. You put the casserole on top of the stove and fry in it an onion in a little dripping and when this is hot lay in the slices of meat and turn them until their surfaces are lightly seared. You arrange the meat and sliced or stewed tomatoes in alternate layers, pour in a cup of weak gravy, cover your casserole and put it in the oven and leave it there for an hour and a half to two hours.

Try the meat from time to time with a fork to see if it is tender. If you choose to add a few sliced mushrooms to the dish you may do it, but it is good without these. At the last turn off the gravy, put it in a saucepan and thicken it with browned flour, add a little kitchen bouquet, pour back over the meat in the casserole, leave this in the oven five minutes and send to the table.

The same plan may be followed with lamb or with liver. Use lamb's liver instead of calf's liver, if you really wish to economize, and fry the onion with two or three slices of bacon, searing the liver in the bacon fat. If you choose you may add balls or dice of potatoes to the dish, parboiling them and putting them into the dish about half an hour before you take it from the oven.

An Up to Date Present.

A dozen new laid eggs may cost a pretty penny the way prices are now, and when fresh eggs are carried to the friend at the hospital or even taken, instead of cheaper fruit or flowers, to an invalid relative at home they are carefully kept, and often each one is marked so that they may not be used for cooking purposes by mistake. A pretty refrigerator stand like the one pictured makes an acceptable gift for the sickroom. Each egg rests separately in a rack, and the ice is packed in a compartment back of the racks. The cupboard closes with a brass lock and key.

Velvet collars can be cleaned by sponging them with a cloth dipped in ammonia and water, then held over a hot iron to dry.

When making horseradish sauce put the horseradish, after it has been washed and peeled, through the mincing machine. The effect will be just as good as when scraped by hand, and the eyes will not suffer.

To clean white plumes immerse in gasoline until thoroughly wet. Then shake out and roll over and over in flour. After the flour bath use cornstarch and your plumes will come out perfectly white and clean.

To keep oil from dripping on the sewing after oiling the machine fasten a bit of absorbent cotton to the needle bar just above the needle. Many a nice dress has been spoiled by oil dripping on it, and this is a sure preventive.

Iron pots and utensils which are not in daily use are apt to rust. To prevent this make a paste with thick starch and a strong solution of soda and water and with this coat the inside of the article in question. This can easily be rinsed off when the pot is wanted.

WOMEN'S HAIR DESTROYER

GREAT HAVOC WROUGHT BY WOMEN'S CARELESSNESS.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They do not shampoo their hair often enough or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses color, falls out and baldness commences, unless prompt and proper precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Most people can rid themselves of dandruff and correct diseased scalp and hair conditions, if they will use the right remedy. We have that remedy and we will positively guarantee that it will eradicate dandruff and prevent baldness or it will not cost the user anything.

That's a pretty broad statement but we will back it and prove it with our own money. Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the remedy that will grow hair and overcome scalp and hair troubles. It will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases where it received a thoroughly hard impartial and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You'd better think this over and then come in and see us about this offer. You will be well repaid for your visit to our store. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

ON THE JOURNEY.

Amy's Experience In an Upper Berth and What Followed.

By CICELY ALLEN.

"I am very sorry it cannot be arranged," said the young man, with a deprecatory wave of his hand, "but"—

"All the latest popular novels! Last chance to get your reading matter! No books sold on train after it starts!" The newsboy bawled this in Amy Curtis' ear, and she lost all the young man said except the words "can't climb those beastly steps."

Not that she cared. She was quite able to climb the little ladder to the upper berth. Her lip curled scornfully.

"Oh, it doesn't matter in the least, you know. It was the conductor's idea, I assure you. Only in the south, where I come from, men, as a rule, are more obliging."

She picked up her novel and proceeded to ignore McKean's presence. He looked at her blankly, then flung himself down the sleeper to the smoking compartment. "Well, I do think she's a bit harsh!" He pulled out a paper and tried to forget the scorn in the eyes but recently lifted to meet his.

In the meantime the [illegible] in section 7 stared wrathfully at the letters in her book, which fairly danced before her eyes. "A nice beginning for my trip! I never wanted to go to Colorado Springs anyhow. I had much better remained at Bar Harbor than to let the Carters inveigle me into coming west."

With this final reflection she commenced to read in earnest, but somehow her mind went back to the very disagreeable young man who had disregarded the sleeping car conductor's request that he yield the lower berth to the young woman, whose Pullman ticket had been duplicated by a careless employee in an uptown office. She could not forget the real regret in his eyes nor the nervous, embarrassed way in which he had smoothed his hair while he was offering his halting explanation. She could not reconcile this, however, with the fact that he had declined to climb the little steps in her stead. It was most annoying, she argued, that she could not forget a certain fascination which his long, firm hand had held for her and the hair he had smoothed.

She could imagine that he had spent hours trying to brush out a certain tendency to crisp curls. She was very glad there was something that could defeat him, if it was nothing more than curls, and after deciding thus she was more content.

She did not see him again until she entered the diner at dusk. The only place left for her was a single seat at a table meant for four. The three passengers already seated were men, talking business in rather loud tones. Amy hesitated. A figure at the table opposite rose suddenly. The very disagreeable young man who had sentenced her to the upper berth was standing beside her.

"Take my place," he said eagerly, "and I will go over there with the men." He had been occupying a seat at one of the small tables, and a gray haired woman was sitting opposite him.

Amy saw all this at a glance and with a surprised uplifting of her eyebrows and a mechanical "Thank you" accepted the seat. The young man had not yet been served, and she realized that the change had not embarrassed him in the least.

"Quite willing to do things that do not incommode him," she thought scornfully.

The young man did not presume upon the reception of this courtesy. Directly after dinner he once more retired to the smoking compartment, and Amy early ordered the porter to make up her berth. Once tucked snugly away, she forgot her grievance. The steady clunk-clunk of the wheels was a singular lullaby to which she soon yielded.

It seemed as if she had not been asleep more than three minutes when she awoke to the most horrible noises that she had ever heard. What had happened? Had the train run into a circus or a jungle of wild beasts? No; the train was still moving. The unhalting clunk-clunk could be heard at intervals between the awful sounds which now assailed her ears. If it were not wild beasts, then maybe some one around her was dying.

This pretty, carefully reared, ever protected southern girl had never seen any one die, and in her ignorance of this and various other matters she was working herself up into a fine frenzy. A particularly deep and agonized roar was followed by a sound that was a cross between a penny whistle and a sob. She could stand the suspense no longer. She pushed the tiny button and, carefully arranging the curtains, stuck out her head to meet the look of inquiry in the porter's black face. Up and down the car she gave a hasty glance. Apparently no one else realized the tragedy that was going on so close at hand, for no other curtains were swaying, no other heads were thrust out.

"Sumfin you want, miss?"

"Why—why, don't you hear that dreadful noise?" she said. "I think some one in the berth next to me is dying."

In the dim light she could see the darky's teeth gleam ivory white in a grin that reached from ear to ear.

"It's just the gentleman in the lower berth, miss, snoring. I will wake him up. Soon as he rolls over he'll stop."

Amy jerked in her head as if the porter had struck her. She could feel him switch aside the curtains below her. Two masculine voices were wafted toward her, then the sound of a deep grunt that was decidedly masculine, and silence.

Up in her eyrie Amy lay, still flushing hotly with mortification. She knew that porter would tell everybody on the train next morning. She wished she could change cars. Then suddenly from the berth below the hated sound rose again. Evidently there was no respite from this infliction, and, oddly enough, she felt herself pitying the man who was responsible for it. It was really a disease, she decided, and he was so young too!

The next morning she met him face to face in the dining car. Her cheeks were flooded with crimson. She knew by the quizzical light in his eyes that he had heard of her mistake, and undoubtedly every one on the car knew it by this time and would consider it a fine joke.

She ate her breakfast in a resentful humor. She felt reckless and miserable, and it may have been this mood which caused her to sway uncertainly as she crossed from the diner back to the sleeper. She reached out a hand to steady herself against the side of the vestibule. Suddenly it seemed to her as if a sharp, redhot iron had been thrust into her finger tip and run up to her shoulder. She tried to draw away her hand as a child does from a hot stove, but something held it tight, and then she awoke to the truth. The train had been swinging around a curve, and the iron plaits, or folds, of the vestibule, left uncovered by a careless employee, had opened just far enough to admit her finger and then had closed upon it again. She was held as in a vise, and her calls for assistance could not be heard above the roar of the train. And so it happened that the "hateful young man" came upon her, white lipped and fainting. When they had pried the hand loose he carried her unconscious figure into the vacant drawing room. The conductor came hurrying up, greatly perturbed over the accident, which meant a damage suit for the company. He turned to the porter.

"Hustle through the train and find out whether there is a physician on board."

The young man spoke sharply. "I am a physician. Porter, bring me that long, narrow black bag from my berth."

And so it happened when Amy woke up it was to find the hateful young man deftly bandaging her injured hand. The drawing room was placed at her disposal by the anxious conductor, and the entire train force was on its knees before her. The uncovered vestibule meant that some employee's head would fall into the basket.

Toward noon, in spite of the terrific pain in her crushed finger, Amy commenced to feel drowsy, thanks to the mild narcotic which Dr. McKean had administered. He plumped up the pillows for her, and she murmured drowsily, "I didn't sleep very well last night."

McKean bit his lip. "I was afraid you wouldn't. That was the worst part of my having to put Mr. Carter in the berth with you, but I couldn't get him another lower in the car, and he stubbornly refused to buy up a drawing room."

Amy felt suddenly wide awake. "Mr. Carter! Why, didn't you"—

"Lord, no! You didn't think I was raising the roof of my berth, did you? Mr. Carter has been at a sanitarium just east of Harrisburg. He is a patient of my father's, and his people asked me to pick him up and bring him on to Colorado Springs, where I am visiting for a week or so. That's what I was trying to tell you last night."

A sudden light dawned on Amy. "Oh, it's all the fault of that newsboy! I am going to the Carters myself. They're giving a house party."

"Yes, I know," said McKean. "I saw your name on your luggage. But now you're going to sleep, and if you don't mind I shall sit here beside you and see you are not rocked off when we make a fast run."

Amy dropped back weakly among the pillows. "No, I don't mind. I will be only too glad to have—you—stay." Suddenly she raised her heavy eyelids. "But promise me you will never tell—what—I said to the porter last night."

Dr. McKean's eyes twinkled. "I promise on my honor."

ELECTRIC MERGER ASK HYDRO TO KEEP OUT

Ontario Commissioners Reply--They Will Compete If Munipalitics Desire It--Much Power Is Being Provided For

A merger of electrical companies, which was formed to operate in the district between Peterborough and Trenton including Cobourg and other towns in the vicinity, has made overtures, says the Toronto News, to the Hydro-Electric Commission for the purpose of securing a monopoly in the development and distribution of electrical power in that territory.

Needless to say, the Commission has refused the request, and it appears probable that the Commission will be forced to enter into competition for the protection of some of the municipalities interested.

Mr. W. K. McNaught, M. P. P., a member of the Commission, when asked by the News this morning as to the position the Hydro-Electric Commission would take in the face of the combine of the electrical companies, said:

"The only basis on which we will consent to deal with the company or with the municipalities will be the same as that which has been adopted by the Commission in other parts of Ontario. We cannot allow any company to come between us and the municipalities. If the municipalities come to us with the usual request for us to arrange to supply them with electrical power we will go to this combine and ask for their rates to us and not to the municipalities. The power must come from us to them.

"On the other hand we will not interfere unless asked to do so by the municipalities. If the combine provides them with power at reasonable rates it is not likely they will appeal to us, but if prices are excessive and we are appealed to we will go into this territory in the same manner as we have into Western Ontario, Hamilton, Ottawa, Port Arthur, and other districts."

Merger Asked for a Monopoly.

"They approached us some time ago for the purpose of securing an arrangement by which they would be left unmolested by the Commission, and pointed out to us that they had been granted charters by the Dominion Government which made it necessary for their rates to be approved by the Dominion Railway Board before they could be put into effect.

Public Control vs. Public Ownership.

"That of course is on the principle of public control, while the idea underlying the Hydro-Electric Commission is public ownership." The two systems may be put to the test in this district.

"Our reply to them was that we could not agree to anything of the kind, and that if the municipalities asked us to interfere we would do so. We are like the doctor; we don't go unless we are invited."

Already the Commission has been compelled to take action for, Mr. McNaught said, several of the municipalities have asked them to quote rates.

Commission Asks Merger for Rates.

"We have on our part asked the merger to quote us rates at which they would supply us power to be furnished by us to the municipalities, but so far we have received no definite answer."

"Can the merger refuse to supply power to the Commission?"

Cannot Expropriate.

"Oh yes, and we have no right to expropriate as they have a Dominion incorporation."

"Are there any powers in the district which the Commission could develop in case of refusal?"

"That I do not know."

It is possible that an offer may be made by the Commission to the merger to submit its rates to the Commission for approval.

Twelve Companies in it.

The combine is known as the Electric Power Company, Limited, and contains the following companies:

The Seymour Power and Electric Company, Limited.

The Peterborough Electric Railway Company.

The Peterborough Light and Power Company.

The Auburn Power Company of Peterborough, Limited.

The Trenton Electric and Water Company, Limited.

The Sidney Electric Power Company, Limited.

The Nipissing Electric Company, Limited.

Oshawa Electre Light Company, Limited

The City Gas Company, of Oshawa, Limited.

Cobourg Utilities Corporation, Limited.

Northumberland Durham Power Company, Limited.

Central Ontario Power Company, Limited.

The Electric Power Company derives its energy chiefly from the Seymour Power and Electric Company at Campbellford, and proposes to develop as speedily as possible a number of powers along the route of the Trent Valley Canal from Burleigh Falls to Trenton.

The present development from five points amounts to 10,000 h. p., and two other power-houses, having a combined capacity of 75,000 h. p. are now under construction. The maximum development is said to be 100,000 h. p.

DEATH IN LOVER'S KISS: A MARYLAND MYSTERY

CUMBERLAND, Md., Jan. 4.—States Attorney David A. Robb has begun his investigation into the perplexing death of Miss Grace Elosser and Charles Edward Twigg, the young couple who were found side by side on a sofa in the girl's home, dead, on New Year's night, the eve of their wedding day. They were the victims of a poison plot that is most baffling, but the theory is now advanced that the pair met their death through the medium of chewing gum which had been given to the bridegroom-elect in revenge, and which was saturated with cyanide of potassium.

It is believed that Twigg took a piece of the gum containing the deadly poison, and that he probably killed the young woman whom he had planned to make his wife through the medium of a kiss. It is thought that the gum may have been given to Twigg by some young woman with whom he had been friendly, and who preferred to see him dead rather than married to another woman.

The authorities now assert their belief in the theory that Twigg almost immediately after he placed the stick of chewing gum in his mouth leaned forward to kiss his sweetheart, and that the kiss communicated the poison to her lips. So unconsciously he had made the kiss of a lover the "kiss of death."

This theory is strengthened by the fact that the tips of the tongues of both Twigg and the young woman who was to have been his bride were red and inflamed, as if they had been burned or bitten. Cyanide takes immediate action.

Little of the poison has been found in the body of the young woman, while in the body of Twigg enough has been found to kill several persons.

Chemists are making an analysis of a package of gum found in the Elosser house from which a stick had been taken. A box of candy from which all the household partook is also being analyzed.

The members of the Elosser family are indignant that rumors are abroad reflecting on May Elosser, a sister of the dead girl. The police have learned that young Twigg at first paid court to May Elosser, and then jilted her for her sister Grace. It is stated that Grace and May had been unfriendly ever since. Twigg's courtship of the sisters was short. He met them only last October. He seemed at first to fancy May. May and Grace look enough alike to be twins.

DRUGGED AND WED, IN BOSTON WOMAN CHARGES

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 3.—A woman aged thirty-one yesterday said in the municipal court she did not know whether she was Mrs. William S. Dupree or Mrs. Patrick J. Farrell. She was the complainant against Farrell. She charged that he was her husband for six months, and that he had deserted her and had failed to provide for her support.

She said six years ago she met Dupree in Montreal. She said Dupree exercised an influence over her, that he was a hypnotist and mesmerist, and that she lost her self control by his influence, that she was carried over the railroads and down to a small town near St. Johnsbury, Vermont, where she said she was married in a strange house to Dupree. She did not know who married her but said she had been drugged. Later she was deserted.

She said that she met Farrell in this city less than six months ago, that he proposed to her and she accepted him. She said she was married under the name of Clare E. Dupree. Court ordered the charge dismissed.

CHANGED HER COURSE, ON WIRELESS ORDER

Wireless messages flashed across the Atlantic to the staunch steamer Monmouth plying last week towards St. John's harbor. By those crisp Marconi grams, the captain was urged to change his vessel's destination, to put on extra speed and to save $31,000 in customs dues by reaching Canadian shores before the old year died.

The thrilling situation and the race which followed to the port of Halifax concerned 5000 tons of beet sugar that is now coming to Montreal by rail. That sugar had to reach Canada by New Year's Day, so the captain was told.

But the Monmouth's oirginal destination was St. John, and she could not possibly reach that port by December 31. Urged by wireless, however, the captain veered his vessel's course and gave the order "high speed."

The Monmouth ploughed the billows and the captain looked anxious, fearing he would not reach Halifax in time. much coal was used but he realized that considerable coal can be purchased with $31,000, and the vessel herself responded nobly.

The lights of Halifax harbor were finally sighted New Year's Eve, just in time to get the vessel docked, and the sugar entered in the customs records before the church bells tolled out the Old Year. There was all-round gratification especially in the offices of the Canada Sugar Refining Company, Montreal, who thus saved $31,000. Already the sugar shipment, which had given rise to the thrilling situation, is enroute for Montreal over the I. C. R. rails.

Each year the sugar refineries may import 20 per cent of their total melt from foreign countries under the preferential tariff and by getting the sugar landed on December 31, the refinery had it entered under their proportion for last year, allowing them that much extra scope for this year.

CURRENT EVENTS.

First blizzard of the season this morning.

Economy, honesty and progress will be the watchword of the City Council for 1911.

Canada surely has a bracing climate. Rev. Peter Lindsay, aged 91, and Mrs. Bulman, aged 94, voted in the election at Toronto on Monday.

During the past year there were 8,499 buildings, costing about twenty-one millions of dollars, erected in Toronto. Evidently the Queen City is on the boom.

Add one more to your list of zero days during this delectable winter. The thermometer marked 8 below during the night, but it was 14 above zero at 8 a.m.

Canada's trade is expanding by leaps and bounds. The Canadian Northern will add two steamers to their Atlantic fleet, and the Allans will have two steamships of 20,000 tons each and 22 knots speed for service next year.

The Americans are beginning to clamor for the free admission of Canadian wheat into their market. So? Let them clamor, remarks the Kingston Standard. Suppose, however, instead of clamoring they come over to this side and do their milling here.

The financial result of the last Provincial Exhibition in Toronto was a net addition to the city treasury of $12,058.13. In presenting this sum to the city, Mr. Gooderham, President of the Exhibition, referred to the bad weather during the Exhibition last year and also the expense of building new green-houses. These things, he said, simply showed that nothing could kill the great Fair.

Kingston Whig: A re-sale of lots, formerly sold by the city of Belleville for non-payment of taxes, and through the expansion of the Grand Trunk's works, has suggested a little scandal. It broke out on the eve of the election, and it may be depreciated on that account.

Nothing of the sort, friend Whig. The scandal is not a very little one and it is not to be "depreciated" because the facts were ascertained while the election contest was on.

The Police Magistrate in Hamilton is after the gamblers. On the 30th of December last a raid was made upon what is known as "The Central Athletic Club," kept by one John Macdonald, who was arrested, tried and sentenced to four months in jail, and another three months in jail, one fined $100, and thirty-five young men frequenters of this gambling club thirty-five dollars each. A few more raids upon such demoralizing rendezvous in other cities would do no harm. Surely there are no such haunts of iniquity in Belleville. If there were the Chief would be after them.

CRUEL HUMAN BRUTE GETS HIS DESERTS

Edward Garrison of Elzevir Given Severe Sentence for Beating His Wife and Child--Six Months In The Central and Ten Lashes--The Woman's Pitiful Story--She Was Beaten, Abused, and Bitten

Six months in the Central Prison and to receive ten lashes was the sentence this morning meted out by Judge Deroche to a wife beater named Edward Garrison. The accused was arraigned before His Honor in the County Judge's Criminal Court charged with that he did in the month of December, 1910, in the Township of Elzevir, assault and beat his wife and young son, thereby causing grievous bodily harm.

Through his solicitor, Mr. W. J. Moore, the accused pleaded not guilty.

Mr. P. J. M. Anderson, County Attorney, prosecuted.

THE WIFE'S STORY.

Mrs. Garrison, who is a rather frail looking woman and the mother of nine children, testified that her husband on the night of Dec. 2nd abused her shamefully by beating her, and also biting her. Upon her arm and side still remain the marks of the treatment she received from her husband, who at the time of the assault was somewhat under the influence of liquor. Garrison did not use his young son so brutally as he did his wife, but beat the lad to such an extent that Mrs. Garrison was compelled to interfere, and then the brute went at her.

PRISONER'S DEFENCE.

The accused, in his evidence, stated that what he did was in self defence for the assault committed upon him.

THE JUDGE'S COMMENTS.

In finding the prisoner guilty and giving judgment, His Honor Judge Deroche characterized the action of Garrison as shameful. He said had much more severity been used the accused might have been charged with attempted murder. He assaulted and beat his wife in a terrible manner, and there was no excuse for his doing so. On other occasions he (the prisoner) had used brutal treatment towards his wife, to such an extent as to cause blood to run. Such treatment could not be dealt with lightly. The assault upon the boy was not so serious, but was bad enough. The sentence, as above recorded, was then pronounced and Garrison was taken to the cells below.

CHILDREN IN SHELTER.

In connection with this case it may be mentioned that of Garrison's nine children five are now wards of the Children's Shelter here.

EASTERN DAIRYMEN

Annual Convention Held At Perth, President Glendenning's Address

PERTH, Ont., Jan. 4.—The Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association opened its 34th annual meeting here this morning, and promptly passed a resolution to the effect "that the Dominion Government be respectfully but most strongly urged, in the negotiations now pending between Canada and the United States, to provide for complete reciprocal free trade between the two countries in all lines of dairy products."

J. W. Hyatt, Prince Edward County, and J. R. Anderson, treasurer, moved and seconded the resolution, which was adopted unanimously. Mr. Anderson argued that he would have had $3 a day more income from his 35 cows had he been free to sell the product across the border, while S. Blakely, of Cherry Valley, knew of those from the Bay of Quinte district, who after paying six cents a pound duty in the United States received more than did shipments to Great Britain. J. W. Wilson, cheesemaker, of Gananoque, said an open U. S. market would increase receipts to dairymen here.

THE ANNUAL REPORT.

President Glendenning, of Manila, was in the chair.

In his annual address he complimented the Ontario Government for giving free instruction, and said it had helped to bring about a system which gave Ontario, in the past season, the finest cheese that ever left Canada.

The greatest factor in the increase of milk this season was the good pastures that prevailed. The president thus concluded his annual address:

HOME CONSUMPTION GROWS.

"There is unfortunately a tendency to measure the progress of the dairy industry by the export trade. The export trade is only about twenty-five per cent. of our total production of milk. There is now a very large quantity of both butter and cheese going to the Western Provinces, where as only a few years ago they were shipping both butter and cheese from these provinces, and they have trebled and quadrupled their output during that time. The home consumption in the East is growing very largely. Such cities as Montreal and Toronto alone require an enormous increase every year to satisfy their needs.

"The high price of meats caused our people to turn their attention more to butter and cheese."

OLD CITIZEN DEAD

Daly Tryon Passed Away At Good Old Age of 72 Years

Mr. Daly Tryon, who resided with his niece, Mrs. Babcock, Kingston Road, passed away at an early hour this morning after being ill for some time. Deceased was 72 years of age. Mr. Tryon resided for years at Strathcona, whence he came to spend his remaining days here. Deceased had been for some years a member of the Methodist Church. His wife preceded him to the tomb some time ago. Surviving are two sons, Henry, of this city, and Harry, of Gananoque, and one brother, Mr. A. Tryon, of Kingston.

A RECORD YEAR

The Imperial Life's Excellent Statement Reflects Country'e Prosperity

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—The prosperity which has prevailed generally throughout the country during the past year is being reflected in a striking manner in the annual statements of our large financial and commercial concerns. A noteworthy example is that of the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, whose preliminary statement for the year ended December 31st, 1910, shows that the results of the company's operations in 1910 surpassed those of any previous year of its history.

The new assurances effected and policies revived amounted to $6,500,000, and exceeded by over one million dollars the company's best record in any one year. The total business in force now exceeds $20,000,000. During the year the assets were increased by over $800,000 and now stand at $6,117,000; the income from premiums and interest amounted to over $1,370,000, an increase of $165,000. A new record was also made in the amount of surplus earnings, out of which profits to policyholders are paid, the net surplus over and above all liabilities, including policy reserves, now amounting to over $770,000. It is also noted that the death losses were again below those which were to be expected according to the standard tables of mortality.

The rate of interest realized on the company's funds was 6.52 per cent, an increase of .40 over that earned in 1909. This favorable rate is due to the fact that about 65 per cent of the company's assets consist of first mortgages on improved farm lands in Western Canada.

The policy holders and others having interest in this strong, progressive company are to be congratulated upon the marked success which has uniformly characterized its operations, and especially the success of the year just closed.

Mr. G. W. Jarrell, the company's District Manager at Belleville, states that the business at his agency during the past year was satisfactory and prospects point to a greatly increased business in 1911.

SPIRITED DEBATES AT THE T. A. S.

Messrs. Peppin and Barret Were Winners-Other Debates To Take Place

At the last meeting of St. Michael's T.A.S., a very interesting and well contested discussion took place on the subject of reciprocity between Canada and the United States. Raymond Peppin and Frank Barrett upheld the affirmative of the proposition that Canada should have reciprocal trade relations with the United States, while the negative part of the argument was championed by Campbell St. Charles and Edward Lee. The speakers all proved themselves fully qualified to perform their tasks most creditably. They came to the contest well prepared and brought out during the discussion such an array of good sound arguments that the task of picking the winner became one of more than ordinary difficulty. There was quite a large audience present, and all were repaid for attendance by hearing four able and instructive addresses, on one of the most live questions of the day. Mr. St. Charles who was awarded the decision for the best speech, showed that he possesses in no small degree the qualities that are essential to successful public speaking. He is a coming orator. All present were also well pleased by the fine manly speech delivered by Ed. Lee, whose remarks were greeted with loud applause and rewarded by well merited praise. Mr. Lee was a close second for the honors of the evening, and he and his colleagues would probably have won the debate but for a slight misunderstanding as to the wording of the question, which left them greatly handicapped. Mr. T. J. Hurley, who was the judge, ably summed up the various arguments brought forward and awarded the victory to Messrs. Peppin and Barrett.

A public debate will be held in Trenton on the 8th inst. Messrs. C. C. St. Charles and J. V. C. Truaisch are the team chosen to represent Belleville on that occasion, and it is expected that a good sized bunch of members will take in the trip in order to help the boys to victory.

The next debate in Belleville will take place at the regular meeting of the society on the 15th, the subject being "Resolved, that country life is to be preferred to town life, considered physically, socially and morally." For the negative, Mr. Fred Meagher and Mr. Stephen Kinlin are the speakers; for the affirmative, Messrs T. J. Hurley and J. W. O'Sullivan.

Moore. A hitherto unpublished poem by Goldwin Smith is a feature of the issue. Commercial Travelers Complain

The commercial travellers have been holding an indignation meeting at which they complained bitterly of the want of hotel accommodation in local option towns, and passed the following resolution:

"That we, the members of the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada in annual meeting assembled, do hereby instruct our Board for 1911 to urgently press upon the Ontario Government, (1) the necessity that exists, in the interests of the travelling public, for the inspection and regulation of all hotels in municipalities adopting local option by-laws.

"(2) The Government's responsibility to the travelling public in permitting municipalities to pass local option by-laws without at the same time making provision for hotels to be under public inspection and control.

"(3) The duty of the Government to assume direct control of all hotels, catering to supply the public with meals and board, or to enact that all municipalities passing local option by-laws shall assume the responsibility of inspection and control of all houses for the accommodation of the public."

The demand upon the Government is going a little too far in a country where freedom is supposed to exist. In the general discussion that followed, in which the Government came in for a few raps, which was not endorsed by all present, Mr. E. Fielding, treasurer of the Association, said that the Government had already been interviewed, and although he was not a supporter of the Whitney Government, he believed that they had done more to improve the hotel accommodation than any past Government. Mr. Fielding said that the policy of Mr. Hanna was that unless the hotelkeepers lived up to the law their license was cancelled.

Anarchists le Britain

The right of asylum which has been accorded by Great Britain to political refugees from foreign countries has led to results which, it can hardly be said correctly, were unexpected. Protected by the laws of England, the political offenders have been followed to their safe asylum by the very scum of Europe, including the Russian Nihilists and the vilest of continental criminals, and gradually an exceedingly dangerous element has been introduced into the very heart of the metropolis—an element which has spread from its first rendezvous in Soho Square to Houndsditch and other parts in the east end of London. This motley crowd has been allowed to gather on Sundays and holidays in Hyde Park, Trafalgar Square and other public places, where they listened to inflammatory addresses from half-crazed demagogues, but so long as no overt act was committed the police simply moved them on after their speakers had closed their harangues.

Emboldened by this immunity, the criminals among the foreigners entered upon the career to which they had been accustomed, with the lamentable results which have been related in our telegraphic despatches during the last few days. The law has been set at defiance, its officers have been shot down, and the desperate criminals have perished like rats in a trap rather than surrender.

The effect of this outbreak it is not difficult to forecast. The people of Great Britain will demand such alterations in the law as will prevent foreign criminals and political offenders who resort to bomb throwing and other murderous devices from landing on the free shores of the British islands.

CRIMINAL CASES

Two Young Men Are Before Judge Fraleck This Afternoon

Before Judge Fraleck this afternoon two criminal charges were investigated. In both cases young men were in the criminal dock. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. W. J. Moore appeared for the accused, who live in the northern part of the county.

George McCullough was accused of stealing some grain from a neighbor and also, it is alleged, stealing some articles out of a barn.

Wm. McCaw was charged with stealing a horse. It is alleged that in the night he took a horse out of a stable belonging to a yeoman with whom he was at one time employed. McCaw, it is said, rode the animal away and next day was arrested as he was riding towards the place whence he had taken it.

Both pleaded not guilty to the charges. The cases were in progress as we went to press.

"ROOM FOR A LITTLE ONE."

By A. A. Hopkins.

James G. Speaight, known as the "child violinist," died suddenly in Boston a few nights ago, of heart disease. He was only six years old, but had successfully led orchestras, and was really a musical prodigy. Father and son retired early in the evening, the lad seeming bright and cheerful and not complaining of illness. But early in the night the father was awakened by the sound of the lad's voice, and he says he distinguished after waking, some such words as there: "Merciful God! make room for a little fellow." Supposing the lad was talking in his sleep, he spoke to him with the intention of arousing him, but received no answer. Then he became alarmed, and shouting to the boy, he discovered with grief and sorrow that he was dead.

"Merciful God! For a little one, room!
Hark to his prayer, in the midnight and gloom!
Crowded the way for the little one's feet—
Room for them there in the Beautiful Street;
Weary the journey from whither enticed—
Room in Thy rest, for the sake of our Christ!

"Room for a little one, out of the fold;
Room where the little ones never grow old;
Room in His bosom Who leadeth the sheep;
Room where no little ones wonder or weep;
Room where nought presses, to taint or debase;
Room in the light of Thy fatherly face!

"Room for a little one, breathing his prayer
Out on the night, only Faith for his care!
Here the air withers, and curses, and blights;
There by the smooth-flowing stream of delights,
Ever shall blossom his beautiful life
Room for him there beyond echoes of strife.

"Room for a little one, hardly astray!
Never from heaven far drifted away:
Only a step into sorrow and sin—
But a step backward, Thy presence to win;
Room for him there, in Thy love and Thy light—
There the 'Good Morrow!' and here the 'Good Night!'"

Though it is extravagant the substitution of cream for milk in making pumpkin pie will result in a most delectable desert.

A GENUINE BLIZZARD

Northwest Has Sent Lots Of Snow and Wind--Roads Heavily Drifted

But very few of our country friends visited the city to-day, owing to the fact that the country roads are badly drift-with snow. At about midnight last night snow commenced to fall quite heavily, accompanying which was a strong north west wind. This caused the "beautiful" to be carried in clouds and filling up in the roads all semblance of a track. Despite this state of affairs the various stages which visit the city daly, arrived here as usual, but all were somewhat behind time. During the day the situation was by no means improved.

The Musical Success.

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE."

Coming.

It is astonishing how few people know that many of the Mother Goose rhymes, so familiar in the nursery, were not originally written to amuse little folks. Take for instance the celebrated and familiar tale—"The Cat and the Fiddle" It was first written and published to hit at the extravagances of the nobility and the foremost men in palitics in the reign of Elizabeth. The "Virgin Queen" too, was not spared in the satirical handling of that simple little nursery rhyme. It is a matter of history that Elizabeth's ourt was celebrated both in speech and iving. The plain people looked upon these scenes of festivity as machinations of the devil, and dancing, especially, was viewed by them as one of his slyest arts to wean people from the right ourse. The cat in those days was lookd upon as a creature symbolical of witchcraft and evil, and hence as one of he workers of the devil's wiles. In the ampoon, which our present nursery hyme really originally was, the cat was he personification of the wickedness prevailing in the court circles. The ow was also aimed at the Queen herelf and was a thrust at her vaulting ambition and vanity, and is expressed n her jumping over the moon. The little dog who laughed to see the fun was a better thrust at the sycophancy of the attendants who danced at the heels of their sovereign. The line "And he dish ran away with the spoon" was meant to convey the result of all this wicked waste and extravagance, signifying that the working people of England would go hungry for porridge, or hat the porridge dish and spoon would be driven from the homes of the peor people.

These lampoons, or nursery tales, filled he place of cartoons of the present day, and have been taken as a theme upon which to found a big musical extravaganza, "The Cat and the Fiddle". Lyrics and music have been supplied by Carleton Lee Colby. A company of 40 people are promised, with Harry B. Watson at the head, Rose and Arthur Boylan, and several other musical comedy players.

"The Cat and the Fiddle" comes to Griffin's Opera House on Friday, January 6th.

The noisy boys appear
And holler with their faces,

You catch the conversation

They make it clear, we hope.

You couldn't get it plainer

And went at it insaner
To make you understand,
And if you pay attention
As idly passing by

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

CHAPTER IX

MRS. VANSITTART

The purser, faithful to his trust, had secured the ship's books. He alone, among the survivors of the Chinook, had brought a parcel of any sort from that ill-fated ship. The others possessed the clothes they wore, their money, and in some cases their trinkets.

Mr. Emmett suggested that a list of those saved should be compiled. Then, by ticking off the names, he could easily classify the inmates of the lighthouse and evolve some degree of order in the community.

It was found that there were thirty-seven officers and men, including stewards, thirty-three saloon passengers, of whom nineteen were women, counting the two little girls, and seven men and one woman from the steerage.

"It isn't usual on a British ship, for the crew to bulk so large on the list," said Mr. Emmett, huskily. "But it couldn't be helped. The passengers had to be battened down. They couldn't live on deck. We never gave in until the last minute."

"I saw that," said Brand, knowing the agony which prompted the broken explanation.

"An' not a mother's soul would have escaped if it wasn't for young Mr. Pyne," went on the sailor.

"Is that the name of the youngster who climbed the fore-mast?"

"That's him. It was a stroke of genius, his catching onto that way. He was as cool as a cucumber. Just looked up when he reached the deck an' saw the lighthouse so near. Then he asked me for a rope. Planned the whole thing in a second, so to speak."

"He is not one of the ship's company?"

"No, sir, a passenger, nevvy of Cyrus J. Traill, the Philadelphian millionaire. Haven't you heard of Traill? Not much of a newspaper reader, eh? There was a lady on board, a Mrs. Vansittart, who was coming over to marry old Traill, so people said, and the weddin' was fixed to take place in Paris next week. Young Pyne was actin' as escort."

The chief officer glanced down the purser's lists and slapped his thigh with much vehemence.

"No, by gosh! Here she is, marked O. K. Well, that beats the band."

"So the lad has discharged his trust to his uncle?"

Mr. Emmett was going to say something, but checked the words on his lips.

"Queer world," he muttered. "Queer world."

With that he devoted himself to planning out the watches. Soon he and the purser betook themselves to the depths with a roll-call. As they crept below gingerly—these sailor men were not at home on companion ladders which moved not when the shock came—they met Enid for the first time. She, coming up, held the swinging lantern level with her face. They hung back, politely.

"Please come," she cried in her winsome way. "These stairs are too narrow for courtesy."

They stepped heavily onward. She flitted away. Emmett raised his lantern between the purser's face and his own.

"What do you think of that?" he whispered, awestricken.

The man of accounts smiled broadly.

"Pretty girl!" he agreed, with crudely emphatic superlatives.

Emmett shook his head. He murmured to himself: "I guess I'm tired. I see things."

Enid handed an armful of dry linen to the damp, steaming women in the lower bedroom. She was hurrying out; someone overtook her at the door. It was Mrs Vansittart.

"Miss Brand," she said, with her all-sufficing smile, "give me one moment."

They stood in the dark and hollow-sounding stairway. The seas were lashing the column repeatedly, but the night's ordeal was nearly ended. Even a timid child might know now that the howling terror without had done its worst and failed. From the cavernous depths, mingling with the rumble of the storm, came the rhythm of a hymn. Those left in gloom by the withdrawal of Mr. Emmett's lantern were cheering their despondent souls.

Surprised, even whilst Enid awaited the older woman's demand, the listeners heard the words:

"Awake my soul, and with the sun
"Thy daily stage of duty run;
Shake off dull sloth, and joyful rise
To pay thy morning sacrifice."

The rough tones of the men were softened and harmonized by the distance. It was a chant of praise, of thanksgiving, the offering of those who had been snatched from death and from mortal fear more painful than death.

The singing ceased as suddenly as it began. Mr. Emmett and the purser were warning the first watch.

The interruption did not seem to help Mrs. Vansittart. She spoke awkwardly, checking her thoughts as though fearful she might be misunderstood or say too much.

"I am better," she explained, "quite recovered. I—gave up my bunk to one who needed it."

"I am sure we are all doing our best to help one another," volunteered Enid.

"But I am restless. The sight—of your sister—aroused vague memories. Do you mind—I find it hard to explain—your name is familiar. I knew some people—called Brand—a Mr. Stephen Brand—and his wife."

She halted, seemingly at a loss. Enid, striving helplessly to solve the reason for this unexpected confidence, but quite wishful to make the explanation easier, found herself interested.

"Yes," she said. "That is quite possible, of course, though you must have been quite a girl. Mrs. Brand died many years ago."

Mrs. Vansittart flinched from the feeble rays of the lantern.

"That is so—I think I heard of—of Mrs. Brand's death—in London, I fancy. But—they had only one child."

Enid laughed.

"I am a mere nobody," she said. "Dad adopted me. I came here one day in June, nineteen years ago, and I must have looked so forlorn that he took me to his heart—thank God!"

Another solemn chord of the hymn floated up to them:

"Let all thy converse be sincere,
Thy conscience as the noonday clear"

The rest of the verse evaded them. Probably a door was closed.

Mrs. Vansittart seemed to be greatly perturbed. Enid, intent on the occupation of the moment, believed their little chat was ended. To round it off, so to speak, she went on quickly:

"I imagine I am the most mysterious person living, in my early history, I mean. Mr. Brand saw me floating towards this lighthouse in a deserted boat. I was nearly dead. The people who had been with me were gone, either starved and thrown into the sea or knocked overboard during a collision, as the boat was badly damaged. My linen was marked 'E. T.' That is the only definite fact I can tell you. All the rest is guess-work. Evidently, nobody cared to claim me. And here I am."

Mrs. Vansittart was leaning back in the deep gloom, supporting herself against the door of the bedroom.

"What a romance!" she said, faintly.

"A vague one, and this is no time to gossip about it. Can I get you anything?"

Enid felt that she really must not prolong their conversation, and the other woman's exclamation threatened further talk.

"No, thank you. You'll excuse me, I know. My natural interest—"

But Enid, with a parting smile, was halfway toward the next landing, and Mrs. Vansittart was free to re-enter the crowded apartment where her fellow-sufferers were wondering when they would see daylight again. She did not stir. The darkness was intense, the narrow passage draughty, and the column thrilled and quivered in an unnerving manner. She heard the clang of a door above and knew that Enid had gone into the second apartment given over to the women. Somewhere, higher up, was the glaring light of which she had a faint recollection, though she was almost unconscious when unbound from the rope and carried into the service room.

And at that moment, not knowing it, she had been near to Stephen Brand, might have spoken to him, looked into his face. What was he like, she wondered. Had he aged greatly with the years? A lighthouse keeper! Of all professions in this wide world how came he to adopt that? And what ugly trick was fate about to play her that she should be cast ashore on this desolate rock where he was in charge? Could she avoid him? Had she been injudicious in betraying her knowledge of the past? And how marvelous was the likeness between Constance and her father! The chivalrous, high-minded youth she had known came back to her through the mists of time. The calm, proud eyes, the firm mouth, the wide expanse of forehead, were his. From her mother—the woman who "died many years ago," when she, Mrs. Vansittart, was "quite a girl"—the girl inherited the clear profile, the wealth of dark-brown hair, and a grace of movement not often seen in Englishwomen.

Though her teeth chattered with the cold, Mrs. Vansittart could not bring herself to leave the vault-like stairways. Once more the hymn-singers cheered their hearts with words of praise. Evidently, there was one among them who not only knew the words, but could lead them mightily in the tunes of many old favorites.

The opening of a door—caused by the passing to and fro of some of the ship's officers—brought to her distracted ears the concluding bars of a verse. When the voices swelled forth again she caught the full refrain:

"Raise thine eyes to heaven
When thy spirits quail,
When, by tempests driven,
Heart and courage fail."

Such a message might well carry good cheer to all who heard, yet Mrs. Vansittart listened as one in a trance, to whom the divinest promise was a thing unasked for and unrecognized. After passing through the greater peril of the reef in a state of supine consciousness, she was now moved to extreme activity by a more personal and selfish danger. There was she, a human atom, to be destroyed or saved at the idle whim of circumstance: here, with life and many things worth living for restored to her safe keeping, she saw imminent risk of a collapse with which the nebulous dangers of the wreck were in no way comparable. It would have been well for her could she only realize the promise of the hymn: "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

Not so ran Mrs. Vansittart's jumble of thoughts. The plans, the schemes, the builded edifice of many years, threatened to fall in ruin about her. In such bitter mood there was no consolation. She sought not to find spiritual succor, but bewailed the catastrophe which had befallen her.

It assuredly contributed to that "affliction which is but for a moment," that Constance should happen just then to run up the stairs towards the hospital. Each flight was so contrived that it curved across two-thirds of the superficial area allotted to the stairway. Anyone ascending made a complete turn to the right-about to reach the door of the room on any given landing and the foot of the ladder to the next.

Hence, the girl came unexpectedly face to face with Mrs. Vansittart. The meeting startled her. This pale woman, so thinly clad in the demi-toilette of evening wear on ship-board, should not be standing there.

"Is anything wrong?" she cried, raising her lantern just as Enid did when she encountered the sailors.

"No, no," said the other, passing a nervous hand over her face. Constance, with alert intelligence, fancied the dreaded recognition.

"Then, why are you standing here? It is so cold. You will surely make yourself ill."

"I was wondering if I might see Mr. Brand," came the desperate answer, the words bubbling forth with unrestrained vehemence.

"See my father?" repeated the girl. She took thought for an instant. The lighthouse-keeper would not be able to leave the lamp for nearly three hours. When dawn came, she knew he would have many things to attend to, signals to the Land's End, the arrangement of supplies, which he had already mentioned to her, and a host of other matters. Four o'clock in the morning was an unconventional hour for an interview, but time itself was topsy-turvy under the conditions prevalent on the Gulf Rock.

"I will ask him," she went on, hurriedly, with an uncomfortable feeling that Mrs. Vansittart resented her judicial pause.

"Thank you."

To the girl's ears the courteous acknowledgment conveyed an odd note of menace. If the eyes are the windows of the soul surely the voice is its subtle gauge. The more transparently simple, clean-minded the hearer, the more accurate is the resonant impression. Constance found herself vaguely perplexed by two jostling abstractions. If they took shape it was in mute questioning. Why was Mrs. Vansittart so anxious to revive, or, it might be, probe, long-buried memories, and why did her mobile smile seem to veil a hostile intent?

But the fresh, gracious maidenhood in her cast aside these unwonted studies in mind-reading.

"He has so much to do," she explained. "Although there are many of us on the rock to-night he has never been so utterly alone. Won't you wait inside until I return?"

"Not unless I am in the way," pleaded the other. "I was choking in here. The air here, the space, are so grateful."

So Constance passed her. Mrs. Vansittart noted the dainty manner in which she picked up her skirts to mount the stairs. She caught a glimpse of the tailor-made gown, striped silk underskirt, well-fitting boots. Trust a woman to see all these things at a glance, with even the shifting glimmer of a storm-proof lantern to aid the quick appraisement.

As the girl went out of her sight a reminiscence came to her.

"No wonder I was startled," she communed. "That sailor's coat she wears helps the resemblance. Probably it is her father's."

Then the loud silence of the lighthouse appalled her. The singing had ceased, or was shut off by a closed door. One might be in a tomb as surrounded by this tangible darkness. The tremulous granite, so cold and hard, yet alive in its own grim strength, the murmuring commotion of wind and waves swelling and dying in ghost-like echoes, suggested a grave, a vault close sealed from the outer world, though pulsating with the far-away existence of heedless multitudes. Thus, brooding in the gloom, a tortured soul without form and void, she awaited the return of her messenger.

Constance, after looking in at the hospital, went on to the service-room. Her father was not there. She glanced up to the trimming-stage, expecting to see him attending to the lamp. No. He had gone. Somewhat bewildered, for she was almost certain he was not in any of the lower apartments, she climbed to the little door in the glass frame.

Ah! There he was, on the landward side of the gallery. What was the matter now? Surely there was not another vessel in distress. However, being relieved from any dubiety as to his whereabouts she went back to the service-room and gave herself the luxury of a moment's rest. Oh, how tired she was! Not until she sat down did she realize what it meant to live as she had lived, and do all that she had done, during the past four hours.

Her respite was of short duration. Brand, his oilskins gleaming with wet, came in.

"Hello, sweetheart, what's up now?" he cried, in such cheerful voice that she knew all was well.

"That was exactly what I was going to ask you," she said.

"The Falcon is out there," he replied, with a side nod towards Mount's Bay.

Constance knew that the Falcon was a sturdy steam-trawler, a bull-dog little ship, built to face anything in the shape of gales.

"They can do nothing, of course," she commented.

"No. I stood between them and the light for a second, and they evidently understood that I was on the lookout as a lantern dipped seven times, which I interpreted as meaning that they will return at daybreak. Now they are off to Penzance again."

"They turned safely then?"

"Shipped a sea or two, no doubt. The wind is dropping, but the sea is running mountains high."

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings this morning were 800 cattle, 175 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs, and 100 calves. This being the first market held this year, and also the first since this day week, butchers naturally were well cleaned out of beef, consequently the demand for cattle far good, and, as the supply was not large, a firm feeling prevailed in the market and prices show little change. Choice steers sold at 5¾c to 6c, good at 5¼c to 5½c, and fair 5c, while choice cows brought 5c, good 4½c to 4¾c, fair 4c to 4¼c, common 3¼c to 3¾c, inferor 3c to 3¼c per lb., and bulls sold at from 3c to 4c, as to quality.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were small and prices ruled firm. The demand was only fair, as buyers in cost cases laid ample supplies away in cold storage earlier in the season for their winter trade. Sheep sold at 4¼c to 4½c, and lambs at 6¼c to 6½c per lb. The tone of the market for hogs was strong at the recent advance in prices, owing to the continued good demand from packers, and the small supplies coming forward. A brisk trade was done at sales of selected lots at $7.50 to $7.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. There were only a few calves offered which brought from $3 to $10 each, as to quality.

At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 31 were 2050 cattle, 1275 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 300 calves. The offerings on the market this morning were 250 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 25 calves. The demand for cattle, sheep and lambs was god, and the prices realized were much the same as those quoted above, while sales of selected lots of hogs were made freely at $7.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

A MAN thinks the cool, bright days of autumn were made for football. A woman knows they were intended for housecleaning.

A widow says husbands are like automobiles—you are apt to use one up learning how to run him.

The smarties' mission on earth must be to teach others self control.

None is so poor as the man who is touched for a ten.

If every one voted a bore were to hang himself, who would be left to view the catastrophe?

When a man never worries there is usually a woman around somewhere who does the job for him.

A man is always sensitive about his age till he gets old enough to be proud of it.

If our own follies looked as ridiculous to us as the follies of others look to us we would soon grow wise.

However, all the fellows up in the air are not aviators.

Not being able to make a hit is responsible for most of us missing many a good time.

The Difference That It Makes.

I used to think the man a crank
Who talked away about his kid
With language undergrowth as rank
As any in a forest hid.
But with one of my own on hand
His angle I can understand.

I own he wearied me a bit
Relating sayings smart and bright,
But now his ravings make a hit;
I listen with a strange delight.
And for an opening I wait
One on my baby to relate.

I spot him half a block away
And wait his coming without fear.
I know about what he will say,
And it is what I want to hear,
And he will have to listen then
My kidlet talk to hear again.

It gives to life a different twist
When you a wee one have to hold.
You gladly listen to the grist
Of childish stories, new and old,
The while you wait a chance to get
A few ones in about your pet.

Yes, on the whole, you like to know
The father of a baby bright
Who pours on you the overflow
Of baby doings day and night,
But he must fairly play the game—
Half time for him, for you the same.

Doing Them a Kindness.

"Do you belong to many of the college fraternities?"

"I am a member of the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Professors."

"That sounds good. How do you work it?"

"By staying away from classes, so they will not be humiliated by my failures."

His Winning Way.

"The women all like him."

"Yes."

"I wonder why?"

"He always engages them in an argument."

"Why is that?"

"And lets them win."

Taught Him the Tricks.

"So Billy and you have broken away."

"Yes; he has learned to love another."

"You ought to send him a bill."

"What for?"

"For giving him lessons."

Urgent Case.

"That fellow is going to the dogs."

"Do the dogs know it?"

"I guess not."

"What is the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals going to do about it?"

The Grafting Gent.

No busy little grafter
Will pause to think about
The sure and stern hereafter
When he will be found out.
He revels in the clover
While reveling is grand,
And when his day is over
He squeals to beat the band.

When things are coming easy
With gratifying haste
He is a creature breezy
And frank and open faced.
You cannot help admiring
His free and easy way
As with a zeal untiring
He shakes your hand away.

And in the twists and turnings,
The dodging here and there,
He looks upon his earnings
As strictly on the square,
And should we call in question
The things that he has done
He looks on the suggestion
As an insulting one.

When after years of plunder
The people call his bluff
And get him, for a wonder,
Red handed with the stuff
He thunders forth defiance
At those who make the move
And places his reliance
On what they cannot prove.

A Hair Dressing That Is Guaranteed

PARISIAN SAGE WILL MAKE YOUR HAIR LUSTROUS AND BEAUTIFUL.

Women of culture want a perfect hair dressing; one that is delicately scented and that will make the head feel better the minute it is put on. They want a dressing that is not greasy or sticky.

And above all they want a dressing that will make the hair lustrous and fascinating; that will kill the dandruff germs and banish dandruff and will stop falling hair and itching scalp.

Parisian Sage will do all these things, or money back.

Parisian Sage rids the scalp and hair of dandruff, makes the growth of hair profuse, and leaves a silky, fluffy luxuriant appearance.

WILSONS INVALIDS' PORT

(A la Quina du Pérou)

By its blood-making and reconstructive properties it will increase the quantity of the red blood cells, strengthen the heart, tone up the nervous system, bring back the appetite and re-establish the harmony of the vital functions.

Dr. J. M. ROGERS
Ingersoll, Ont., says:

"I found "Wilson's Invalids' Port" not only a pleasant wine to take, but a good blood builder as well. I now make it a practice when prescribing port, to specify "Wilson's Invalids' Port", and I am satisfied that my patients will get the results for which I am looking. So far as I know there is no other wine on the market at the present time that is its equal."

Dr. R. C. WEST
Woodstock, Ont., says:

"I have prescribed "Wilson's Invalids' Port" several times, and in every case the patient was delighted with it. I thoroughly believe that as an Invalid tonic it has no equal."

DREDGE BONES FROM THE MAINE

First Human Remains From Battleship Sunk In Havana Harbor.

HAVANA, Jan. 3.—The first human remains from the wreck of the old battleship Maine were brought to the surface to-day by a dredge. They consisted of two ribs and some small bones of the hand, and they were carefully placed in a special receptable to await the recovery of other parts.

The dredge also brought up some three-inch shells, a large quantity of coal and a portion of the coal bunkers, lying apart from the ship, which is considered as possibly confirmatory of the theory of an external explosion under the bunkers. This, however, cannot be verified without a further examination of the wreck.

The work on the hull is continuing without interruption, the men having expressed willingness to await the settlement of the question of over-due pay and other grievances.

SEVERAL TALK OVER ONE WIRE

Multiplex Telephony Is Now Declared to be Quite Practicable

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3.—Gen. Allen, the chief signal officer of the army, to-day annunced that as a result of experiments by the Signal Corps, the multiplex telephone is now practicable whereby several independent conversations may be carried on simultaneously over the same wire circuit.

Another important discovery, calculated to double at least the capacity of the exising telephone lines, is that is no longer necessary to use two wires, but that a single wire with "silent earth" connections, can be used for multiplex telephony.

The new system is entirely practicable and has long passed the experimental stage, as evidenced by the fact that a single wire circuit between the research labratory of the Signal Corps at the Bureau of Standards on the Heights north of Washington, and the Signal Corps Construction Labratory, at No. 1710 Pennsylvania avenue is now in daily use.

AFTER EFFECTS OF THE GRIP

It is fortunate that the grip epidemic this year is milder in its action than in previous years. This does not mean that it is less dangerous.

The after results of the Grip are apt to be exceedingly serious. Do not take chances—for the general weakness, and to allay all bronchial irritation after the fever has passed, nothing equals Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the health-giving properties of the cod's liver, with the grease eliminated and tonic iron added.

A lady from Long Branch, N. J., writes: "The Grip left me in a nervous weakened, run down condition. After taking three bottles of Vinol I am better and stronger than I have been for years and I cheerfully recommend Vinol to all who have been ill and need strength." (Name furnished on request.)

After Grip or any severe illness try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not restore your vitality and strength. J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

BOWSER A FAILURE

He Charges All to His Wife's Butting In.

AND SHE CALLS THE ROLL.

He Listens to the Causes That Spelled Defeat and Can't Come Back, Whereupon He Leaves the House in a Case of Sulks.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

MRS. BOWSER was in the hall to meet Mr. Bowser as he came home to dinner the other evening, but he scarcely looked at her as he hung up his hat and descended to the dining room.

"Has anything gone wrong at the office today, dear?" she asked as she took a seat at the table and realized that his grouch had appeared again.

"Certainly!" he briefly and gruffly replied.

"I'm sorry for it. I hope it's nothing serious."

"You needn't do any hoping. I've gone over things in my mind this afternoon, and the wonder is that I'm not in the poorhouse. You have done your best to send me there. Mrs. Bowser, the climax has come. I must have a very plain talk with you."

"Very well. What do you wish to talk about?"

"We will wait till after supper."

And from that moment until he had finished he refused to say another word. Mrs. Bowser told him of a dog-fight and an arrest and an accident, but he heard her with stern set face and uttered no word. It was only when the family room was reached that he turned to her with:

"We will now have the talk referred to. Haven't I always been an industrious man?"

"Why, certainly."

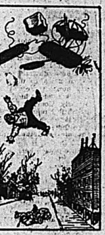
"Haven't I been saving and economical?"

"Reasonably so, yes."

"Why do you say reasonably?"

"Well, you have made some rather foolish bargains."

"Oh, I have? That is just the subject we are to talk about. If they have been foolish it is because you have butted in. I call your attention to the fact that when I wanted to run a dairy farm you opposed it. There was a sure fortune in my grasp, but I was foolish enough to listen to you and turn it down. I simply threw away tens of thousands of dollars."



FIRST AND LAST FLIGHT.

"Yes, you wanted to open a dairy," she replied. "You could have traded the house for forty acres of land. I convinced you after an hour's argument that it took cows to open a dairy. You hadn't figured on cows, fodder, help or other expenses."

That Hog Proposition.

"And I wanted to raise hogs," he went on as if she had not spoken. "Look at the present price of pork. I figured that 2,000 hogs would bring us in a fortune in three years, but you had to butt in again."

"I only asked you where the money was coming from to buy 2,000 pigs and keep them until they had become hogs."

"And where is there more money than in chicken farming? I had the chance of a lifetime, but you butted in again. Had I ignored you I should have been a millionaire today."

"Yes; a man who had lost everything at the game but a hundred old hens wanted to give you a great bargain. It was easy enough to figure out that every egg would cost us 10 cents. You made the figures yourself and called the man a scoundrel."

"Mrs. Bowser, I don't like your tone. Please remember you are talking to your husband. I had the best chance in the world to become an aviator. In fact, I made one flight. But for you I would now be skimming the clouds and reporters by the dozen would be interviewing me on the next war. Read how the aviators who never saw a company of soldiers on the march are airing their opinions on war and the part the flying machine is to play in it."

"Yes; you went up twenty feet and came down again," smiled Mrs. Bowser. "Isn't your back lame yet? If you want to do any skimming take the lawn mower. You can get a grip with your toes when you push that, and a five mile breeze doesn't interfere."

"I had an offer of a western sheep ranch, but you had to kick the milk pail over. Wool is higher than for twenty years, but where am I? Am I the owner of 100,000 sheep, the fleece of each one worth $3, saying nothing of the carcass? Trade all ready to be made, but you jumped in."

"Yes; I remember those sheep. A drought came, and most of them died of thirst and starvation. The few that saw the winter come on froze to death before New Year's day. I predicted some such thing, but I want no thanks."

"Didn't I invent a hair dye?" he demanded as he switched away from the frozen sheep.

"Oh, yes."

Bowser's hair dye—the best thing ever put on the market?"

"Yes."

"And I might have made thousands out of it but for you. You didn't want me to spend $10,000 advertising it, and of course it wouldn't go. Ah, what an idiot I was to let you discourage me!"

The Hair Dye Scheme.

"But you know that the only two persons that used it sued you for damages. I didn't say anything until then. The dye took one's scalp off, and you had to pay him $250. After that I couldn't see where the profit was to come in."

"Woman, are you to dispute everything I say? Isn't it sufficient that you have kept me down all these years?"

"Oh, I'm not disputing," she replied. "I'm just correcting a few of your errors. Do you remember that you once wanted to trade this house for a sawmill?"

"Indeed I do. That's where you knocked me out again. That mill would have paid me $10,000 a year right along."

"Yes? I didn't make any discouraging figures that time. I simply asked you where the saw logs for the lumber were coming from, and you found out there were none nearer than fifty miles. You have got to have saw logs to run a sawmill. You can't use it for a cider mill."

"Mrs. Bowser, I set out to say"—

"Yes, I know, but you once wanted to invest $5,000 in a fire escape."

"And you butted in!" he shouted.

"I simply advised a trial before buying. You got a man to experiment, and he came down with a run and broke his leg. How much damages did you pay?"

"Woman," he said after taking three or four turns across the room, "we will drop this matter until another time."

"And you were going to pay $3,000 for a recipe to make sparkling champagne out of root beer or something," she continued.

"Never! Never!"

"And would have done so had I not called your attention to the pure food law. You were surely in the hands of a rascal."

Another Fool Thing.

"I say we will drop the subject."

"Yes, in a moment. Then you were going to manufacture imported jams from apple cores and peelings. You had your money drawn from the bank when I saved you."

"Mrs. Bowser, am I the head of this house?"

"And then a swindler wanted to get you into the fireproof paint business. He gave his word that nothing painted with his paint could burn, and you were satisfied to invest when I told you to try it with a board in the furnace. That board made the best kind of kindling."

"Madam, another word and I leave the house!" said Mr. Bowser as he started up.

"Just a few more. Don't you remember that chap who persuaded you that starch and claret wine could be made from turnips? You were all ready to invest when"—

Mr. Bowser went down the hall and reached for his hat and passed out into the night. He had a feeling that he had come out second best again, and this was further strengthened by hearing one female pedestrian say to another:

"Yes; he looks sorrowful and heartbroken, but you needn't pity him. He's had a row and walked out of the house, and now he's wondering how he can walk back again."

The Woodstock Enquiry Elicits Charges of Strange Conduct

B. B. McCarthy Is Accused of Having Shared a Rake-Off on Hardware With His Father—Charles Sutherland Charged With Refusing to Sign a Bridge Contract Until He Was "Sweetened."

Woodstock, Jan. 5.—Other figures besides M. T. Buchanan were yesterday drawn into the drag net of the Oxford County "graft" enquiry. B. B. McCarthy, late chairman of the purchasing committee of the county council, was charged with having jointly shared a $55.09 rake-off with his father on a $321.06 sale of picks, wheelbarrows, shovels, etc., by Howden & Co. of London to the county.

Charles Sutherland, chairman of the good roads committee, was charged with having refused to sign a contract with the Hamilton Bridge Co. until he was "sweetened" to the extent of $50.

E. L. Sutherland, ex-treasurer of the Township of West Zorra, was confronted with a statement that he had slipped two gold sovereigns into the deputy reeve's pockets at a time when his resignation was about to be requested.

Buchanan's alleged attempt to personally acquire the Ingersoll-Port Burwell toll road while he was in the county council and knew that the county must buy it, was further gone into, and a new charge was made that the "county boss" made a flying trip to Port Huron to get in ahead of the purchasing committee, with a proposal to the Port Huron Thresher & Engine Co. that he could secure them an order for wagons if they would guarantee him a commission.

An enormous array of missing links have confronted the crown investigators since the enquiry began, and several of the rumors cannot be thoroughly cleared on that account.

Seven very material witnesses have died since the dubious affairs were enacted; four or five have moved to distant American cities, and to-day Counsel E. F. B. Johnston ran up against a ledger with the very leaves torn out that were to throw light upon the Ingersoll-Port Burwell road deal. The missing leaves contained Buchanan's printing account with The Ingersoll Tribune.

Charles White, manager of the Imperial Bank, Ingersoll, was asked if he had heard of a circular sent to shareholders of the road by one M. Thomas, telling them that if they would deliver their shares at the bank they would be paid something like 80 cents on the dollar.

Witness had heard of it, but had never seen one. Popular rumor had it that M. Thomas was none other than Mitchell Thomas Buchanan. He had no man doing business with the bank by the name of M. Thomas, and had asked Buchanan concerning the reports. "Buchanan told me I had no right to make any such insinuations."

E. B. Baille, who was then proprietor of The Ingersoll Tribune, was asked if he could remember having printed any circulars for Buchanan in 1904, and when Counsel Johnston examined The Tribune Ledger he discovered that pages 220 to 229 had been torn out, and these had chronicled the account wanted, according to the index.

"Why are those pages missing?"

"I can't say."

"Who had control of it besides yourself?"

"Nobody."

"Then you are responsible for the missing leaves?"

"I don't know. I left that book in the office for my successor in 1905."

"It is strange," sighed Mr. Johnston. "We come here with various questions to ask men who had a great deal to do with these transactions and find the leaves missing, books dead as well as men."

Resuming, Mr. Baille said he had no knowledge as to whether that circular was printed in his office or not.

E. L. Smith, who now owns The Tribune, produced the missing ledger sheets. He said that Buillie had torn them out and left them with him, taking away the book. They showed that Buchanan had 500 circulars printed on Feb. 25 and 250 on Aug. 30. He could not remember if either batch was signed M. Thomas.

The Blenheim bridge deal was taken up. James Vance of the Hamilton Bridge Co. swore that Charles Sutherland, chairman of the good roads committee, had refused to sign a contract with him. Later witness had paid Sutherland five $10 bank notes, for which no receipt was given, and the contract was signed.

"It did not take long to get the signature once you coughed up the money?"

"No."

"And I suppose there was no question in your mind as to what the money was paid for; it was not a contribution to any charitable institution outside the Sutherland family?"

"No."

It was with great reluctance and much arguing that N. C. McCarthy, general merchant of Thamesford, was induced to tell that the county's purchasing committee, of which his son and business partner was chairman, had bought $391.96 worth of shades, gasoline, barrows, hammers, augers, bits and pick handles through him, on which he and his son got $55.09 "clear velvet," from Howden & Co. of London, who supplied the goods. Mr. Johnston got at it by enquiring as to a credit note for that amount, which the London firm had forwarded to him after the county had paid them for the goods.

"They didn't tell me what it was for," he insisted.

Judge Snider: "For goodness sake, witness, out with it. You know what it was for."

"I suppose it was for that," faltered witness.

"And your son, who was chairman of the committee, got half," put in Mr. Johnston.

"Yes."

Then it was elicited from him that he supposed it was a "rake-off" on the order. It was never entered in the books. He considered it an outside deal. The check came to himself personally.

F. A. Howden, head of the London firm, was called, and a note was produced from him, saying that he was too ill to attend, which Mr. Johnston refused to accept as sufficient reason for his absence, and Judge Snider instructed Mr. Howden's emissary that a more satisfactory reason must be forthcoming by to-day or a fine would be imposed and a bench warrant issued.

Canadians Honored.

Boston, Jan. 5.—Of twenty students at Harvard divinity school who have just been given awards of fellowship and scholarship for 1910-1911, three are graduates of Toronto University and residents of Canada.

The Canadians thus honored, leading Americans representing many parts of the United States, are W. T. Brown, of Lakefield, Ont., a graduate of Toronto University 1907, who received a scholarship award; Wm. E. M. Aitken of Courtwright, Ont., graduate of Toronto, 1908, and George Buckingham of Stayner, Ont., also a graduate in Toronto's '08. Both the latter received the Edward Hopkins' students of divinity awards.

Ignited Passenger's Hair.

New York, Jan. 5.—A flash of blue green fire which followed the short circuiting of a motor in a Brooklyn car ignited first the hair and then the clothes of Mrs. F. L. Piederman, who was sitting next the front door. The fifty passengers were nearly paralyzed with terror, as the only light in the darkened car came from the uncanny flashes of electric fire darting here and there. At the height of the excitement a policeman fought his way through the aisle, and yanking off his great coat, wrapped it around Mrs. Piederman, smothering the flames.

Magistrate Love Dead.

London, Ont., Jan. 5.—Police Magistrate Francis Love died at 7.15 o'clock last evening of pernicious anaemia, after an illness extending over several months.

Mr. Love was born in Scotland sixty years ago, and came to Canada with his parents when two years of age. He went to school in London. He studied law in Guelph, returning to London later. He was appointed police magistrate eleven years ago. Mr. Love was formerly very active in athletic sports, and was very popular as a magistrate.

To Oppose Eight Hour Day.

Montreal, Jan. 5.—The council of the Montreal Board of Trade yesterday decided to strongly oppose the legislation introduced into Parliament by A. Verville, M.P., providing an eight hour day on all public works. The council takes the ground that the provisions of the act shut out the majority of the manufacturers from competing for Government contracts, and, by decreasing the working hours of available men, intensify the lack of work where such already exists.

Await Reply From Ecuador.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The agreement of Peru to submit its boundary dispute with Ecuador to The Hague tribunal was received at the State Department yesterday in a telegram from American Minister Coombs at Lima. The United States, Argentina and Brazil, the mediators in the controversy, are now awaiting a reply from Ecuador, which so far has given no hint as to whether or not The Hague arbitration proposition will be accepted.

Winnipeg, Jan. 5.—The Garment Workers' Union have given permission to twenty-five members locked out by the Manitoba Clothing Co. for refusing to make uniforms for strike-breaking street railway employes, to return to work as individuals in the company's "open" shop. They will still retain membership in the union.

STEERAGE CONSPIRACY

Thirteen Steamship Lines Are Indicted at New York.

Charge Is Made That They Organized a Board Called the Atlantic Conference Where They Pledged Themselves to Keep Up the Rate For Steerage Passages, and Kill Out Lines Outside the Ring.

New York, Jan. 5.—The Federal Government brought suit here yesterday under the terms of the Sherman anti-trust law, in the United States Circuit Court of the Southern District of New York, against thirteen of the principal transatlantic carriers, estimated to control 90 per cent. of the steerage traffic, worth to them $55,000,000 a year. Twelve officers of the defendant companies, all resident in America, are also named as co-defendants.

These thirteen companies, the Government charges, entered into an illegal contract on Feb. 5, 1908, at London, England, by which they constituted themselves the Atlantic Conference, with power to apportion all traffic pro rata, impose heavy fines on members of the conference for violation of any of the articles of agreement and wage cut-throat competition against all lines outside the conference.

Suit was brought by Henry A. Wise, United States district attorney, acting under instruction from Attorney-General Wickersham, and in its petition the Government prays the court to "enjoin the defendants from further agreeing, combining, conspiring to injure or destroy the business of any person or corporation engaged in the business of carrying steerage passengers between points in the United States and Europe. Further, that each, every and all of the defendants' steamship lines be forbidden either to enter or clear any of their vessels at or from the port of New York, or any other port of entry in the United States, or any of its possessions, so long as they shall continue to operate under the aforesaid alleged unlawful combination or conspiracy."

The defendant companies, their capitalization and the ports between which they chiefly ply, are as follows:

Allan Line Steamship Co., Ltd., plying between Liverpool, Boston and Philadelphia and Glasgow and Montreal, capital $3,220,000.

International Navigation Co., a holding company, capital $120,000,000.

The Anchor Line (Henderson Bros.) Ltd., plying between New York and Glasgow, capital $2,875,000.

C.P.R. Co., plying between Montreal and Liverpool, capital $200,000,000.

Cunard Steamship Co., Ltd., plying between New York and Boston and Liverpool, capital $10,000,000.

British and North Atlantic Steam Navigation Co., Ltd.

Hamburg-American Line, plying between Hamburg, New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, capital $31,250,000.

Holland-American Line, plying between New York and Rotterdam, capital unavailable.

North German Lloyd, plying between New York and Bremen, capital unavailable.

Red Star Line, plying between New York and Liverpool.

Russian East Asiatic Steamship Co., Ltd., plying between New York and Libau, capital unavailable.

Shorten Hotel Hours.

Toronto, Dec. 5.—Ald. McCarthy is thinking of introducing into council a motion to shorten the hours for the sale of liquor. There was some talk of a resolution of the kind last year, but nothing came of it.

The alderman frankly admits that he is in a mood to attempt reprisals on the liquor interests, because he believes it was their activity which made the fight for head of the poll in the sixth ward so close.

It is doubtful whether there is a sufficient majority of decided cold water advocates in council to carry such a resolution. The strong blue-ribboners are Controllers Spence and Hocken, Ald. Hilton, Yeomans, Weston, Graham, May, McCarthy, McBrien and Baird.

Policeman Was Shot.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—With the resumption of picketing the fifth killing in the garment workers' strike took place here Tuesday.

Fred. Reinhardt, 35 years old, a special policeman, hired to guard strike-breakers, employed by Hart, Schaffner & Mark, was shot at Douglas boulevard and South avenue. He died in the patrol wagon while on the way to hospital.

Railing Gave Way.

Guelph, Jan. 5.—Mrs. Thomas Benson was the victim of a fatal accident Tuesday at the residence of James Blakely at Everton. The unfortunate woman was coming down some steps, grasping the railing at the side to assist her, when suddenly the railing gave way, causing her to fall very heavily. She fractured her skull, which resulted in her death a few hours later.

Regulation of Aviators.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 5.—Two unusual features of Governor Baldwin's initial message to the Legislature are recommendations for legislation providing for the registration and supervision of flying machines and dirigible balloons and the extension of the elections privileges to women.

Oil Stove Exploded.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Jan. 5.—Fire caused by the explosion of an oil stove damaged Philip Lococo's fruit warehouse last night. No one was in the building when the explosion occurred.

Italian Railroads Blocked.

Rome, Jan. 5.—A very heavy snowfall has interrupted railway communication with the north.

STILL IN MINE.

Workmen at Sydney Have Not Found Bodies of Deputies.

Sydney Mines, N.S., Jan. 5.—There is mourning and sorrow here over the loss of eight brave men in the explosion in No. 3 mine of the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Co. The rescuing party is working its way into No. 13 landing, where it is supposed the deputies, Ferguson and Purchass, started on their morning examination. Big falls of stone have interrupted the progress of the search party, in fact No. 14 landing is completely closed, and the work of removing the debris is puzzling the officials. Accompanied by Superintendent Brown, Thomas Cantley, vice-president of the company, visited the scene of the disaster. "This is one of our unlucky moments," he said, "but we are not discouraged by this calamity. Our workmen have stood together manfully and fought the battle against great odds. To those friends bereaved of husband or brother I will say that the company will meet their demands cheerfully."

In a drizzling rain scores of men and women are standing around the pit head waiting every moment to hear the news of the recovery of the bodies of Ferguson and Purchass. Mrs. Ferguson, with her six children, met the writer, and in a flood of tears expressed her anguish and hope for the delivery of her husband. A small boy clung to her clothing and asked: "When will papa be home?"

All day scores of men were trying to remove the walls of stone. Manager Hill, who is in charge of No. 3 colliery, cannot account for the explosion.

W. R. Travers at Liberty.

Toronto, Jan. 5.—Wm. R. Travers, vice-president and general manager of the Farmers' Bank, is once more at liberty. He was admitted to bail by Magistrate Peter Ellis at the jail at 8 o'clock last night, upon a further bond of $20,000, furnished by A. M. Orpen, who already stood as bondsman upon the earlier charge of making false returns to the Government. This places Mr. Orpen under bonds totaling $40,000 for Mr. Travers' appearance in the Police Court to-morrow morning, and effectually puts a stop to the rumor that Mr. Orpen was about to surrender Mr. Travers upon the original bond when the second charge, that of theft of $40,000, was laid.

The bail was that set by Crown Attorney Corley at Travers' arraignment upon the second charge, and was arranged by H. H. Dewart, K.C., counsel for Mr. Travers, who has spent four days in the cells of the Yonge street police station and the jail. It is understood that this will allow Mr. Travers his liberty until the case is opened up in court, until which time no further informations will be laid.

Will Deal Directly With Knox.

Ottawa, Jan. 5.—Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. Wm. Paterson, who leave for Washington to-day to continue reciprocity negotiations, state that on this occasion they will deal directly with Secretary Knox, and, if occasion arises, President Taft will also join the conference. It was remarked when the conference was held in Ottawa some months ago that the United States did not send delegates of the same rank as the Canadian commissioners.

Two other Canadian Ministers, Sir Allan Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, and Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, will also leave for Washington to-day to discuss the question of the fisheries on boundary waters, some phases of which were left to be mutually arranged by the two countries. With the Ministers will go their wives and daughters, who, with secretaries and chief officers of departments, will constitute a regular Canadian descent upon Washington.

Few Escaped.

Mexico City, Jan. 5.—Fire and panic which occurred while a New Year religious celebration was in progress in a church on a Hacienda, near San Luis Polosi, cost the lives of 17 and serious injury to more than 80, chiefly women and children. A candle fell from its socket and ignited a quantity of dry moss with which the building was decorated. Of those who escaped death by burning or suffocation many were killed or injured by being trampled in the frantic rush to escape through the narrow entrance. Few escaped.

Cardinal Must Pay Damages.

Paris, Jan. 5.—The Court of Appeals yesterday confirmed the decision of the civil tribunal at Rheims, which condemned Cardinal Ludovic Lucon, Archbishop of Rheims, to pay $100 damages to the Public School Teachers' Association.

The cardinal was convicted on Feb. 25, 1910, of attempting to injure the public schools by signing an episcopal letter forbidding the use in the schools of certain text books to which the church objected.

Canada Will Not Delay.

Ottawa, Jan. 5.—Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways, stated yesterday that the Government will not delay in implementing its part of the treaty with the United States for the establishment of a commission to deal with and control international traffic matters. The treaty does not require to be ratified by the Canadian Parliament.

Railways Fined.

Philadelphia, Jan. 5.—Judge Holland, in the U. S. District Court yesterday, inflicted fines of $40,000 each on the Philadelphia and Reading Railway, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., and the Bethlehem Steel Co., charged with unlawful rebating. The defendants announce that they will appeal the case to the Supreme Court.

Aeroplanes Burned.

Breslau, Germany, Jan. 5.—Fire last evening destroyed three aeroplanes and five hangers at the Wilhelmsruhe Aerodrome. An explosion occurred in the benzine tanks. Incendiarism is suspected.

INQUEST AT DRESDEN

Coroner's Jury Sharply Criticizes Inspection of Hose.

Witnesses at Inquest Into the Death of ex-Mayor Hicks Testify That Fire Protection Well Did Not Contain a Drop of Water and Mud Drawn Into the Hose Prevented Quick Work.

Dresden, Ont., Jan. 5.—The coroner's jury enquiring into the death of ex-Mayor D. V. Hicks, killed at the fire here on Sunday, Dec. 25, concluded its work at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, bringing in a verdict that the death of the deceased was caused by an explosion of heat and gases accumulating in the attic of R. Aiken's store. The cause of the fire is unknown to the jury. The verdict adds that a proper inspection of the condition of the fire hose, engine and wells would have prevented the loss of property. Dr. Wiley presided and Crown Attorney Smith conducted the investigation. The Fuel and Light Co. was represented by O. L. Lewis, Chatham, while G. E. Weir appeared for the town of Dresden and several private individuals. Messrs. Edwards, Toronto, and Grant of Listowel, were present for the underwriters.

Twenty-seven witnesses were heard, and the principal evidence being from members of the fire department. They testified that the well supposed to furnish water for the fire protection of the business section of Dresden contained not a single drop of water on the night of the fire. These wells were supplied by an intake pipe from the Sydenham River.

When the fire department reached the scene of the fire it was found that the well expressly sunk for the protection of the business section did not contain one drop of water when the fire engine was started, the result that only a quantity of mud was drawn into the hose.

The fire department then rushed to the river, and placed the hose in the water. The fire by this time had gained great headway, and when the engine was again started it was discovered that very little water could be drawn because the hose was plugged with mud that had been sucked in from the well.

Chief Hoyles stated that it was a part of his duty to inspect the wells. The last inspection he made of the business section well was in June last.

Clerical Hostility Resented.

Montreal, Jan. 5.—The Liberal papers of this province are day after day complaining of the hostility of the clergy. The other day La Presse complained that an Oblate father had denounced that paper as unfit to be placed in the hands of the people, while La Patrie lodged a complaint with the archbishop to the effect that a Jesuit father had used hostile language against that newspaper. Yesterday Le Canada says that the parish priest of St. Narcisse from the pulpit asked his people to read Le Devoir, as it was an independent paper, while in another column Le Canada says: "In an educational establishment of this city the reading of Le Canada is strictly forbidden, under threat of severe punishment, yet at the same time no less than forty copies of Le Devoir are received. This information comes to us," says Le Canada, "from people of good faith."

Contrary to Immutable Tradition.

Paris, Jan. 5.—The five academies which make up the Institute of France met in joint session yesterday to discuss the question of the eligibility of women for membership which has been raised as the result of the strongly-supported candidacy of Mme. Curie for the Academy of Science.

A long and animated debate arose, and a resolution was adopted by a vote of 85 to 52, that the election of women was contrary to immutable tradition, which it would be wisest to respect. At the same time the assembly recognized that its decision was not binding on the different academies as separate units.

Gallagher Sentenced.

Jersey City, Jan. 5.—James J. Gallagher, who attempted to kill Mayor Gaynor as he was about to sail for Europe last August, was found guilty for atrocious assault with intent to kill Street Cleaning Commissioner William Edwards of New York, who was shot while attempting to aid Mr. Gaynor. Justice Swayne sentenced Gallagher to twelve years in states prison at Trenton, "and further until the cost of prosecution is paid."

Fell Overboard.

New York, Jan. 5.—On her arrival at City Island yesterday, on her way from Restigouche, Que., with lumber, the schooner Rothesay reported that on Dec. 21, during a heavy northeast snowstorm, 75 miles off Cape Cod, Arthur Johnson, aged 22, of Jordan River, N.S., fell overboard and was drowned.

BELLEVILLE BEAT COBOURG BY A LARGE MAJORITY

Local Intermediates Showed Good Form—Visitors Were Outclassed—Score Was 10 to 4—Smal Crowd Witnessed Home Team's Triumph—Story of The Game and How it Was Played

It is often the unexpected that happens, and this was truly the case last night, when Belleville's Intermediate hockey team defeated Cobourg to the tune of 10 to 4. The general impression in the city yesterday was that the Cobourg team would secure an easy victory over the local aggregation, but happily it was a wrong impression. It was not known how the local team would play together, from the fact that last night was the first time the players selected had appeared on the ice together. Nevertheless they played like Trojans and landed a well earned victory. The unfortunate part of the game was the fact that there was not a large attendance of spectators, but those who were present were not stinted in their applause. It was within a few minutes to nine o'clock when Mr. F. H. Sproule, of Toronto, the official referee, rang the bell calling the teams to the centre of the rink. It was then seen that the line-up was as follows:—

Belleville—		Cobourg—
Deacon	goal	Paton
Gilbert	point	Hand
Brown	cover point	Nicholson
Bedboro	rover	Lavis
Symons	centre	Payne
Whalen	right wing	Crowther

After the referee had, as usual, addressed the players, the puck was thrown upon the ice and both teams at once jumper into the game. The puck was soon taken to the vicinity of Cobourg's goal, and in less than two minutes' actual play the first goal was secured by a member of the Belleville team. When five minutes' actual play had been covered, to the delight of the audience a second goal was secured by a second player. Cobourg at this juncture made a determined effort to check the Belleville aggregation, who were certainly going strong, and temporarily did so, as they found the net, securing their first goal. The local players, however, were not at all disheartened, and within a few minutes had added two more goals to their score. When half time had been reached the score was 5 to 3 in favor of Belleville. It was a rather strange coincidence that in the second half of the match the score was identical with that of the first half, and the goals scored in the same rotation.

The play by the memners of the local team was so evenly balanced that it would be difficult to make a comparison of their plays. Gilbert was certainly the right man in the right place, and at times gave a fine exhibition of hockey, showing his old-time form. Bedboro is certainly a good stick handler, and was ably supported on the forward line by Symons, Whalen and Patterson. Brown at cover point held that position ably and Deacon at goal was all right, stopping some well-directed shots.

The referee was certainly upon his job, keenly detecting the off-sides. He was also determined, so far as he was concerned, to prevent any rough play, penalizing the players quite frequently to the extent of 2 minutes each. In this regard Belleville players seemed to be the greater offenders, as during the course of the game no less than nine penalties were handed out to the local men, while six of the Cobourg players were sent to the fence for a rest.

The play throughout was devoid of roughness, and was, on the whole, one of the cleanest games played here. The ice was in fine condition, owing to the severe cold weather, and this certainly was conducive to good play.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

The game was one that cannot but help the Intermediate team in future games of having a strong following to witness them play.

On Monday night next the swift Intermediate aggregation from Trenton will be herer and a fine exhibition of hockey will no doubt be given.

The officials for the game were as follows: Goal umpire for Belleville, W. Cochrane; for Cobourg, R. Russell; penalty time keepers, W. Allen, of Belleville, and Dr. Brown, of Cobourg; time keepers for actual play, Mr. Labarge for Belleville and J. Brown for Cobourg.

HOCKEY NOTES.

Belleville's Intermediates are off to a good start. Their work last night surprised their opponents and gratified their friends.

—o—

To-night's game between the Belleville and Port Hope professionals will be a sharp one. The people from the lakeside town are brimful of confidence in their team. They will be welcome, especially if they "come for wool and go home shorn," as many other visitors on similar errands have been in the past.

—o—

The Kingston Whig, in a fair report of Monday night's game, says:

Frontenacs were compelled to extend themselves greatly during the first half, as Belleville kept coming down hard and fast. The champions added four more goals to their score sheet, the first ending 6 to 0 in favor of the Kingston boys.

In the second half, Belleville showed great form, and pressed Marchand hard. "Ray" was in fine fettle, however, and turned aside many shots that looked like sure goals. Belleville's goal tender also played a magnificent game, and, combined with the sterling play of the Belleville point, saved the Quinte Bay boys a great number of scores.

All of Belleville's team played a strong game, and although the score was one-sided the contest was not. If Belleville was as capably coached as Frontenacs they would go a long way in the O.H.A. championship struggle.

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vienna, W. Va.—"I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Emma Wheaton, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

ALL HAIL!

[The fashion page tells us that the hobble skirt has brought the round garter back into use.]

Gramercy for thy benison, O thou cussed hobble skirt!
Although our shapes are only drapes that irritate and hurt,
Although the hats you travel with are arbors that displace
The sunshine that should play upon the flower of her face,
Although you bind her graceful stride within a silken lock
And do a lot of other things the paragraphers knock,
We thank thee yet, for thou hast won, no matter what they lack,
And brought the dear, insanitary old round garter back!

Among the cherished keepsakes of the nineteenth century beaux,
Beside the satin slipper and the scentless, faded rose,
The sacredest of treasures prying eyes could bring to view
Was the little frilly silken circlet, pink or baby blue.
One smiles—or, no; one blushes—at the thought of cherishing
The modern block and tackle harness. Fie on such a thing!
Romance has had no chance of late real gallantries to win.
Rejoice, O shades of Herrick! The round garter's coming in!

Gramercy for thy benison, thou style called renaissance!
And, ye that read, remember, "Honi soit qui mal y pense."
Perhaps the ancient chivalry will answer to the call
And the Order of the Garter be the noblest of them all.
And then, again, perhaps it won't; another style may come
And put our hopes and dreams and speculations on the bum.
Who cares? The present compensates for past and future lack—
The dainty, unhygienic, old round garter's coming back!

CHILDREN'S STYLES.

Heavy Cluny Lace on Hats Is Smart and Pretty.

Following the lines of the fashions for their mothers and older sisters, the clothes for the little folks shown in Paris have new and pretty applications of bands on the short skirts of both dresses and coats, heightened waist lines and a tendency to greater simplicity in trimming.

Probably one of the newest features of fashion for the young people is the use of heavy cluny lace on the hats, coats and dresses. It is a charming lace combined with heavy or sheer quality linens for dresses for all the year around wear and will take the place of embroidery in trimming silk or cloth coats.

As a garniture for children's hats there is nothing quite so appropriate as cluny or fillet lace, which belongs to the same family of laces. It has a heavy, substantial look and yet is light in weight and young looking. Often a piece of cluny edging or insertion forms the entire brim of an adorable poke bonnet, while the crown is a huge stiff appearing baker's shape in black velvet.

It is a new and pretty idea to use clusters of these tiny roses in scatterings over the upper brim of a child's hat, or one will be found pressed closely to the underbrim at the side to give a gay bit of color to the face.

To be sure, bows are still used on the hats. The newest ones for satin and velvet hats are made of white suede kid, which are also used much for older folks' hats this year. This, too, is an economical idea, as one can send the hat to the cleaner's or freshen it at home with benzine, whereas white silk and satin ribbons would have to be discarded as soon as soiled. It is used also for the crowns and as an upper brim facing on the severer types of hats for school or everyday wear, but it is not suitable for a frilly lace or fancifully trimmed style.

Black satin and velvet are having an unusual vogue for children's coats as well as hats, and it is delightfully old fashioned and quaint looking and has a tendency to add to their youth and babyishness rather than age them, as one would be inclined to think about these materials. A charming little coat of black velvet was made with the body portion and coat in one piece and seamed at the underarm and sleeves. The shoulders and sleeves hung with fullness and were drawn on two heavy cords from the neck across the shoulders to the sleeve ends. The fullness of the skirt was confined in a six inch wide plain band set on the lower edge and joined to the upper part with cording.

NEW SHORT KIMONO FOR GIRLS.

The collar is fastened high at the neck in the sensible fashions of the greater number of the new winter coats for children.

The short kimono pictured is a smart little garment for the small girl. It is made of duckling fleece in a lovely shade of pink patterned with dainty apple blossoms. The bands are of plain silk in a matching shade of pink. Although the usual kimono lines are followed, there are several new features in the cut of this useful jacket.

A Woman Introduced Starch.

In 1564 a woman introduced starch into England. She was a Mrs. Dingham, a Dutchwoman, wife of a coachman in the service of the queen.

The England of her day blossomed into linen ruffs, enormous, snowy, until the tight little island looked like one huge snowdrift. These ruffs were a foot wide and stood straight out, starched stiff as a board, on men and women alike. They were got up with a "poking stick" until they were a marvel to behold and propped up with a framework of wire underneath.

All the women of the kingdom were driven to the starch bowl, and they used starch in all the colors of the rainbow. "A certain kind of liquid matter which they call starch, wherein the devil hath willed them to die their ruff," is the way one crabbed old chronicler puts it.—New Idea Woman's Magazine.

Beat one-third cupful of butter to a cream and two yolks of eggs until thick and light colored. Beat one-half cupful of sugar into the butter and one-half cupful of sugar into the yolks, then beat the two together. Add one-half cupful of hot mashed potato, one ounce of square of chocolate melted over hot water, then one-fourth cupful of sweet milk and one cupful of sifted flour, sifted again with one and three-fourths teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful each of cinnamon and mace and one-fourth teaspoonful of cloves. Add one-half cupful of seeded raisins cut in pieces and, lastly, the whites of two eggs beaten dry.

THE LIGHT IN THE TOWER.

It Brought the Heartsore Lovers Together Again.

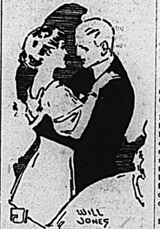
By AGNES G. BROGAN.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

The little motorboat chugged cheerily up the lake as the girl who was its only occupant directed its course. Her brooding eyes gazed unconsciously upon the water as it parted and closed before her. Then presently she turned with a start of surprise to find that the shore had been left so far in the distance. She had wished to be alone with no fear of interruption—alone to think things over, to live again in memory the days that had preceded her broken engagement, to ask herself for the hundredth time if she had acted fairly and justly in sending Paul away.

It had all happened a year ago but the rippling lake, even the cottage huddled along the sandy beach brought back so vividly the many happy hours they had spent together. She hesitated now with her hand upon the wheel.

A nervous fear possessed her at the thought of returning alone across this vast expanse of waters, and then as she raised her eyes, glistening white against the blue sky, like a great beckoning finger, shone the lighthouse. The girl leaned forward eagerly.



"YOU'LL NEVER BE ALONE LONG AGAIN."

She remembered when Paul and she had climbed to the top of the tower and had stood there long in the silence. The old lighthouse keeper had made much of them. He had gathered great bunches of wild flowers for her, and his eyes had twinkled merrily as he wished them "happiness and a fair voyage" when they departed. He came to meet her now as the nose of her boat ground into the sand and reached out a helping hand to draw it nearer. She sprang out lightly and stood smiling up into his rugged face.

"You don't remember me, of course," she said, "but I visited your island last summer and would like to do so again."

"You are very welcome," he said gallantly. "And there are some folks one never forgets."

An old lady sat knitting upon the rough wooden platform before the lighthouse door. She arose and put forth her hand in greeting.

"This is my wife," the keeper explained. "She comes up from the village to visit me sometimes, and my boy calls to take her home in the cool of the evening. She'll be real glad to make you a cup o' tea, but she can't be very sociable on account o' being deaf." And the old lady resumed her knitting.

The little emerald isle was fragrant with blossoms, the water lapped its shores soothingly, and the girl breathed a sigh of contentment. The lighthouse keeper slowly lighted his pipe, regarding her the while.

"Well," he asked at length, "you came alone this time. Where is Paul?"

"Paul!" she said sharply. "What do you know of him?"

"Not much now," the old man responded, "for he left these parts some time ago, but I knew him considerable well when he was a lad back there in the village. A good lad he was, too, barring his foolish notion o' being a great artist. Many a time he used to come rowing up here to sketch me or the light or some crumbling old thing that he called 'picturesque,' and he would be talking about going abroad to study—when he could raise the money."

"Yes," the girl said quickly, with a strange bitterness in her sweet voice, "that was the trouble—he needed money."

The old man looked at her gravely.

"Just what do you mean by that?" he asked.

Since the day she had put Paul out of her life forever the subject had been forbidden even her dearest friend. No one dared mention his name in her presence. Yet now she decided suddenly to unburden her heart to the man whose stern gaze was fixed upon her, and the decision of right or wrong upon her part should be left to his judgment.

"When I went to spend last summer over there upon the lake shore," she said, "it was well known that I had been left a large fortune through the death of my parents, and, though my aunt did her best to warn me against fortune hunters, her teachings were all forgotten the moment I met Paul. He had fixed up a temporary little studio down there upon the sand, and I was greatly interested in his work and in the future which he described in such glowing terms, and—well, at last we became engaged. He had determined never to reveal his love for me, for my money loomed up a great obstacle to his pride, but the question had seemed to ask itself as we walked together one moonlight evening, and after that we were very happy until—I learned the truth. It was told to me by a mutual friend. Paul had been in love all his life with poor little Bessie Roberts, then teacher of the village school.

"And when she had discovered my fondness for him she agreed to sacrifice her life's happiness that through my wealth he might realize his one great ambition. They were still known to meet occasionally, the friend had said, and the girl's eyes would be wet as they parted at the pier.

"I was indignant when I first heard the story and tried to believe my faith in Paul unchanged; then he began to send regretful little notes begging off from various pleasure trips which we had planned, pleading as his excuse the urgent need of working steadily upon a portrait which must be finished at the given time. As I was returning alone from the pier one day I met the girl who had been pointed out to me as Bessie Roberts. She came from the direction of Paul's studio, and, following an impulse, I retraced my steps and entered the sunny little room.

"It was entirely empty, but upon an easel stood a covered picture, and as I raised the drapery Bessie Roberts' pretty face, pictured with unusual beauty, confronted me. I ran blindly up the sands to our hotel and wrote a note to Paul telling him that I was convinced he desired only my money and refusing to see or hear from him again." The girl's voice faltered.

"If he had not deceived me," she said haltingly, "I might have found a way to help them both."

The old keeper aroused himself with a start. His pipe had gone out. He spoke huskily.

"I knew Bessie Roberts as I did Paul," he said. "They have always been friends—no more. And now she is married to a rich broker fellow who came to the point about the time you did last year. They have a big summer home over there, and Paul's portrait of Bessie hangs in the hall. The broker fellow paid him well for painting it, they say, and I fancy it was one of Bessie's ways of helping her old friend on."

The girl sat speechless. Her face had grown very white.

"Don't you fret, child," the old man said compassionately. "He'll come back, for I've found that love is like a light shining over stormy waters—it generally leads us back to port, and—bless me," he exclaimed, "I've got an errand to do over at the other island. It will only take a jiffy. See that black cloud yonder? That means a breeze and a shower—be all over pretty soon, but promise me you won't start out to navigate till I get back."

He was already running down the path to his boat.

"Promise!" he called back, and the girl nodded a smiling assent.

The old lady had fallen asleep over her knitting, so she stood uncertain for a moment in the great stone doorway, then, entering, ascended the iron steps, which resounded beneath her tread as she followed the winding way up and up, coming out at last upon a little balcony with the lake and hills stretching far below. The breeze came up quickly, tearing at her skirts and tossing the hair about her eyes as she groped confusedly for the handle of the little iron door, but even as she reached to grasp it the door blew shut, there was a metallic click, and she knew that in closing the door had locked itself.

Then in vain she pressed her weight against it as the raindrops fell upon her face; then, leaning dizzily over, she tried to make her voice reach the deaf ears below. The keeper's wife would think she had gone away with him, she reflected despairingly.

She sank down on the narrow platform and looked at her watch—5 o'clock. In an hour or two at the most he would return to light the lamp—if she could only fight off this strange giddiness till then. Resolutely she buried her face in her arms, fearing to look down. Hours afterward—or could it have been moments?—she heard steps bounding up the stairs, the doorway thrown open, and she uncovered her eyes to look up into Paul's own eager ones.

"Oh," she cried breathlessly, "I have been alone so long!"

He drew the wet little figure quickly into shelter.

"You'll never be alone long again if I can help it," he said fervently.

And just then the blue cap of the lighthouse keeper appeared at the top of the stairs, and from beneath its brim his eyes were twinkling.

"Where did you find him," the girl asked joyously, "to bring him back to me?"

"My light searches out all the hidden places," he answered, with a subdued chuckle.

And, as they came out hand in hand through the stone doorway and stood looking far over the darkening lake, suddenly across its broad surface there flashed a rippling path of golden light—a light that led the mariner who had been far from home on the trackless deep back into a haven of rest and often to those for whom he has striven at sea.

"Paul," the girl repeated softly, "love is like a light shining over stormy waters—it leads us back to port."

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY BRIDGE

Railway Commissioners Make an Order--Bridge To Have Five Piers--Public Works Engineer Recommends Dredging of Rocky Shoal--At Whose Expense He Does Not Say--Railway To Be Permitted to Go On—City May Apply To Commissioners For Relief In Case Ice Jams At Bridge

Belleville, Jan. 4, 1911.

D'Arcy Scott, Esq., K.C., Assistant Chief Commissioner, Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, Ottawa, Ont.

Re C.N.R. bridge over Moira River, Belleville.

Dear Sir,—A report has just been received here that the Public Works Department has submitted to your Board the report of their Engineer respecting the construction of the bridge and the work necessary to be done in connection with the abatement of the danger of floods in the time of freshet. This matter is being taken up by the Property Owners' Association of this city and a meeting has been called for next Friday night to take action in the matter before your Board. We would therefore ask that you would kindly withohld judgment and the making of an order until said Association has been able to give instructions and employ the necessary counsel to appear before you. I would be pleased to have your reply to submit to the meeting at the City Council Chamber next Friday evening, 6th inst.

Yours truly,
J. F. WILLS,
Secretary.

Ottawa, Jan. 5th, 1911.

J. F. Wills, Esq.,
Messrs. Wills & Wright,, Barristers, Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Re C.N.R. bridge over Moira River, Belleville, File 3878.310, I have yours of the 4th instant. As you will see from my memorandum enclosed, dated December 31st, 1910, this matter has already been disposed of. You will note that if the flooding is increased because of this bridge, an application may be made to the Board at a later date for relief.

Trusting this disposition of the matter will be satisfactory to you, I am,

Yours truly,
D'ARCY SCOTT.

Canadian Northern Railway Company's bridge over Moira River, Belleville, Ontario. File No. 3878.310.

Memorandum of the Assistant Chief Commissioner.

In its application, dated 31st August last, the Canadian Northern Railway Company applied for authority to construct a bridge over the Moira River in the City of Belleville. In the plans submitted by the Railway Company seven piers in the river are shown. The Municipal Council of the City of Belleville was asked if it had any objection to offer to the bridge, and after some correspondence the Board was sent a certified copy of a recommendation of the Railway and Public Works Committees, which was adopted by the City Council of Belleville at a meeting held on the 17th October, which read as follows:

"That in the opinion of the members of the Railway and Public "Works Committees a smaller number "of piers than seven would be better "in view of the possibility of damages arising from damming back ice "or water, but recommend that the "Council take no attitude in the matter, either of consent or refusal, "leaving the matter to be disposed of "by the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada, after examination "of the piers by an engineer of the "Board."

Then in a letter from the City Solicitor, dated November 2nd, 1910, we were sent a resolution passed by the City Council apparently on that date, in the following language:

"That it is the sense of this meeting that in the construction of the "C. N. Railway bridge over the River Moira, in this city that as few "piers as possible be placed in the "river and that a copy of this resolution be sent the C.N.R. Company, "and to the Railway Commission."

The Board's Engineer, Mr. Simmons, went to Belleville and examined the location of the bridge, and in a report dated November 7th, concurred in by Chief Engineer Mountain, he states:

"Taking everything into consideration, I am of the opinion that the "piers might reasonably be reduced "from seven to five. This would increase the spans from 65 feet in "length to about 86 feet 3 inches, "and reduce the spans from eight to "six in number. This would not materially reduce the clearance between the bridge and the bottom of "the river, and would increase the "length of the spans 21 feet 3 inches. "I may say that the city has a bridge "about 1,200 feet above the proposed "bridge, having three spans, and the "longest of these is 75 feet in length."

On this report the Board issued Order No. 12222, dated 9th November, 1910, authorizing the construction of the proposed bridge in accordance with the plan, with the exception that the number of piers in the river were to be reduced from seven to five, and the number of spans reduced from eight to six; detail plans of the proposed work to be submitted for the approval of an Engineer of the Board.

After this order was sent out to the parties, the Municipal Council of the City of Belleville, at a meeting on the 14th November, passed the following resolution, copy of which was submitted to the Board:—

"That this Council submit to the "Railway Commission that the City "be heard in regard to the number "of piers in the C.N.R. bridge over "the Moira River, and particularly "in view of the fact that Mr. Simmons, Engineer of the Railway Commission, stated to this Council that "after he sent this Council a copy of "his report, we would be given an opportunity of being heard."

A special sitting of the Board in Belleville was arranged for the 29th November, at which counsel for both parties and a number of citizens were present, and the location of the proposed bridge examined by Mr. Commissioner McLean and myself. As it appeared to us at the time that the bridge was to cross a portion of the Moira River which it was contended by the City of Belleville was included in the territorial limits of the harbor of Belleville, which under a Special Act 52 Vict. cap 35," An Act Respecting the Harbor of Belleville, was under the jurisdiction of the Harbor Commissioners of Belleville, it was decided to submit the matter to the Public Works Department of the Dominion Government before taking final action.

This was done, and by letter from the Secretary of the Public Works Department, dated 29th December, the Board was sent a copy of a report of Mr. J. G. Sing, the District Engineer of the Department, in which among other things he states:

"I am of the opinion that the said "bridge (with five piers in the river) "as laid out on the C.N.R. plan, "would meet the conditions and not "increase the jam of ice on the river."

Mr. Sing also points out that a rock shoal in the river near the location of the bridge is an obstruction which impedes the flow of frazil and

ROYAL COMMISSION TO PROBE FARMER'S BANK

Scandal is Main Issue--Time To Turn On The Searchlight--Charter Was a Lure To The Helpless--How Was It Obtained—Questions That Must Be Answered

The Toronto Telegram makes a forcible appeal to the authorities for a full investigation into the affairs of the defunct Farmers' Bank. Our contemporary says:

How was the Farmers' Bank charter granted?

Why was the Farmers' Bank charter ever granted?

An answer to these questions is of far more vital public importance than the fate of W. R. Travers.

The condemnation of Mr. Travers, if guilty, or the vindication of Mr. Travers, if innocent, can safely be left to the processes of criminal law.

But the enquiry into why the Farmers' Bank charter was issued when that bank was never legally entitled to have a charter issued can only be safely left to a Royal Commission.

A Royal Commission should be appointed by the Dominion Government if that Government is not afraid to turn the limelight of publicity on the procedure of its own Department of Finance.

A Royal Commission must be appointed by the Ontario Government if the Dominion Government fails to do its duty. The banking law is the exclusive concern of the Dominion Government. A misuse of the banking law which desolates great sections of rural Ontario, as Halton County has been desolated, is a wrong that cannot be viewed with indifference by the Ontario Government.

Halton County alone supplied the investors of $300,000 in Farmers' aBnk. This $300,000 is gone, plus another $300,000, if the processes of law can extract the additional $300,000 from Halton County subscribers to stock in the Farmers' Bank.

In Essex County alone there are three widows on the stock books of the Farmers' Bank for substantial sums, running up to $2,000 in one case. The widow and orphan are slow to learn that they are better off with their little all invested in five per cent. mortgages than in securities which are encumbered by even the remote possibilities of the law relating to the double liability on bank stock.

Ontario's loss on the face value of Farmers' Bank stock $600,000
Ontario's loss under the operation of the double liability law 600,000
Ontario's loss on deposits in the Farmers' Bank 1,200,000

A charter was the bait which the Finance Department of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Government supplied to the Farmers' Bank. With the attractions of that charter as its bait the Farmers' Bank fished for stock subscriptions, and fished for depositors, and hooked confiding men and women, the Ontario shareholders and depositors, whose face losses must aggregate at least $2,200,000.

It is bad enough that the administration of Canada's much-vaunted banking law should have chartered the Farmers' Bank with power to lure helpless people into writing their names on the stock books of an institution that was never a bank at all. It is worse, infinitely worse, that depositors who go looking for safety in a chartered bank should lose their little all.

A Royal Commission, and a Royal Commission alone, can clear up numerous mysteries that the Finance Department should have cleared up before the Farmers' Bank charter was issued.

A Royal Commission can discover whether the foundation principles of the Farmers' Bank finances were not in part as follows:—

Ten per cent. commission to solicitors of subscriptions for stock.

Ten per cent. commission for discounting notes given in payment for stock.

A Royal Commission might also determine whether by the exercise of reasonable vigilance the Finance Department could not have discovered the sources of the $1,000,000 paid up capital upon which the Finance Department founded the corporate existence of the Farmers' Bank. It is supremely important that the public should be enlightened with an answer to the two questions also:—

How much of the paid up stock of the Farmers' Bank was cash within the meaning of the Banking Act?

How much of the paid up capital was money borrowed on the security of notes accepted in payment of subscriptions on stock?

ANARCHIST SHOT IN LONDON MAY BE DETROIT MURDERER

Photograph Discovered In The Rogues' Gallery Leads Local Police To That Suspicion

In looking over the hundreds of photographs of criminals which they keep on record at headquarters, the detectives came across one yesterday that looks enough like the picture of the London Anarchist who was shot by the police at the time of the famous tunneling, to be the man. The picture of the dead anarchist was compared with the one the local police have on file and the resemblance is almost perfect.

The picture of the man the police have here was sent out ffom Detroit last April Th man's name was Onofio Goetano Scianna and he was supposed to come from Palermo, Italy. At the time the circular was got out the man was wanted in Detroit for the murder of Procipio Cosumano. It appears that the two men got into an altercation on the 23rd of April last over the latter's wife and Scianna shot Cosumano. He fled from Detroit shortly after the crime and had not been heard of since by the American police.

According to despatches the London police know little about the antecedents of the dead Anarchist and as he is supposed to come from Palermo it looks as if there might be some foundation for the suspicions of the local police. The Detroit man was 23 years of age and was very dark. He wore a signet ring with the letter 'R' engraved on it.

VANCOUVER, Jan. 5.—The deer hunting season has closed in British Columbia with an even greater number of accidents than usual, there being 13 fatalities in the 12 weeks due to criminal carelessness or inexperience or the desire to shoot at something moving in the bushes, in the hope that it might be a deer.

Besides these fatalities there were 35 accidents of a serious nature and many minor ones. All of the dead were residents of the Province, except Dana B. Gibson, who came from New York.

DIED IN SIDNEY

Mr. Emory Finkle Passed Away as Result Of A Paralytic Stroke

Mr. Emory Finkle, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Sidney township is dead. Deceased, who had been spending the winter with his daughter, Mrs. Alex Morten, of Wellman's Corners, was taken with a stroke on Sunday morning and his death resulted on Tuesday last. Mr. Finkle had been for many years a member of the Methodist church and had always taken an active part in church work. Deceased is survived a family and a large number of relatives.

ALL WAS QUIET

In police circles last night and to-day everything was exceptionally quet, no arrest being made and no police court proceedings. A solitary tramp occupied the cells last night and a call was answered which was by no means of a serious nature.

The air is full of graft charges, hockey talk and snow.

"Wolves of Society" is what a contemporary very aptly terms the London anarchists.

In Michigan there were 27,353 marriages and 3,518 divorces. The number of divorces increased 610 since 1904. A bad record.

Add one more to the winter's record of zero weather. The temperature fell to zero during the night and at 8 a.m. it was 6 above.

The city, it is said, has still a large number of tax sale lots on hand. Perhaps so, but the cream has been skimmed off the city's holdings.

The United States are anxious for reciprocity with Canada, but their alien-labor law bears eloquent testimony to the spirit which animates the statesmen of that country. So far as Canada is concerned it has been with them: "I take the turkey and you take the crow, or you take the crow and I take the turkey."

The universal military service registration is in progress in Australia and the cables tell us that the response to the call of patriotic duty upon the part of the Australian youths between the ages of fourteen and seventeen is prompt and general. Australia is setting a good example to Canada, comments the Brockville Times.

A contemporay calls attention to the fact that Sir Richard Scott, who cast his vote in the municipal elections in Ottawa was a successful candidate for Mayor just fifty nine years ago. Probably there is not another instance on this continent of an ex-mayor by fifty-eight years, still voting and in excellent physical and mental health. Sir Richard, in his political life began early as a Conservative and has remained late as a Liberal. He was the father of the Separate School Act and the Scott (local option) Act.

SERIOUS FIRE

General Store and Post Office At Carrying Place Burned--Heavy Loss

At an early hour yesterday morning a fire occured at the Carrying Place, Prince Edward County. A frame building used as a general and store and post office was reduced to ashes. The premises were occupied by Mr. Frank Boyce, who suffered a severe loss. We are informed that but little was saved and the loss sustained was considerably in excess of the insurance. The origin of the fire is not known.

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE."

George E. Wakefield, probably one of the tallest actors on the stage will portray the grotesque villain in the musical extravaganza "The Cat and the Fiddle," when it appears here at Griffin's Opera House to-night.

Mr. Wakefield when once seen is sure to make an impression. While he is unusually tall he is built in proportion and has all the grace, polish and finish that could be desired. He is also possessed of a fine singing voice, it is claimed, and has received much comment for his portrayal of his exceedingly trying role.

The personnel of the principals include such well known names as Harry B. Watson, Geo. E. Hart, J. O. Campbell, the Gotthards, Matty Martz and the Boylans, Rose and Arthur, than whom there probably are no dancers more noted as delineators of the grotesque on the stage to-day. A well-trained and beautifully gowned beauty chorus will pleasingly present a large number of catchy song numbers, among which are the latest popular successes.

Messrs. Murdock and Berry Reply to Pamphlet Issued By Mr. Larmour

Berry, of the Railway Conductors' and Trainmens' Unions, have issued a pamphlet in reply to the "Critical Review of the Recent Trainmen's Strike on the G.T.R.," recently published, over the signature of Robert Larmour, said to have been formerly a division superintendent of the Grand Trunk. VOTING BY MAIL MAY BE ALLOWED

Toronto Member of Legislature Makes Inquires Into The Matter

The Provincial Government will be asked at the coming session to consider a radical change in the election law, under which provision will be made for voting by mail.

The proposal is not new. It has been advanced from time to time in the interests of commercial men and railway employees. Recently, however, those engaged in its advocacy have secured the sympathy of Mr. W. D. McPherson, K.C., M.P.P., who is writing on their behalf to secure information as to the working out of the proposal in Tasmania.

It is pointed out that under existing conditions a certain portion of the electorate is practically disfranchised, and that the popular vote as polled is accordingly not an accurate gauge of public sentiment.

The Globe understands that the proposal contemplates a change which will affect the voting at both Provincial and municipal elections.

When interviewed in reference to the subject yesterday, Hon. J. J. Foy, the Attorney-General, said he was not prepared to discuss it at the present time.

The proposal was a radical one, and would have to be treated cautiously and examined carefully from every standpoint. Many possibilities for abuses might open up.

The Minister assured The Globe that the matter had not been before the Government officially in any form, and was not prepared to discuss it until he had had opportunity of examining its full significance, and the possibilities for its effectually doing the work its promoters contemplated.

The foregoing, which is taken from the Globe of yesterday, is of much interest to Belleville, as there are some ninety commercial travellers resident here.

HOME WEDDING

Pretty Matrimonial Ceremony at The Residence of the Mother Of The Bride

A quiet but very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. M. Harris when her daughter, Miss Lottie Ella, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Irwin Gordon, of this city, the officiating clergyman being Rev. A. S. Kerr, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion. The bride was given away by her brother and was married under an arch of evergreens. The bridesmaid was Miss Minnie Gordon, sister of the groom, and the best man was Mr. Harry Elvins of this city. The bride looked exceedingly pretty in a gown of cream silk and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid also looked pretty in a pink silk gown and carried a bouquet of pink roses. After the ceremony the guests sat down to a sumptuous repast. The groom's gift to the bride and bridesmaid was a gold locket each and to the best man a gold stick pin. Many handsome presents were received. Their many friends in the city will wish them a long and happy wedded life.

SEPARATE SCHOOL

Board Organized For the Year--New Chairman Is Elected

A regular meeting of the R. C. School Board was held in the City Hall last evening to close out the business of 1910, which was chiefly of a routine nature. The financial statement and the auditors' report were presented, and the financial standing of the Board was found to be on an excellent basis; the best in its history.

The retiring chairman, Mr. P. J. Wims, was accorded a standing vote of thanks and appreciation of his excellent services in that capacity during the past year.

Immediately after adjournment the organization meeting of the Board of Trustees elected for 1911 was held. Mr. H. L. Ingram was elected chairman for 1911 and Mr. W. N. Belan re-elected Sec.-Treas.

Mr. E. J. Butler was appointed the Board's representative on the High School Board and Mr. P. J. Wims on the Library Board for 1911. Standing committees for the year were struck, after which the Board adjourned.

floe ice, which should be removed, and also states that any material in the channel below the proposed bridge crossing that may not give a depth of 12 feet of water below zero gauge should be removed. It is not clear from his report whether he intends this work should be done by his Department or not.

The Board having given this matter careful consideration and having before it the opinion of two of its own engineers and the District Engineer of the Public Works Department that the construction of five piers in the river for the proposed bridge will not increase the jam of ice, should, I think, permit the railway company to go on with its work and construct the bridge on the understanding that the City of Belleville will be free at any future time to apply to the Board for an order compelling the Railway Company to take some action to prevent the jamming of ice at its bridge when constructed, if it is shown that the disasters caused by ice jam flooding at Belleville are increased by the construction of the bridge.

No further order will be necessary. The Secretary may merely write the Canadian Northern Railway Company to state that the request from the Board in the Secretary's telegram of the 22nd November to take no further action under the order of the 9th of November is withdrawn, and the Company is now free to go ahead with its work.

N C R Builders Will Have To Appeal To Exchequer Court If Dissatified

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—It was learned to-day that Hon. Mr. Parent's estimates of the award of arbitrators in the matter of over-classification on the transcontinental railway is wide of the mark.

In place of it being $200,000 it is known that deductions to the extent of $275,000 have been made on the Winnipeg-Superior section alone. It was there however, that practically the whole trouble was met.

Messrs. Schreiber & Grant were in conference to-day concerning deductions for "overbreak." These may total $100,000. The aggregate to come off the contracters will be in the neighborhood of $400,000, and they will have recourse to appeal to the Exchequer Court if dissatisfied.

A STRAIGHT DENIAL

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—I notice, on reading an account of an interview had with a member of the staff of The Montreal Herald by Mayor Marsh, and republished in The Intelligencer on the 4th inst., that Mr. Marsh stated that I made an offer of $15 a lot for a portion of the property originally owned by the Geo. Bleecker estate, recently sold by Mayor Marsh and David Price, Treasurer of the city, one to his wife and the other to his mother-in-law. To this statement I give an unqualified denial. It is absolutely untrue. I never made any offer for the lots in question in any way, shape or manenr. I did, however, try to obtain from the Treasurer the prices put upon said lots, but failed to do so, for reasons best known to himself. These facts will be established when the investigation takes place.

Yours truly,
J. P. C. PHILLIPS.

ANOTHER DIVIDEND ON YORK LOAN

Payment of Twenty-Five Cents Likely To be Made Before End of Year

It was announced yesterday that practically all of the York County Loan property has been sold and the clerical work in connection with the payment of another dividend of 25 cents is under way.

In order to get the highest price on the sales the liquidator, Mr. R. Home Smith of The National Trust Company, has disposed of the property on terms ranging from twelve to eighteen months. Before the end of this year, probably next autumn, the dividend will be distributed amongst the 114,000 interested shareholders. The clerical work connected with the declaration of this dividend is extensive and it will take many months to complete the task.

The last dividend was for 25 cents and was passed last spring.

Though it is extravagant the substitution of cream for milk in making pumpkin pie will result in a most delectable dessert.

The Policy For Canada

Mr. Eugene Foss, Governor of Massachusetts, in opposing the re-election of Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge to the Senate says:

"The reciprocity that Senator Lodge has been standing for all these years ahs resulted only in sending approximately $300,000,000 of American capital to build up branch industries which compete with our own in foreign markets. It has also resulted in stifling the growth of Massachusetts and New England industries and kept us out of the business and commerce which belongs to us by every right. It has ruined our coastwise shipping interests and made our wharf property of little value."

All true, remarks the Toronto News, but the policy which Mr. Foss condemns he has no power to change. No government or any political party in Canada will venture to disturb the fiscal system which secures these advantages to the country. For half a century Washington rejected reciprocity. To-day Canada does not want and will not have reciprocity.

Meats and Fruits

It is worthy of remark that a few days before the Grain Growers delegation came to Ottawa the Government in a solid mass, and supported by Western Liberals, voted down a resolution by Dr. Sproule calling for action by the Government on the lines demanded by the Grain Growers.

Dr. Sproule's resolution asked that the Government should establish a system of abattoirs and cold storage and interest themselves in the commencement and carrying on of the dead meat trade. While these might not necessarily be erected by the Government, the establishment ought to be under direct Government supervision.

It will be remembered that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in replying to the farmers, did not even make a reference to the dead meat industry, regarding which the delegates presented a resolution.

Dr. Sproule also asked that a system be inaugurated for the handling of perishable fruits. He pointed out that there was a splendid market in the old country if we could place our fruits on the market in proper condition.

The Government voted this down, and all Liberal members of Parliament, including W. O. Sealey, of Wentworth, who poses as a champion of the fruit growers, supported the Government. They will support the Government in every case, whether it be to injure or support the industries of the country.

That Railway Bridge

In to-day's issue will be found the correspondence between Mr. J. F. Wills, Secretary of the Property Owners' Association, and Mr. D'Arcy Scott, Assistant Commissioner of the Railway Board, referring to the construction of the railway bridge over the River Moira at the northern entrance to the harbor.

What is feared by owners of property and tenants on Front Street and in Murney Ward is the flooding of these parts of the city by the narrowing of the outlet for ice in the spring by the construction of too many piers.

The report of the Commissioners, based upon the report of engineers, does not concur in the views of those most interested. This, however, Mr. Assistant Commissioner Scott thinks is covered by the cool statement that "If the flooding is increased because "of the bridge, an application may "be made to the Board at a later "date for relief."

This is as clear a case of locking the stable after the horse is stolen as was ever presented to a community. Who, Mr. Scott, is to pay the damages done by the flood? Merchants on Front Street may have thousands of dollars worth of goods destroyed in the lower stories of their buildings, and the residents of Murney Ward may be driven out of their residences, after which, says Mr. Scott, they may apply for relief. We trust these events may not occur, but if they do, then there will be work for the lawyers.

Selling and Buying Votes

The State of Ohio has immortalized itself, if trafficking in votes will do it. Even clergymen have been taking money for their votes. A despatch from West Union, Ohio, on the 30th of December last says:

Two preachers and many women have been drawn into the Adams county ballot scandal, the ministers confessing that they had sold their votes for $5 each and the women asserting that they had put a price on the votes of their husbands, sons and sweethearts. "It was the usual thing," was their explanation for not preaching against the evil.

Following these disclosures men appeared in the court in droves and confessed selling their votes. All were fined the amount they said they had received, disfranchised for five years and sentenced to six months in the work house. The latter part of the sentence was suspended. The names of the two pestors was kept secret by the grand jury.

The total of indictments now reaches 1,671 and not a single citizen will be left with the right to vote i one school district of Jefferson township which includes the township of Walmsleyville.

A Covering-Up Statement

A one-sided account of the tax lot transactions appears in the Toronto Telegram, purporting to have been written by its special correspondent. The correspondent, whoever he is, evidently was stuffed by those who are endeavoring to cover up their official manipulations in city property by hoisting the party flag. When all the facts are brought to light, it will be shown that party has nothing to do with officials improperly dabbling in city lots. The parties interested profess to want a judicial inquiry. Let them have it, and that, too, without delay.

LEGAL FIGHT FOR SEVEN MILLIONS

Alberta and Great Water ways Money Claimed By Government

EDMONTON, Jan. 5.—The fight for the $7,400,000 of Alberta & Great-Waterways money deposited in the Royal, Union and Dominion Banks is now on. This morning an appearance to the action brought by the Alberta Government against the above banks to compel payment of these moneys to the Province was entered by Dawson & Hyndman on behalf of the Royal Bank, and by J. E. Walbridge, actig for the Dominion Bank. The Union Bank are pursuing a different course. They apparetly intend to pay the $1,600,000 on deposit with them into court, withdraw from the dispute and let the claimants fight it out among themselves. This morning through their solicitors, Short, Cross & Biggar, they applied for and were granted a chamber summons, calling upon the parties interested to appear before Mr. Justice Beck in Chambers on January 27 and put forward their claims in support of the application. The affidavit of John J. Anderson, manager of the Union Bank, was filed. The affidavit states that the applicants do not collude with the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, the Canadian West Construction Company or the Standard Trust Company, who are trustees for the bondholders of the railway. This interpleader will give the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway and the Construction Company an opportunity to make a fight.

MASTERS AND MATES

Mr. Brodeur Will Ask To Have The U. S. Regulation Altered

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—It is said that while at Washington, Hon. L. P. Brodeur will call the attention of the United States Government to the recent ruling of its Treasury Department that no licenses would be issued to masters and mates of vessels unless the men are citizens and residents in the Uniter States. Canada has a similar provision but has not enforced it, and it is said that if the United States persists further legislaion will be asked of Parliament in retaliation.

RAILWAY FILES ITS DEFENCE

Argument For The Proposed Increase In Class Freight Rates

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 5.—Wage advances aggregating $7,096,047 annually and the asserted necessity for increased income in order to meet the public demand for improved and extended operating facilities, are the principal arguments of the Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburg in support of their proposed increase in class freight rates.

These arguments are set forth in full in a brief filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by counsel for the roads, George Stuart Patterson, Francis I. Gowen and George V. Massey, in the investigation of the pending advances in rates by carriers in official classification territory.

The briefs show that since January 1, 1910, the scale of wages paid by the Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburg has been advanced about 8.15 per cent. while the proposed increases in freight rates, if allowed to become effective, would increase the revenues of the roads 1.62 per cent. of the gross freight and passenger earnings of the year 1909. It is argued by the attorneys that unless it be admitted that the present rates are excessive by at least $7,000,000 a year—the additional amount in round figures paid in wages—the proposed advances in rates must be regarded as reasonable. It is maintained that the present rates are too low and that that claim is established by the evidence adduced at the hearings. It further is argued that the rates, entirely irrespective of the advances in wages, should in justice be allowed.

The claim is advanced that the long distance class rates have not been yielding excessive earnings and, in fact, "they have not been contributing their share of reasonable earnings."

CRYPTIC LETTER ON VICTIM

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Another element of mystery to-day developed at the inquest into the death of Joseph Beron, whose mutilated body was found on Clapham Common last Sunday. The murder is attributed by the police to the Houndsditch anarchist-burglar gang, two members of which were killed in the raid on their den Tuesday.

The physicians who examined Beron's body said that they found on each cheek a wound cleanly cut in the form of the letter "S." The witnesses declared this deliberate cutting did not cause death, was quite symmetrical and obviously symbolical of a secret society. They had never seen anything of the sort before.

The inquest was adjourned to January 30. The police accept the theory that Beron was killed by the members of an organization of veiled purposes, who left the sign of their order on the body of the victim.

PETER THE PAINTER ALIVE.

The police are not satisfied that "Peter the Painter" was one of the two men killed in the Sidney street battle, and are now working on the theory that he is alive and still at large. Throughout the night two hundred armed officers scoured the district of the east end where outlaws are supposed to live and another spectacular fight is promised should the fugitive be cornered.

Germs in Her System

Every Woman Should Read this Advice and the Generous Offers that Goes With It.

The number of diseases peculiar to women is such that we believe this space would hardly contain a mere mention of their names, and it is a fact that most of these diseases are of a catarrhal nature. A woman cannot be well if there is a trace of catarrh in her system.

Some women think there is no help for them. We positively declare this to be a mistaken idea. We are so sure of this that we offer to supply the medicine or does not substantiate our claims. With this understanding, no woman should hesitate to believe our honesty of purpose or hesitate to put our claims to a test.

There is only one way to overcome catarrh. That way is through the blood. You may use all the snuffs, douches or like remedies for years without getting more than temporary relief at best. Catarrh in general is a diseased condition of the system that shows locally in frequent discharges from the mucous membranes. Local treatment should be assisted by internal treatment for the general diseased condition if a complete cure is to be reached. That internal treatment should be scientifically devised and faithfully administered.

Rexall Mucu-Tone is scientifically prepared from the prescription of a physician who for thirty years made catasrh his specialty. This remedy is admirably adapted to the treatment of the catarrhal ailments of women. It purifies and enriches the blood, tends to stop mucous discharges, aids in removing impurities from the system, soothes, heals and strengthens the mucous tissues, and brings about a feeling of health and strength.

We want you to try Rexall Mucu-Tone on our guarantee. If you are not benefited, or for any reason not satisfied, simply tell us and we will hand you back your money. Rexall Mucu-Tone comes in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store, J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

He had taken off his oilskins. Constance suddenly felt a strong disinclination to rise. Being a strong-willed young person, she sprang up instantly.

"I came to ask if you can see Mrs. Vansittart," she said.

"Mrs. Vansittart!" he cried, with a genuine surprise that thrilled her with a pleasure she assuredly could not account for.

"Yes. She asked if she might have a word with you."

He threw up his hands in comic despair.

"Tell the good lady I am up to my eyes in work. The oil is running low. I must hie me to the pump at once. I have my journal to fill. If there is no sun I cannot heliograph and I have a host of signals to look up and get ready. And, a word in your ear, Connie dear. We will be 'at home' on the rock for the next forty-eight hours. Give the lady my very deep regrets and ask her to allow me to send for her when I have a minute to spare, some hours hence.'

She kissed him.

"You dear old thing," she cried. "You will tire yourself to death, I am sure."

He caught her by the chin.

"Mark my words," he laughed. "You will feel this night in your bones longer than I. By the way, no matter who goes hungry, don't prepare any breakfast until I come to you. I suppose the kitchen is your headquarters?'

"Yes, though Enid has far more of Mr. Pyne's company. She is cook, you know."

"Is Pyne there, too?"

"He is laundry-maid, drying clothes."

"I think I shall like him," mused Brand. "He seems to be a helpful sort of youngster. That reminds me. Tell him to report himself to Mr. Emmett as my assistant,—if he cares for the post, that is."

He did not see the ready spirit of mischief that danced in her eyes. She pictured Mr. Pyne "fixing things" with Mr. Emmett "mighty quick."

When she reached the first bedroom floor Mrs. Vansittart had gone.

"I thought it would be strange if she stood long in this draught," mused Constance. She opened the door. The lady she sought was leaning disconsolate against a wall.

"My father—" she began.

"I fear I was thoughtless," interrupted Mrs. Vansittart "He must be greatly occupied. Of course, I can see him in the morning before the vessel comes. They will send a ship soon to take us off?"

"At the earliest possible moment," was the glad answer. "Indeed, dad has just been signalling to a tug which will return at daybreak."

There was a joyous chorus from the other inmates. Constance had not the requisite hardihood to tell them how they misconstrued her words.

As she quitted them she admitted to herself that Mrs. Vansittart, though disturbing in some of her moods, was really very considerate. It never occurred to her that her new acquaintance might have suddenly discovered the exceeding wisdom of a proverb concerning second thoughts.

Indeed, Mrs. Vansittart now bitterly regretted the impulse which led her to betray any knowledge of Stephen Brand or his daughter. Of all the follies of a wayward life that was immeasurably the greatest, in Mrs. Vansittart's critical scale.

But what would you? It is not often given to a woman of nerves, a woman of volatile nature, a shallow worldling, yet versed in the deepest wiles of intrigue, to be shipwrecked, to be plucked from a living hell, to be swung through a hurricane to the secure insecurity of a dark and hollow pillar standing on a Calvary of storm-tossed waves, and then, whilst her senses swam in utmost bewilderment, to be confronted with a living ghost.

Yet that was precisely what had happened to her.

Fate is grievous at times. This haven of refuge was a place of torture. Mrs. Vansittart broke down and wept in her distress.

CHAPTER X.

PYNE'S PROGRESS

A primrose light in the east heralded a chilly dawn. The little world of the Gulf Rock bestirred itself in its damp misery at the news. The fresh watch, delighted by the prospect of activity, clattered up and down the iron stairs, opened all available windows, unclamped the door when Brand gave the order, and busied itself exceedingly with the desultory jobs which offered to so many willing hands.

It was now, by the nautical almanac, dead low water on the reef, but the strong southwesterly wind, hurling a heavy sea completely over the rocks, showed that the standards of war and peace differ as greatly in the matter of tides as in most other respects.

As the light increased it lost its first warm tinge. Steel gray were sky and water, sombre the iron-bound land, whilst the whereabouts of the sun became a scientific abstraction. Therefore, the heliograph was useless, and Brand, helped by some of the sailors, commenced to flaunt his flag-signals to the watching telescopes on the far-off promontory of the Land's End. The Falcon, strong-hearted trawler, was plunging towards the rock when the first line of gay bunting swung clear into the breeze. And what a message it was—in its jerky phrases—its profound uncertainties—for communication by flag code is slow work, and Brand left much to an easier system of talk with the approaching steamer.

"Chinook—New York to Southampton—struck reef during hurricane—propeller shaft broken—78 survivors in lighthouse—captain, 201 passengers, officers and crew—lost with ship."

The awful significance of the words sank into the hearts of the signallers. For the first time, the disaster from which, by God's Providence, they had emerged safely, became crystallized into set speech. Seventy-eight living out of two hundred and eighty who might have lived! This was the curt intelligence which leaped the waves to fly over the length and breadth of the land, which sped back to the States to replace the expected news of a safe voyage, which thrilled the civilized world as it had not been thrilled for many a day.

Not a soul in the lighthouse gave a thought to this side of the affair. All were anxious to reassure their loved ones, but, in their present moribund condition, they could not realize the electric effect of the incident on the wider world which read and had hearts to feel.

Even whilst Stephen Brand was signalling to the Falcon, with little white flags quickly extemporized as soon as she neared the Trinity buoy, newspaper correspondents ashore were busy at the telegraph-office, and their associates on the trawler were eagerly transcribing the lighthouse-keeper's words wherewith to feed to fever heat the sensation which the night had provided for the day.

Brand, foreseeing the importance of clearness and brevity, had already written out a full draft of his detailed message.

Faithful to his promise, Stapleton was acting as signaller-in-chief on board the Falcon, so Brand might manipulate his flags as quickly as lay in his power, with chief officer Emmett reading the words at his elbow: there was no fear that any mistake would be made by the receiver.

The story, if condensed, was complete. Beginning with an explanation of the liner's disablement, it dealt with her desperate but unavailing struggle to weather the reef, described Pyne's gallant and successful effort to get in touch with the lighthouse, the rescue of a fourth of those on board, the names of the survivors and, finally, their predicament in the matter of food and water.

All this took long to tell.

Within the lantern, Mr. Charles A. Pyne, appointed supernumerary assistant-keeper, was burnishing brasswork as per instructions received. He little knew the use which was being made of his name by the tiny bits of linen tossing about on the exterior gallery. In such wise, helped by a compositor and dignified by headlines, does a man become a hero in these days of knighthood conferred by the Press.

Constance was scrutinizing the Falcon from the trimming-stage. Hearing Enid's cheery "Good-morning" to Pyne when that young lady raced upwards from the kitchen to catch a glimpse of the reported vessel, she dropped her glasses for a moment.

"Jack is on board," she announced. "Of course he would be there. And there is such a lot of other men—half Penzance, I think."

Enid joined her; Pyne, too, thought he could polish a burner up there as well as on the floor of the service-room.

Stanhope's stalwart figure, clad in oilskins, was clearly defined as he stood alone on the port side of the Falcon's small bridge, reading off the signals and sending back spasmodic twitterings of the flags which he, also, had procured, to indicate that each word was understood.

"Who is the skipper of the tug?" inquired Pyne, quietly.

Both girls laughed.

"You mean Jack," cried Enid. "He is not the captain. He is an officer of the Royal Navy, our greatest friend."

"Jack is his front name, I suppose," went on Pyne, breathing on the copper disc in his hands to test its clearness.

"We will introduce you, even at this distance," said Constance, airily. "Mr. Pyne—this is Lieutenant John Percival Stanhope, only son of the late Sir Charles and Lady Margaret Stanhope, of Tregarthen Lodge, Penzance, one of the best and dearest of fellows who ever lived."

"It must be nice to be a friend of yours, Miss Brand, if you always talk about the favored person in that way," said Pyne, rubbing industriously.

Enid, to whom the mere sight of the steamer had restored all her vitality, giggled joyously.

"You know, Mr. Pyne, we all love Jack, as the song says. It was a mere accident that he did not accompany us to the rock yesterday. Connie would not let him come."

"Ah," said Pyne.

"I forbade him," explained Constance, "because he has only three days' leave from his ship, and I thought he should give the first afternoon to his mother instead of playing poodle for Enid."

"How dare you call Jack a poodle?" was the indignant exclamation.

"Allow me," drawled Pyne. "I'm very glad you classified him."

Constance suddenly felt her neck and face aflame. Pyne was standing on her left, Enid on her right. The quiet jubilation of Pyne's voice was so unmistakable that Enid, for one instant withdrew her eyes from the distant ship. A retort was quick on her lips, until she bethought her that the American's statement might have two meanings.

Being tactful withal, she chose her words whilst she bubbled forth:

"He promised to take us for a drive to-day. That is the dot and dash alphabet father and he are using. If dad requires all the dots I'm sure Jack is monopolizing the dashes. He must be furious about this gale."

Constance, who wanted to pinch Enid severely, had reverted to her normal healthy hue by this time. She dropped her glasses.

"We are shamefully wasting precious minutes here," she said. "Enid, you and I ought to be in the kitchen."

Then she glanced with cold self-possession at Pyne, who was whistling softly between his teeth as he plied the duster.

"As for you," she said, "I never saw anyone work so hard with less need."

He critically examined the shining burner.

"We Americans are taught to be strenuous," he said smilingly. "That is the only way you can cut in ahead of the other fellow nowadays, Miss Brand."

She almost resigned the contest. That unhappy explanation had delivered her bound into his hands. Yet she strove desperately to keep up the pretence that their spoken words had no ulterior significance.

"Such energy must be very wearing," she said.

"It is—for the other man."

"But in your case it is unnecessary. My father believes we will be here at least forty-eight hours." Then she became conscious that again she had not said exactly what she meant to say. "So you, at any rate, need not wear your fingers to the bone," she added, hurriedly.

"Guess it must be a national vice," he said with irritating complacency. "Just now I feel I have a regular hustle on."

"Your example equals your precepts. Enid, tear yourself from the attractive spectacle. There are eighty-one ravenous people to be fed."

"Sorry you haven't hit upon the real reason of my abounding industry," said Pyne, who skipped down the ladder first to give the girls a helping hand as they descended.

"Please tell us. It may be inspiring," said Constance.

"I'm going to ask the boss if I can't take a turn as scullery-maid when I'm through here."

"Then I veto the idea now," she answered. "Enid and I have had a most comfortable nap, and I am certain you have not closed your eyes all night. I will make it my personal business to see that both my father and you lie down for a couple of hours immediately after breakfast."

"Or else there will be a mutiny in the kitchen," chimed in Enid.

"Connie," she whispered, when they were safely out of hearing from the service-room, "I never saw a worse case. Talk about the young men suddenly smitten you read of in novels—"

Her sister whirled around.

"How can you be so silly?" she blazed forth.

"Why did you libel Jack so readily?" tittered Enid. The other, utterly routed, went on in dignified silence. She did not speak again until they surveyed the store apportioned for the coming feast.

"Eighty-one!" she murmured. "What a monstrous deal of people for a half-penny worth of bread!"

"What is the use of repining?" sang Enid, with a fortissimo accent on the penultimate syllable. "For where there's a will there's a way. To-morrow the sun will be shining, although it is cloudy to-day."

But Constance was not to be drawn a second time. Her clear brain was troubled by a formless shadow. It banished from her mind all thought of a harmless flirtation with the good-looking youngster who had brought a blush of momentary embarrassment to her fair face.

How dreadful it would be to meet hunger with refusals—perhaps there were worse things in the world than the midnight ordeal of an angry sea.

Indeed, when Pyne did join them in accord with his intention, he soon perceived the extent of the new danger. The stress of the night had only enhanced the need of an ample supply of food. Everybody—even the inmates of the hospital—was outrageously hungry, and the common allotment was half a cup of tea and half a ship's biscuit.

For the midday meal there would be two ounces of meat or bacon, one potato, and another half biscuit with about a wine-glassful of water. For supper the allowance was half a cup of cocoa and two ounces of bread, which must be baked during the day. Not quite starvation, this menu, but far from satisfying to strong men and worn-out women.

The Falcon, knowing the uselessness of attempting to creep nearer to the Gulf Rock, had gone off with her budget to startle two continents. Stanhope's last message was one of assurance. He would do all that lay in man's power. The lighthouse soon quieted down to a state of passive reaction. Pyne, refusing to be served earlier, carried his own and Brand's scanty meal on a tray to the service-room.

The unwearied lighthouse-keeper was on the balcony, answering a kindly signal from the Land's End, where the coast-guards were not yet in possession of the news from Penzance.

He placed the tray on the writing-desk and contemplated its contents ruefully.

"I guess that banquet won't spoil for keeping," he said to himself. "I'll just lay around and look at it until the boss quits making speeches by the yard."

A couple of minutes passed. Brand was hoisting the last line of flags, when the American heard faltering footsteps on the stairs.

"Don't follow so close, Mamie," said a child's voice. "My arm hurts just 'nuff for anything when I move."

A towzled head of golden hair emerged into the light. It was one of the two little girls, whom Pyne had not seen since they were swung aloft from the sloping deck of the Chinook.

Their astonishment was mutual. The child, aged about eight, recognized in him a playmate of the fine days on board ship. She turned with confident cry.

FIVE SWEET WORDS.

Five of the sweetest words in the English language begin with H, namely, Heart, Hope, Home, Happiness, and Heaven. Heart is a home place and home is a heart place; hope is that virtue that makes us look forward to our only real home, which is beyond the grave; happiness is found in doing one's duty every day, and by safely guarding our sense against evil and having the best thing on earth: a clear conscience; Heaven is the goal to which we are tending, and only by a good heart, the blessing of a good Home lit up by the Hope of the future reward, and doing all in our power to live up to the teachings of the holy faith, shall we reach that only real happiness in Heaven. Young and old readers, let us strive to practice what the five words teach, and life will be full of flowers and blossoms, instead of weeds and thorns.—W. B. Crowe, Hamilton, Ont.

IN 1898

The London Lancet, after a careful examination of

Scott's Emulsion

reported that "the preparation fulfills ALL the requirements and presents ALL the conditions of a very satisfactory emulsion. In appearance and consistency it is not unlike cream and under the microscope the fat globules are seen to be of perfectly regular size and uniformly distributed. So well has the oil been emulsified that even when shaken with water the fat is slow to separate. The taste is decidely unobjectionable and the Emulsion should prove an excellent food as well as a tonic."

We believe no other preparation of Cod Liver Oil has received such weighty commendation and if the same high authorities were to examine it now they would find it even finer, more digestable, more palatable and more satisfactory in every way; in fact, SCOTT'S EMULSION has so long been the one satisfactory and perfect Emulsion that it is accepted as the standard by medical practitioners all over the world, by the public and by hundreds of imitators, for it is the one and only Emulsion imitated.

The imitations are in name only for no other preparation of Cod Liver Oil is so pure, so perfect and so beneficial.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

has become the world's Standard Body-Builder because of the perfect purity of its ingredients, its absolute freedom from ALCOHOL or any other harmful substance and because the results from it are uniform and far greater than from any other preparation.

OLD THINK TANKS

Pilgrim Joe's Discovery Arouses Latent Memories.

DOES MORE THAN IS WANTED.

Recollections of Borrowed Money, a Discarded Man, Cheating In Church, Lost Thimble and Other Cases—Inventor Threatened.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

FOR the last thirty-five years I have been experimenting with various roots and barks with a view of bringing out some sure and certain remedy for loss of memory in old and young people. The amount of forgetfulness in this world is something astonishing, and the evil thereby caused can hardly be computed.

It gives me the greatest pleasure to state that my long and untiring efforts have at last been crowned with complete success, and every drug store in the land is now supplied with Pilgrim Joe's Wonderful Memory Restorer.

THE LONG LOST THIMBLE.

I make no difference between respectable and disreputable druggists, but serve both alike, as I wish my restorer to reach all classes and conditions.

Every bottle holds a full pint, and the cork is secured by red wax. Take no other. More depends on the color of the wax in patent medicine than the contents of the bottle.

Every bottle has a wide mouth, so it can be used to take ice cream home in when the original contents are gone.

Inspected under the pure food and drug law and found to contain nothing to kill a horse. If you die after taking a few doses your friends must look for paris green in the well.

I do not wish to boast too greatly of this new and valued addition to the many preparations on sale and will therefore submit a few testimonials from the thousands pouring in by every mail.

J. D. B. of Hartford writes: "I hope you will meet with no success in the sale of your memory restorer. My wife got me to take a dose, and it was hardly down before I remembered borrowing $10 of her five years ago, and there was nothing to do but pay it back. You don't get me to take another drop."

John Henry H. of New York city writes: "I was being sued for breach of promise, and as the girl had nothing in writing to bring forward the jury would certainly have cleared me had not the plaintiff's lawyer tricked me into taking a dose of your restorer. Under its influence I owned right up that I had asked for the girl's hand three different times, and she was awarded $4,000. I shall warn all my friends against your decoction."

Forgotten Man Restored.

Miss M. B. of Detroit writes: "I think such men as you ought to be put behind prison bars. I was about to be married the other day when a stranger to me rose up and forbade the banns. I fainted, and to bring me to they poured a big dose of your restorer down my throat. When I revived the stranger was a stranger no longer, but a man I had accepted several years ago and forgotten all about. He's lop shouldered and knockkneed, but I've got to keep my promise. I trust that your days in the land may be short and full of woe."

Deacon Thompson of Oswego writes: "One day last week my wife came home from the drug store with a bottle of your memory restorer and a great story of what it would do. Just before setting out for prayer meeting that evening I took a dose. As a consequence I rose up in meeting and remembered and owned up to cheating no less than seven of the brethren who had traded horses with me at various times in the last thirty years. I was going on to own up a lot of other things when luckily for me the fire bells rang and I had a chance to get out of the meeting house. I had, however, owned up to enough to give me a black eye all around town, and I propose to give you such a lawsuit as mortal man was never called upon to defend before."

Mrs. Danforth, widow, of Kansas writes: "For several years past I have laid my spectacles, thimble, etc., away and then had to hunt for hours to find them again. A friend of mine called my attention to your restorer, and I got a bottle. After the first dose I walked right down the cellar and found my spectacles on the shelf where I had placed them months ago. After the second I found my lost thimble in the teapot. I was fool enough to take a third, hoping to find a dime I mislaid two years ago, but what did it do but make me remember that I owed Elder Johnson for a barrel of pork bought five years ago. I started right out and paid the debt, and he charged me interest at the rate of 10 per cent. I am advising everybody in the vicinity to beware of your restorer as they would of the deadly rattlesnake."

Borrowed "Five" Recalled.

Henry P. of Milwaukee writes: "If I had my paws on you you should surely suffer. I took a dose of your memory restorer the other evening to see if it wouldn't help me to remember who borrowed my jackknife during the day. It did. It was Moses Barnes, but when I went for the knife next day he claimed that I borrowed $3 in cash at the same time he borrowed my old fifteen cent knife, and I've got to come down or stand a lawsuit. I look upon you as a fraud and a swindler and shall do everything possible to injure you."

Deacon Waters of Ohio writes: "Some ten years ago I had a business deal with Deacon Travers, also of this town and a member of the same church. A year later he claimed that I still owed him $3. I denied it, and he sued. He was beaten, but the event almost disrupted the church and antagonized many families.

"The other day in calling on the minister I found him about to take a dose of your memory restorer. He had laid aside his sermons for three years and could not find them to preach over again. I decided to imbibe with him and see if I could remember to whom I lent my pitchfork.

"Right here, sir, I wish to call you an unhung scoundrel. The dose had no pitchfork in it, but it caused me to remember and to blurt right out to the minister that I really did owe Deacon Travers that money. I tried to take it back, but in vain. I have had to come down with the dough, with interest and compound interest, and no one will now buy eggs of me without counting them over twice. I would go many miles, sir, to see justice done upon your wretched carcass. Why remember? Why not forget?"

Remarkable Case In St. Paul.

Mrs. H. G. of St. Paul writes: "I am one of those fools who buy every patent medicine as fast as it appears, and the other day I came across your memory restorer. Years ago a cousin of mine removed to Kansas. I had forgotten the name of the place and took a thumping big dose of your restorer in hopes to recall it. The name came within two minutes, and within two more I received a telegram that my cousin was dead and hadn't left me a red cent out of her riches.

"Sir, I denounce you as a miserable wretch, and you may be sure that I shall do everything in my power to drive your villainous compound from the state of Kansas."

Pilgrim Joe's Memory Restorer restores events a hundred years past.

One dose will carry your memory back for fifteen years. Before the bottle is finished you are remembering how and where you met George Washington.

Can be taken on a full or an empty stomach.

You don't lose consciousness when it is working.

If other persons are in the room with you be careful not to express your surprise as events of the past come rising up before you.

After the fifth dose slack off for a day or two in order that your memory may get used to the new strain put upon it.

Druggists who offer you "something just as good" are horse thieves and liars, and their preparations are liable to make you forget that you have paid your street car fare once and hand the conductor a second nickel. There is but one Pilgrim Joe.

When next making rice pudding, flavor with lemon and cinnamon. It will be found exceedingly ta-

It doesn't pay to play truant from the school of experience.

The Only One Lacking.

"Why are you so sure there is no such thing as a fourth dimension?"

"Because," replied the discouraged fat man, "if there was I'd have it."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Unimplified Spelling.

The lady of the house was telling her caller something she did not want the eight-year-old girl to hear, and she resorted to the common device of spelling many of the words she used.

The little girl listened intently for a time, alive with curiosity, but she could make nothing of it.

Then she walked out on the porch, where her father was sitting, and said bitterly, "There's too much education in this house."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

The Artless Answer.

"Are we free men or are we slaves?" thundered the noisy orator. "I pause for a reply."

"It's about an even break, mister," came the answer from the rear of the hall. "Some of us are bachelors, and some of us are married."—Chicago News.

ACHES, PAINS AND RHEUMATISM?

Zam-Buk Will Give You Ease.

Have you a bad attack of "ge[illegible] aching"? You know the feeling. Limbs ache, muscles seem to have become tired out, your back aches, now and again a twinge of rheumatism strikes you here and there. Your chest feels tight, there is a pain between your shoulders, and altogether you need toning up.

Cold is responsible for this condition, and a vigorous application of Zam-Buk will put you right. Take a hot bath if possible, and then rub your chest and aching limbs with Zam-Buk.

Mrs. B. Gorrie, 76 Berkeley St., Toronto, writes,—"I cannot speak too highly of Zam-Buk. A few weeks ago I was suffering with a bad cold, which had settled in my throat, chest and limbs. I tried all kinds of remedies, new and old, and found very little relief until I used Zam-Buk. On applying this to my throat and chest I found such ease and relief from the tightness and soreness I determined to use only Zam-Buk. I also rubbed it on my limbs where I felt rheumatic pains. In three days from the time I first began applying Zam-Buk I was free from the cold in the throat and chest, and also the rheumatism in my limbs."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises and skin diseases generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Avoid harmful imitations and substitutes.

THE FARMERS AT OTTAWA

By Uncle Zack.

To redress their wrong,
Eight hundred strong,
The stalwart farmers came.
Their demands they made,
For a freer trade,
No bum political game.
Give us that, they crid,
For which YOU sighed
In the days of ninety-six,
That Free Trade plank
Now long since sank
As deep as the river Styx.
We will have it now
Or we'll raise a row,
Our Western land to boost,
What can you say
Ere we go away,
But 'chickens come home to roost.'
YOU used to squeal,
At the tariff steal,
And railed at all Protection.
What have YOU done,
Since the battle won,
In that ninety-six election?
Is it robbery still
For Financier Bill
To raise the tariff high,
And were you sincere
In the overturn year,
In your pre-election cry?

Sir Wilfrid's Reply.

He scratched his head
As the moments sped,
Assumed his manner bland,
Asked of the crops,
The wheat and hops,
And shook them by the hand;
Of the weather spoke,
And the newest joke,
And Cook's discovered the pole;
Of the pumpkin pie
In the days gone by,
That fed his hungry soul;
Of a lovely dance
In the land of France,
In the year of Jubilee,
And the Ark aground
On the Ararat mound,
In the midst of the heaving sea;
Of the distance far
Of the polar star
And the fortune Sheldon made;
But never a word
Said the sly old bird
In promise of Free Trade.
For his campaign cash
Would go to smash
If the Trusts would angry get.
If they pull the string
Ere the end of Spring
We'll have tariffs higher yet.

I SEEM TO BE THE ONLY ONE THAT'S

The Waiter.

"All things come round to him who waits."

"Don't you believe it!"

"No?"

"No. They have abolished tips."

Why?

"Can you sing?"

"Yes."

"But you never do."

"No."

"Why not?"

"If I were to do so all the other singers would be silenced."

Modern Ways.

"Will you marry me?"

"Let me see. I can't tell just now."

"Why not?"

"I must first look at my date book. Thanks, no; I shan't be able to do so this year, but perhaps may be able to do so next."

Exception.

The whole is greater than a part.
On that we ring the bell.
It may be true in books and art.
It's not so in a well.

On Getting.

Get money, runs the saying—
Yes, honest, if you may—
At once, without delaying,
But get it anyway.
But in the getting frantic
Be sure you do not make
The byplay or the antic
That keeps a man awake.

It's pleasant to have plenty,
To make things come across,
So you may flip a twenty
And never feel the loss.
But if the stuff is tainted
It isn't, you will learn,
As rosy as 'tis painted
To have the cash to burn.

A conscience than can slumber
In hours to close the eyes
You easily may number
As something of a prize.
One that is ever ready
Your shady ways to rap
Is not a comfort steady
When you would take a nap.

Get money, that's the ticket,
But have a little care
When from the bush you pick it
That you are on the square.
Thus peace that is abiding
It brings instead of strife
When you are gently sliding
The shady side of life.

Friends No Longer.

"Jones doesn't speak to Brown now."

"Is that a fact?"

"True as preaching."

"Money matters?"

"No, babies."

"How is that?"

"Well?"

"The Jones' baby, the same age, can just creep."

QUEEN TO LAY A KEEL PLATE

Great Interest in Connection with the Royal Family's Approaching Visit to Portsmouth

Great preparations are being made at the Portsmouth naval station for the expected visit of King George and his family. According to present arrangements King George and Queen Mary, with the younger children, will visit that great naval centre about January 11th, and will remain in the harbor or board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert for several days. There is great excitement among the naval officers and officials, a number of whom remember the King in his sailor days and it is believed that, although the visit is to be entirely informal and almost private, Queen Mary will be asked to lay the first keel plate of the new mammoth super-Dreadnought which will be christened the Royal George. Unlike King Edward, who took only a superficial but patriotic interest in the Navy, King George follows every new step made by the Admiralty with the most intense eagerness, and he is already in possession of the secret designs of the new ships to be laid down next year He is also very alive to the grievances of the "lower deck," and when at Portsmouth he is expected to pay a number of visits to the naval barracks the dockyard, and various establishments outside the port.

MATRIMONIAL HOAX

Would-be Husbands and Wives in a Paris Cafe Who all Wore White Roses

A well-planned hoax had an amusing result at a Paris cafe. A few days ago two advertisements appeared in the newspapers. One of them was supposed to be from a rich woman who was looking for a young husband who need not necessarily have any money; the other from a rich man who was looking for a young wife. In this case also there was no need for the woman to have means of her own.

Answers to these advertisements came in by hundreds. Both had been written by the same person. To each one of them a reply was sent, asking the man or woman, as the case might be, to meet the "advertiser" at the cafe. It was also requested of each man and woman that a white rose should be worn for identification purposes.

Having made these plans, the advertiser then wrote to the police saying that there was to be a big demonstration of Royalists at a certain cafe. Thirty detectives were accordingly on the scene.

Soon large numbers of young men and young women began to assemble at the cafe. At first the white rose that each one wore was regarded as a coincidence, but it soon became evident that they were the victims of a hoax, and after a little embarrassment, followed by hearty laughter, the crowd dispersed.

STAMP COLLECTIONS

One of These in Vienna is Valued at a Million Dollars

The Ministry of Commerce has announced that an exhibition of stamps will be held next autumn in Vienna. A novel feature of it will be the famous Jugent or juvenile collection. One collection is valued at over a million dollars, and contains a newspaper stamp of the eighteenth century which originally cost a fifth of one cent, but for which $20,000 was refused recently.

IRISH MIGRATION

A Parliamentary return of the migration of Irish agricultural laborers states that it is estimated that approximately 20,500 laborers went for temporary employment to England and Scotland in 1909. The estimated number in 1908 was 22,500, and that figure showed a decrease compared with the years immediately preceding. Of the total of 20,500, at least 500 or 600 were women.

HIGHLAND CHIEF'S DEATH

Sir Neil Menzies, chief of the Clan Menzies, died in Paris at the age of fifty-five. He was the owner of about 90,000 acres of land in Scotland, and of these 70,000 acres were announced to be sold by auction in May, including the Rannoch Lodge estate of 20,595 acres. Sir Neil was the eighth baronet, and was formerly a captain in the Scots Guards. No heir is known.

Keeping his nose continually down to the grindstone is apt to give any man sharp features.

MAY WIPE OUT THE LOW NECKS

Queen Mary Has Started a Crusade Against Them, and "High Necks" Will be Good Etiquette

Queen Mary, whose habits and ideas are very puritanical in every way, has decided upon a crusade against the low-necked evening dress, and in this she has the full support of King George. During the reign of King Edward, and even under Queen Victoria, the court dresses of ladies were cut as low as possible, but Queen Mary has a great dislike for this fashion, and she has made it clear to the ladies of her household that if a dress is cut away at the neck at all it should be as little as possible. At the present time the edicts of the Court make it compulsory for low-necked dress to be worn on all "full-dress" occasions, but this will be greatly modified during the next few years. She prefers to introduce the innovation gradually, but she has already made it clear that elderly ladies and others, who desire to wear high-necked dresses at next season's courts may do so without infringing any detail of court etiquette.

EXHIBITION VILLAGE

It Will be Partially Surrounded by Painted Scenery of the Highlands

It is proposed to begin building the Highland Village in connection with the forthcoming Exhibition in Kelvingrove this month. The site is on the left bank of the Kelvin, extending from the Prince of Wales Bridge to Park Road, and consists of two and five-eighths acres. The village will be partially surrounded by painted scenery typical of the Highlands, and will contain six or more cottages of various types—walls constructed of timber and plaster, roofs of thatch treated with fireproof preparation—with post office, smithy, joiner's workshop, general merchant's shop, and probably a dairy as adjuncts to the cottages. In addition to these there will be a village hall, where concerts will be given and exhibitions of piping, dancing, and illustrations of Highland customs, such as walking the cloth, etc. The village inn will be used as a restaurant, and another hall will be built for the sale of home industries. The village school and church will also be represented. It is proposed to have competitions in the Home Industries Section and competitive displays on the village green of piping, dancing, and Highland games.

The village building and grounds will be lit by electricity introduced into suitable fittings. Gas will be used for cooking, and peat fires for heating. The water supply will be led to the different buildings and to an artificial "burn" and "well." Provision against fire will be made according to the requirements of the authorities.

The Highland Village scheme has been undertaken not as a commercial speculation but as a means whereby home industries from the Celtic area of Scotland may be encouraged and developed and stimulus and help given to the home workers by the sale of their goods. Industries such as the following will be seen in active operation in the village:—Spinning, carding, dyeing, hand-loom weaving, knitting and sewing, rug-making, lace-making, wood and metal carving, and basket work. There will also be exhibits such as:—Carved crosses and stones, Skye marble, old sma' still, and primitive domestic and agricultural implements.

HORROR OF PRISON

A Youth Writes of the Weeks that Seem as if they Would Never End

After being arrested for stealing overcoats from boarding-houses in Shepherd's Bush and Hammersmith, Thomas William Graham, aged twenty-one, a neatly-dressed clerk, wrote a statement pleading the misery of his life. In this statement he said:

"I am sick of this hopeless existence, and the hopelessness of this life. During the last five years my life has been misery. I am ruined physically and morally, and the longer I stay in this world the more misery I shall have to endure.

"On my release from prison I came out with the intention of leading a better life, but having nowhere to go and no work led to sleeplessness and starvation, which weakened what little self-control I had left, and I fell.

"The world is a hard place to live in. What chance have we who have lost our characters when the men who have cannot get work? Prison has done me no good. It has hardened me and made me an atheist and a misanthrope.

"Just look at my record. Do you think I will ever get on? No, I do not, and so I intend to put an end to this misery. You little know the misery we undergo in prison, when the days seem weeks, and the weeks infinity. For five years I have been hardly out of prison.

"I have a good pater and mater, but I have disgraced them by my conduct, and for three years I have not seen them. They gave me a good education, and this is the result of it.

"There are two things I think, will pull me up. That is, work and marriage."

Nine previous convictions were proved, and sentence of fifteen months' imprisonment was passed.

MORE LIBERTY IN PRISON

The Home Office authorities have instructed the governors of prisons to relax certain restrictions on well-conducted prisoners and to allow them more liberty within the prison than hitherto. This system has been tried and found successful in the convict establishments and will mean fewer officers for supervision.

REDMOND AND THE THEATRE

He is an Enthusiastic "First Nighter" When Possible

Apropos of the fact that Miss Johanna Redmond, the daughter of the leader of the Irish party, has written and produced a one-act play, it is interesting to note that Mr. Redmond himself is greatly interested in the theatre. Indeed, when a schoolboy he was a talented performer in amateur Shakesperean productions, and when in London is an enthusiastic "first-nighter" when his duties permit. On account of his uncompromising attitude in the House, Mr. Redmond has acquired the reputation of being a most unsympathetic man. Here is a story, however, which throws a different light on his character. A very young member was once making his maiden speech, and was, in consequence, suffering agonies of nervousness. And his difficulties were increased by the fact that one of the Nationalist members punctuated the remarks of the youngster with jeers. Mr. Redmond turned on him in a fury. "Give the boy a chance!" he snapped. The jeers stopped.

SEATS IN CHURCH

Baronet Claims Seventy-two Out of a Total of 380 in the Parish Edifice

A dispute as to whether Sir Oswald Mosley, Burton-on-Trent, was entitled to the exclusive use of seventy-two seats in the parish church was settled at Lichfield Consistory Court.

Sir Oswald applied for a faculty appropriating certain seats in the south aisle of the church. It was contended that the aisle had been in the possession of the family since 1615, and had been kept in constant repair, and from time to time various monuments had been erected.

When the Rev. and Hon. H. L. Tyrwhitt became rector the congregation increased, and people were placed in the south aisle, to the annoyance of Sir Oswald. The rector called upon Sir Oswald to prove his claim to seventy-two seats out of a total of 380 in the church.

A conference between the chancellor and counsel on the matter, together with the respective parties, took place. It was agreed that a faculty should be granted to the Mosley family, giving them the exclusive use of thirty-eight out of seventy-two of the existing seats in the south aisle, and also the right to erect monuments in the aisle.

ARCTIC EXPEDITION

Sir Ernest Shackleton Finds the Call to the North Irresistible

Like so many other explorers, Sir Ernest Shackleton finds the call of the wild irresistible.

Next May or June he has decided to head a party of scientists in an expedition to the Spitzbergen Islands, in the Arctic Ocean. The party will be away for more than two months. The chief objects of the expedition are biological research and the comparing of the flora and fauna of the Arctic and the Antarctic.

There is a probability of Sir Ernest making another expedition to the Antarctic two years hence or perhaps sooner. It will be one of the largest yet sent, and will include three or four landing parties.

It is hoped to circumnavigate the Antarctic completely.

MAN WITH SILVER RIBS

The story of a wonderful operation, in which silver ribs are said to have been supplied to a man, was told by Major A. T. Craig at a gathering at the premises of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Help Society in London. The occasion was the distribution by Princess Christian of Christmas hampers subscribed for by public school boys and others. In one case, said Major Craig, there was a box of delicacies, intended for a man who was badly wounded in South Africa, and got practically all his ribs broken. He had been working in a sort of steel jacket since, until at a hospital in London a very wonderful operation had been performed. The man was said to have been supplied with silver ribs.

More whiskers than a girl would need

And that's old Uncle Pete.

A coat that maybe was a fad
When Noah sailed his ark—
You'd hardly speak of it as "glad"
And fitting for a lark;
Pants that are baggy, old and frayed—
Description fails my pen;
A vest that figures once displayed—
There's Uncle Pete again.

But do not judge him by the mop
Free from restraint and comb,
Or by the faded hairs on top
That grace his shining dome,
Or by the garments out of date
That he has worn so long,
For which the rag man lies in wait
To purchase for a song.

No; judge him by his genial smile
And by his sage remarks
And listen to his wisdom while
It flies from him in sparks.
Advice you get hot from the bat
By sitting at his feet,
Experience boiled down and pat
From wise old Uncle Pete.

Flammarion, the great French astronomer, recently described the destruction of a star in the constellation of Perseus, observed in 1901, which owing to the fact that it takes light fully 300 years for light to travel from there to the earth, really took place in 1601, during the reign of King Henry IV. What avenues of thought are opened by the contemplation of this phenomenon! Rays of light projected into space from the doomed terrestial body, travelling on and on, unimpeded, unchanged, not swerving from their course, while centuries rolled by, ultimately finding their way into that human camera, the eye.

Belleville Pros. Beaten By Port Hope--Brilliant Work Done By Both Teams--Visitors' Grand Start In First Period--Belleville's Great Work In Second Period--Both Sevens Finished Strong, But Visitors The Best--Big and Enthuiastic Crowd

"The fastest and cleverest game of hockey ever played on Belleville ice," was the opinion expressed by an old and ardent admirer of the sport, as to last night's game between the Port Hope and Belleville professional teams at the Arena. "People talk," he said, "of the game six years ago between the Belleville and Peterborough Intermediates as the best ever, but although the teams were fast and clever, the game has progressed since then and the men of that time would not be in it with those of to-day, who have a box-full of tricks that the old-timers knew nothing of."

There is much common-sense in the foregoing remarks, and The Intelligencer is inclined to concur in them, at least to a large extent.

The weather was very unfavorable, the temperature being well down toward zero, and a strong wind was blowing, but a big crowd, including a considerable number of Port Hope fans, thronged the Arena and encouraged their favorites with the usual demonstrations. The game was played in three periods of 20 minutes each, as is the rule of the Professional Association.

THE PLAY.

It was 8.25 when, after the usual preliminaries, Referee VanHorne dropped the puck at the face-off and at once a battle royal was on. Brilliant work was done by both teams, and the ice being in perfect condition the rubber travelled swiftly to and fro between the goals. There was but little combination, the checking being very fast and strenuous, but at last Port Hope, whose representatives had shown to the best advantage, netted the puck after five minutes' play. A second tally fell to them shortly after, and the hopes of the Belleville fans fell to the freezing point, while the Port Hope crowd shouted loudly. Half a minute later the visitors got another, and the hopes of the home people fell below zero. The whistle then sounded and the first period closed with the score—

Port Hope 3
Belleville 0

The boys in red and white had netted the rubber twice, but as both goals were from off-sides they did not figure on the score card.

THE SECOND PERIOD.

Not at all disheartened by the odds against them so far, although they alleged that two of the goals credited to Port Hope were scored from off-side play, the home men played brilliant hockey in the second half and encouraged their supporters by their splendid work. There was not much to choose between the teams in this passage-at-arms, and although many shots were made on both goals after fine work by the forwards and some fast rushes by the defence men into the enemy's territory, five minutes elapsed before there was any change in the tally. Then, by some pretty combination work, Belleville succeeded in getting a nice shot past Mercer. The homesters strove their utmost to even up, or at least to get another, but they were unable to do so, nor could Port Hope beat their defence. Some of the best hockey of the evening was seen in this part of the engagement, and the spectators applauded both teams impartially. When the bell rang the score was—

FINAL PERIOD.

It was now "do or die" for Belleville, and it seemed to many to be "anybody's game," but the old heads expected the Port Hopes to maintain or increase their advantage. On the line-up taking place, it was seen that the officials had changed places, Mr. Walsh becoming referee and Mr. Van Horne judge of play. There was no slackening of speed on the part of either team, but the advantage was decidedly in favor of the visitors, for whom Rowden did a lot of particularly clever work. After battling for about five minutes they scored a goal and added two more in short order, the score being 6—1. Then Belleville got going again and tallied after some nice combination work. The westerners, however, got still another and the Bellevilles, pressing strongly, scored again. But that ended it, the whistle blowing shortly after, and the game ended with the tally—

Port Hope 7
Belleville 3

The line-up was as follows:—

Port Hope		Belleville
Mercer	Goal	Cross
Kyle	Point	Sandford
Nixon	C Point	Doherty
Manson	Rover	Stalker
Randall	Centre	Crossitt
Rowden	R Wing	Dusome
Taylor	L Wing	MacDonald

THE TURF.

KINGSTON, Jan. 4.—George Darragh of Cassie Pointer, sued Percy Burnham, Hartford, Conn., for horse racing money During last summer Burnham had charge of Darragh's mare. At the end of the season on settlement being made Darragh claimed that Burnham owed him $100. In evidence it was shown that Cassie Pointer had won first place at Woonsocket, R. I., but Burnham used the prize money on Miss Overlook in another race. Cassie, in this race, got fourth place. The defendant drove the mare and it is claimed she should have won. If she had Darragh would have cleaned up $1260. Judgement was given in favor of Darragh with costs. It is understood that Darragh has sold the mare to a Toronto man for $600. She has a mark of 2.16 3-4.

RUNNING.

HAMILTON, Jan. 4.—Tom Longboat will leave for Pittsburg to-morrow morning, accompanied by his manager, Sol. Mintz, for his race there on Jan. 10th, with Alf. Shrubb. Mintz has every confidence that his protege will do the trick this time and he is going to the scene of combat early to get Tom in trim. The race will be run at Du-Quesne Gardens and will be for 15 miles. The track there is 9 laps to the mile and Mintz thinks this will be a decided advantage to Tom, as the last time the latter met Shrubb the track was 13 1-2 laps to the mile, which placed him at a disadvantage.

CURLERS BUSY

One Game Was Played Last Night--The Score Was Rather One-Sided

At the curling rink last night, whilst the various sheets of ice were used by players, only one club game was played, it proved to be a rather one-sided match as the score will indicate. The players and score were as follows:

R. Rice	W. Allen
A. Scryver	R. H. Ketcheson
R. E. Orr	W. Lindsay
W. J. Cook	C. J. Symons
—skip, 14.	—skip, 4.

HOCKEY.

That ought to be a good game on Monday night when the Belleville and Trenton Intermediates play a match at the Arena. A very fast and exciting game may be anticipated.

The Belleville Intermediates have registered the following players with O. H. A.: Samuel Simons, Harry Whalen, C. R. Burrows, James Geyer, R. A. Cumming, John Ford, S.L. Deacon, Wm. Powen, W. P. Allen, Chas. Bedboro, W. Gilbert and Murray Patterson.

THE RING.

Hilliard Lang, the Toronto middleweight, who boxed a bout here on Monday with Charles Lang, of this city, toyed with Jack Herricks, of Chicago, in their eighteen round fight before the Windsor A. C. on Wednesday night and easily gained the newspaper decision.

Herricks could hardly lay a glove on the Canadian, and when he did, his blows lacked force. Lang used an uppercut that reached Herrick's body continually, and had the Chicago man in distress. Neither man was badly punished however, and not a knockdown was scored.

CURLING.

Last year the Brockville and Napanee clubs tied in the Central Curling Association. The two teams went to Kingston yesterday to play off the tie Napanee winning by 40 to 32.

SHE WAS SURPRISED

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure Bowel and Kidney as well as Liver troubles, and keep you healthy. 25c a box at your dealer's. 34

Adam probably told Cain and Abel that they had a better time than he did when he was young.

It is never too late to repent, but it is often too early.

Nature never plays a meaner trick than when she gives a self reliant small boy a doting mother.

When a woman says another is "so original" she doesn't intend it as a compliment.

The woman who is aways good to others seldom knows how to be good to herself.

More the Merrier.

"People marry too young," said the crusty old bachelor.

"Oh, I don't know!" said the young woman who had just returned from Reno.

"Then you believe in people marrying early?"

"Yes, and often."

Brown's Choice.

"Has Brown appendicitis?"

"Yes."

"Had an operation?"

"No."

"The foolish fellow! What is he doing?"

"Says it is cheaper to pay the undertaker than the surgeon, so now he is eating everything in the market."

Wanted an Understanding.

"What are you going to swear to?" asked the lawyer who was examining the witness privately before placing him on the stand.

"That depends on what I am going to get out of it," replied the witness frankly. "You couldn't expect me to lie like a horse thief for a mere juror's pay."

Wasted Effort.

The sunrise paints the morning skies
In colors mighty fine,
So they inform me who arise
To view the early shine,
While I am hitting, with the wise,
The slumber trail for mine.

Irrepressible.

"I don't like to look at dignified men."

"Don't you? Why?"

"I always feel an irresistible desire to ask them if they are suffering from stiff neck or if it is just an unusually stiff collar."

Place For Him.

"He doesn't know anything."

"What?"

"Not a thing."

"Really?"

"Not a blessed thing."

"What a fine juror he would make!"

Wanted to Know Her Intentions.

"Why did you ask me to marry you?"

"I wanted to know."

"And now that you have found out?"

"I feel more in doubt than ever."

Habitual Grouch.

"Let's try to cheer Brown up. He seems dismal."

"Better not."

"Why?"

"He enjoys his blues so much."

After the Shouting.

When the election day is o'er
And we at last can see the score,
Then cometh true a thing or two
Of which we did not wot before.

Great Scott! All fishhooks! And do tell!
For Colonel Jones who never fell
Before at least the way was greased,
And broken is in truth his spell.

And see who's winning! Hope to die!
I hardly can believe my eye,
But Brown has hit her up a bit
And he is landing high and dry.

Great Caesar's ghost! Who would have thought
Among those in the landslide caught
We would observe the graceful curve
Of Major Simpkin's dome of thought?

That little snip Lycurgus Dey,
Who hales from rural township A,
Untried and new, is pulling through,
And having everything his way.

Oh, well, we have to be resigned,
But it disturbs my peace of mind
To see the pet on whom I bet
Is running half a mile behind.

But that's the way election goes.
Before it happens we propose
To sweep the land, you understand,
And heap contrition on our foes.

But when we come to read the news,
Just having barely had a snooze,
We find the wreck is on our neck
And most ungracefully we lose.

Points For Mothers

Don't snub the child who is a perpetual interrogation mark. It is a big temptation, but think how dreadful it would be if your little questioner had been born deaf and dumb or mentally deficient.

Losing your patience when Willie bothers you with his "Why?" or Nancy never speaks without a question to be answered will throw your children back on themselves for information, and you will learn too late you have lost your hold on your little ones.

If you do not answer questions be sure some one else will—neither so wisely nor so truthfully. Many a child's fear of "bogies" or dreadful nervousness for which you cannot account can be traced to awful stories told them by servants when you refused to gratify childish curiosity because you were too busy.

Do not feel that your child is an infant prodigy because he is given to the "why and wherefore." His questioning is only nature's way of making instruction easier to you. See that you heed it.

If you think the questioner a wonder you can rarely hide your opinion from him. The result? He becomes that most obnoxious nuisance—a child who asks questions to show off and be a smarty. Likewise will his vanity take a boom that is not beneficial.

Again, do not tell a child he is a "stupid" or laugh uproariously when he asks you a question that seems ridiculously easy to you. It is this habit that keeps many children silent when by going to mother or father their doubts could easily be set straight.

Many children have held for years impossible and terrifying notions of everyday facts which they never would have had if they had not dreaded the laughter of "big people."

When Children Are Convalescing.

It is, of course, very tedious for an actively inclined child to lie quietly in bed when he longs to get up, and the resources of mother and nurse are sometimes almost exhausted in the effort to amuse him.

Perhaps you may feel inclined to let him get up and say nothing about it to the doctor; but, though you may hoodwink him, you can't hoodwink the heart, and it will make the child pay for the deception sooner or later.

A person with a permanently weak heart—more particularly a boy—is heavily handicapped in life's race. He cannot enter the army or navy. He would be instantly rejected by the examining medical officer. He cannot go in for any athletic competition. If he does so it is at the risk of his life. Very hard work is almost impossible to him. He must always "take care" more or less and so is almost certain to fall behind his more lucky because stronger compeers in the race of life.

A Gift For Baby.

A charming gift for a new baby is a set of washed gold safety pins. These are not the small sets connected by a chain used to fasten the little frocks, but are ordinary safeties specially gold washed for the purpose.

Select a dozen strong, sharp pins and take them to any reliable jeweler. In some places the set can be gold washed for as little as 50 cents. The cost is never higher than would commonly be paid for any useful christening or baby shower gift.

The gilt coating prevents rust and does not wear off easily. To represent them a tiny homemade case of ribbon is a pretty idea.

Train Your Child.

Correction does much, but encouragement after censure is as the sun after a shower.

Blessed be the hand that prepares a pleasure for a child, for there is no saying when and where it may bloom forth.

In the man whose childhood has known caresses there is always a fiber of memory that can be touched in gentle issues.

When a child returns from a neighbor's house don't question him as to what was said or done there unless you wish to sow seeds of gossip and mischief.

A Musical Tip.

So much high class music can be enjoyed by means of the talking machine that the instrument has a decided educational value. A mother gives prizes to her three little ones when they learn to recognize the operatic or classic selections they hear reproduced from the records. The children soon learn the airs well enough to whistle or pick out the themes on the piano.

Crib Cover.

A pretty crib cover may be made from a yard each of white and pale blue or pink flannel. On the colored flannel embroider a flower and bowknot design; on the white, a conventional border and a large central monogram. Bind the two together by means of wide satin ribbon and put a bow or rosette in one corner with the colored side considered as the top.

PECULIAR WOMEN.

At Central Congregational Church Winnipeg, recently, Rev. J. L. Gordon took as his subject, "Peculiar Women," a companion sermon to his address on "Peculiar Husbands" of a few weeks ago.

His text was taken from St. Luke's gospel, 10:41, 42, "And Jesus said unto her, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things; but one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her."

"The greatest science of the world," said Mr. Gordon, "is domestic science, which is largely the science of getting along with people. It is marvellous considering the number of young and inexperienced couples that take over the cares and responsibilities of married life that the proportion of really happy homes is as great as it is.

"Happiness lies in avoiding extremes, therefore I will take up some extreme cases. The first peculiar woman who has no idea of the value of a dollar. Every department of the house spells out financial leakage. Woe is in store for the home whose queen is a poor financier.

The woman who is economical after economy has ceased to be a virtue is another type," said Mr. Gordon. "I know a woman who is working her hands off, although her husband is worth $100,000. There's a time to save, also there is a time to spend and to give. Another peculiar woman is the one who is careless in her conversation concerning the affairs of her husband.

"The woman who laughs at her husband's enthusiasm makes a great mistake. Enthusiasm is a sacred thing. Cultivate your husband's enthusiasm. It may save him from a thousand temptations. Then there is the woman who tries to force her own peculiar views concerning religion on the adult members of her own family. Religion must find its own expression in each individual life. Few men can talk about it. In the matter of religion men must be led and not driven.

"Then there is the woman whose life is a perpetual sigh. Upon her face is written the geography of universal trouble, despair and hopelessness. The domestic is no good, the telephone will not work, the children do not behave, the neighbors are inconsiderate, the store keeper never manages to fill her orders, etc., etc. Oh, woman, why waste your life and your husband's happiness on trifles? The color in your cheek is more fascinating than any figure in the carpet, the light in your eye is sweeter than any glory shining through curtained windows, the laughter of your voice is more glorious than all the silver notes of music.

"In conclusion I would warn a woman against becoming a partner with her husband in any sin or crime, and the saddest character I know of in any home or out of it is the heartless woman, one who has no tear for the fallen, no sympathy for the unfortunate, no consideration for the weak, no compassion for the poor, no anxiety for the suffering. Such a one fails in all that makes a woman lovable."

CRAPE PAPER FLOWERS.

The Seasonable Chrysanthemum an Easily Made Blossom.

With taste and care crape paper makes up into all manner of pretty things, from flowers to table centers, and especially for Thanksgiving decorations is this flower desirable.

The materials required for chrysanthemums are a portion of a roll of paper in a delicate shade of pale yellow or pink of the crinkled variety. Some stout or medium plain wire, a small glass headed hatpin, a few strips of dull green tissue paper for the stems and a little foliage.

A word or two on the subject of leaves. It is always better to use millinery foliage or leave out foliage altogether.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS OF CRAPE PAPER.

The crinkled paper must be cut in two strips, one longer and narrower than the other. The smaller strip should measure 12 by 4 inches, and the second and outside strip should by eighteen inches long by seven inches broad. Fold the strips lengthwise and cut down widthwise into narrow strips running the way of the grain. These strips must have their tips sloped, as they are to represent the petals. Next lay the narrow strip on the knee or on a cloth cushion and hold firmly with the left hand. Take the glass headed hatpin in the right hand and, placing the head on the tip of the paper petal, draw the pin head slowly toward the base of the strip. The paper is more or less stroked into turning over like the petals of the real flower. The second and wider strip is served in the same way and is then laid on one side. Take up the first piece of paper and wind it tightly round a small piece of wire, the tip of which has been bent to form a hook, so that all the petals fall inward over one another. Wire this strip first before adding the other. Treat the second strip of petals in the same way and wire into position, leaving a double piece of the stout wire to form the stem. This is covered by winding a narrow strip of moss green tissue paper down the length and adding a few chrysanthemum leaves down the stem.

Beauty in the Kitchen.

Considering how easy it is to look pretty when engaged in household labors, it is strange that so few women attain this result. A properly cut princess apron in a becoming color is not only as pretty a garment as any woman could wish for, but it throws a wonderful halo of domesticity and femininity about her. Yet women will sacrifice its possibilities for the kimono, which, while a pretty little affair in its place, cannot retain any prettiness at all after being worn awhile in the kitchen.

A dusting cap, too, may be a thing of beauty, says the Montreal Herald. Caps that recall Dutch pictures may be bought, and worn with a pretty apron they give a subtle charm to the plainest woman.

The rest of the working costume should consist of a short skirt and shirtwaist. The latter can be low in the neck and short in the sleeves, and worn with a fascinating Dutch collar may be as becoming as any ball gown.

Gift For the Bride.

A dainty gift for a bride is one or a set of handkerchiefs with an edging of crochet. With ordinary spool cotton, No. 60, and a very fine needle, crochet a pattern for a square of a trifle over two inches. Each square must be made separately. Five squares on each side are used for the border. They are joined together with an over and over stitch with a sewing needle, and the squares are then whipped on to a small fine hemstitched linen handkerchief. Handkerchiefs thus bordered are not only pretty, but durable, and they launder well.

What Every Golfer Knows.

That he is in hard luck.

That he isn't playing his game.

That it is the caddy's fault when he dubs a shot.

That somebody always moves when he tries to putt.

That he will make a much better score the next time out.

That this is the first ball he has put in the pond since goodness knows when.

That every bad shot is attended by some extenuating circumstance.

That nobody else ever plays and gets the tough lies that he gets.

That he is taking the game altogether too seriously.

That the caddy knows well enough where the ball is and will get it in the morning.

That his ball can usually be found about fifty yards short of where he's looking for it.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Making Sure.

Madge—Let's play he loves me, he loves me not.

Marjorie—Wait, dear, till I get one with the right number of leaves.—Puck.

Its Quiet Way.

There isn't any scandal.
Good people do not frown
Or call it simply awful
When autumn paints the town.

LIGHT THROWN ON THE GRAFT CHARGES

Mr. Harry Burrell Gives A Statement As To How and When Certain Transactions Took Place--Serious Charges Against Mayor Marsh and Treasurer Price--A Fit Subject for Strictest Possible Investigation

It will be remembered that Sir Mackenzie Bowell, in addressing the public meeting held in the City Hall, on the 28th of December last, he stated that, judging from the dates of the sale of lots to the Mayor's mother-in-law and the Treasurer's son-in-law, it might be inferred that the lots were sold by the officials at a profit before the relations secured them at a much lower rate. Mr. Burrell sets this question at rest. How many more there are of a like character a little more limelight may discover.

READ! READ!!

Belleville, January 6th, 1911.

H. CORBY, ESQ.,
City.

Dear Sir,—I have read the report of your controversy with the Mayor regarding the sale of some city lots, and it occurs to me that you may wish to know the facts of the case.

Mr. Ford, who eventually purchased some of the lots, endeavored to buy two from the city on Russell Street, but was advised by Mr. Price that they were under offer. This was in September. In October he was referred to the Mayor, who raised the price from $75.00 to $100.00; but eventually agreed to the original offer of $75.00 in consideration of Mr. Ford's taking two lots that were not so well situated.

When the lots were deeded to Mr. Ford, he found that they were only sold the Mrs. Smith on October 14th, about a month after he had tried to buy them from the city. His deed was dated Oct. 29th. He was prepared to pay $75.00 to the city, whereas Mrs. Smith paid but $25.00. The profit in 15 days was $200.

When the lots were sold Mr. Ford was advised by the Mayor that the Street was to be opened up, but apparently as soon as the lots were sold, nothing was done about this.

You will see clearly from this that the lots were promised to Mr. Ford at $75 each before they were sold to Mrs. Smith at $25. In other words, he was kept waiting for the lots while they were transferred to him, not directly, but via Mrs. Smith.

Hoping this will make the matter clear to you, I remain,

Yours very truly,

HARRY BURRELL.

N.B.—In explanation, I may say that Mr. Ford was acting for me.

DRUNKEN PRISONER PHYSICAL MARVEL

St. Lawrence Bridge Disaster Victim Lives Though Just Pinned Together

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 6.—With a broken neck, his legs held together by an iron bar, his tongue missing and his body bound with straps "to keep from falling apart," as he put it, T. W. Peters, of Sunbury, Pa., was a prisoner here in the Central Police Court. He was injured in the collapse of the great cantilever bridge across the St. Lawrence, several years ago.

Peters was arrested after too much New Year's celebrating. He was taken to the General Hospital, where the physicians say his neck is undoubtedly broken and pronounced him a physical marvel. He pleaded for mercy when he faced Magistrate Scott.

"What will you do if I let you go?" asked the magistrate. He said he would go right back to Sunbury, and when released he grinned as he hobbled out of the room.

COL. MATHESON AND RECIPROCITY

Provincial Treasurer Says It Would Destroy Our Dairy Industry

PERTH, Jan. 5.—Addressing last nights meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association convention, Hon. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, opposed the sentiment of the resolution passed in the morning in favor of reciprocity with the United States in dairy products.

"Are we gong to destroy our market with cheap American cheese for our good Canadian chees?" he asked. "Reciprocity will destroy our own industries."

He intimated that the Provincial Government, which a year ago released the factories from $13,000 inspection fees, was unable to give increased aid to the association. The Government, he said, intended to insist that all cheese makers have certificates.

Prof. Geo. Day, O. A. C., and C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, also gave addresses.

MOST DISASTROUS FIRE HERE IN MANY YEARS

Deacon's Shirt Factory Was Burned This Morning--Fine New Building Completely Gutted—Heavy Blow to The Enterprising Proprietors--Loss on Plant and Stock $50,000 and on Building $15,000--Insurance $50,000--About 100 Hands Thrown Out of Employment--Will Resume Buisness as Soon As Possible

Universal expressions of regret were heard upon the street to-day, and there was certainly cause for it. At an early hour this morning the city was visited by a fire which was the most disastrous which has occurred here in years. The Deacon Company's shirt factory, situated on Coleman street, just north of the ford bridge, a substantial three story brick and stone building, which yesterday was a pride to the city, to-day is nothing but blackened and charred walls.

At about 4.30 this morning Police Officer Corrigan, while upon duty, was about to walk over the foot bridge when his attention was errested by seeing smoke and a flame issuing from a northeast window of the factory. As quickly as possible he sent in an alarm of fire and although the brigade was soon upon the scene and had a number of well directed streams playing upon the flames, their efforts to check the devouring element proved futile. In fact, the flames had gained such a headway when the firemen arrived upon the scene that they were issuing from windows in various parts of the factory. The sight was one which was awfully grand. In a few minutes the flames were mounting high up in the air and illuminating the whole city. The interior of the building was by this time a veritable furnace and nothing could check the onward progress of the flames. Fortunately the building of Mr. Wm. Andress adjoining to the south of the factory were, by the well directed efforts of the firemen, saved from destruction, and at the north of the factory there were no buildings in close proximity. Although burning embers were carried for some distance and deposit upon buildings, the heavy fall snow protected same, which was a most fortunate circumstance, as had such not been the case other blaz would, in all probability, have been started.

The progress of the flames was so rapid and the building filled with an impenetrable smoke that nothing could be saved. The fire brigade had a hard siege and were kept on duty the greater portion of the day pouring water upon the burning material. It was without doubt one of the hardest fights our fire brigade had had cope with for years, and, under the circumstances, they certainly did good work.

In the year 1903 the Deacon Shirt Company was organized, with Mr. W. B. Deacon as president and Mr. F. S. Deacon as secretary-treasurer. In these few years the company gained a reputation for excellence of work which brought practical and satisfactory results. The company paid careful attention to every order and detail and by this means built up an extensive trade from coast to coast. At the time of the fire they had orders on hand which would have kept them busy without additional orders until the 1st of June.

The factory was a most substantial structure and when first built occupied a space of 70x80 feet. The rear part was of stone and the front brick. Last summer extensive improvements were made to the structure and it was lengthened and broadened out, and in appearance was decidedly improved. Yesterday there were 90 employees, chiefly girls. A representative of The Intelligencer, in conversation with Mr. F. S. Deacon, was informed that the company would resume work as soon as possible. A temporary building will be secured and the manufacture of their line of goods will be commenced within a few days. It is also the intention of the company to rebuild the burned factory at the earliest possible time. This shows commendable enterprise on behalf of the sufferers and will certainly be good tidings for not only those who are temporarily thrown out of employment, but all citizens.

LOSS AND INSURANCE.

The company at the time of the fire had a large stock of material on hand also a large stock of manufactured goods. It is roughly estimated that the loss on building, stock, machinery, etc., will be upwards of $70,000. The insurance upon the building, stock, etc., is $50,000, divided between some 14 insurance companies.

How the fire originated is not known. Mr. F. S. Deacon was in the building last evening at work and about 9.30 left the premises. Before leaving he visited several sections of the factory, and at that time everything appeared to be all right.

The members of the company will have the smypathy of the community in the loss they have sustained by the unfortunate circumstance and the wish is expressed that they may be able to overcome all difficulties and once again go forward to even greater prosperity than in the past.

CANADA CARRIED TORCH: OURS FIRST FEDERATION

In an address delivered before the Women's Canadian Club at Toronto, Sir George W. Ross presented in a graphic review the leading events of Canadian history from the time of Cartier and Champlain down to Confederation.

The story of Canada under the French regime was followed by the narrative which concerns the period subsequent to the victory on the Plains of Abraham and the collapse of French power in the New World.

When Wolfe hoisted the British flag over the northern half of this continent it was not done, Sir George said, with a desire for conquest or because the English needed the land; the chief aim of the British was to punish and humiliate France.

In the war the nation acquired a colony of 80,000 hostile men, and the first task of the Imperial Parliament was to conciliate and make the minto loyal citizens. How well this task was accomplished is shown by the fact that when the American colonies, who had counted on the aid of the French when they declared war against England, invited the French to join them, they refused.

"England won the affection of the conquered men by giving them religious liberty," said Sir George, "and by recognizing the rights of the Roman Catholics. In this religious liberty Canada led the old land and the Act of 1774 won the French Canadians to the side of the British in the struggle which ended in the independence of the United States."

Sir George then traced the movement for representative, and finally responsible government. The Constitutional Act had given Canadians a parliament and trial by jury, but unfortunately the provinces could not work together and were divorced. The family compact caused, he said, the Rebellion of 1837, and the report of Lord Durham, made immediately afterwards, called attention to the necessity of the union of Ontario and Quebec, and the need of responsible government in Canada.

The fruit of this epoch-making report was the act of union. In 1841 the colony secured the corner-stone of the British governmental system, a parliament responsible to the people. Since then freedom had grown in the country. Sir George thought that when the Clergy Reserves Act was passed, doing away with the clergy reserves, religious domination of all kinds ceased in Canada.

In closing, Sir George pointed out how worthy of study was the history of Canada. We had been the first part of the British Empire to organize a federation with a responsible government. The daring move had been completely justified by results, Australia and South Africa following the example of the Dominion in forming a federation. He pleaded for a greater knowledge of and appreciation for the makers of Canada. Not enough was known about the statesmen and scholars who had built up the country, and all Canadians ought to study their lives.

IAN ROBERTSON IN "THE THIRD FLOOR BACK"—SKETCH OF HIS CAREER.

Ian Robertson, who is appearing at Griffin's Opera House on Wednesday, Jan. 11, as "The Stranger" or "Passer-by" in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," in which he has appeared nearly 200 times in England, is no stranger to America, having spent some ten years in the eighties in the companies of Madame Modjesky, Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, A. M. Palmer, Daniel and Charles Frohman, and others. Although his work of later years has been chiefly confined to stage-management and playing leading parts with his famous brother, Johnston Forbes-Robertson, before joining the latter he achieved no little distinction with the late Sir Henry Irving, in whose Lyceum, London, company he appeared in "King Lear," "Becket," and "The Merchant of Venice," in the early nineties.

Probably, however, the zenith of his career has been reached by his sterling embodiment of the title-role in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," one of the most difficult parts an author has ever given an actor to portray.

Mr. Robertson, at the head of a specially engaged and entire English company, will be seen at here in the play which ran in New York and London throughout two successive seasons, and has now been performed nearly 1,000 times to crowded and enthusiastic houses—"The Passing of the Third Floor Back."

CURRENT EVENTS.

The good news has been handed out that another dividend is in sight for the York Loan shareholders.

It looks as if the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Company has won in that game of "bridge" with the City Council and Property Owners' Association.

The civic slate, according to reports, has been fixed, at least to a certain extent.

The stork was a busy bird in Toronto last year, when nearly 9,000 children were born in that city.

The Globe's "robin" is said to have been seen lately in the back parts of York County. Perhaps it was Robinette, who is always singing his political song.

The destruction by fire of Deacon's shirt factory this morning is nothing short of a public calamity, and coming at a time of year when employment is difficult to obtain and building operations cannot be carried on, the consequences to all concerned are all the more serious. Messrs. Deacon have, by industry and capability, built up a large business, which, it is to be hoped, they will be enabled to resume at as early a date as possible. Meantime they and their employees have the sincere sympathy of the public in their misfortune.

DANGERS OF BLOOC-POISONING

The best and surest way of insuring against blood-poisoning is to apply Zam-Buk to a cut, burn, cold sore or any open wound or diseased part as soon as sustained.

Of all the myriad forms of germs which set up blood poisoning not one has yet been found that can live in Zam-Buk. A thin layer of Zam-Buk over a wound or sore acts in two ways. It prevents all harm coming into the wound from the topside. On the underside it stimulates the cells to renewed activity, provides just the healing, tissue building material needed by causing the blood to deposit this more rapidly, and thus brngs about rapid healing. Apply it to that cold sore, those chapped hands that frost bite or that eczema. Sold a 50c. box, all stores or druggists, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

INSURED MUST SHOW INSURANCE

Clients of Unlicensed Companies Must Make Returns

The Dominion Government has sent out notices to manufacturers directing attention to the companies licensed to do business by the Government of Canada. This circular does not in any way refer to the companies that are distinctly Canadian, strong and reliable, and chartered by the Provincial governments. It mentions those only that have Dominion charters.

Under the new act of the Dominion Government, parties doing business with unlicensed companies must make their return to the Dominion Government before the first of each year, showig the amount of premium, insurance and risk.

Hon. J. J. Fey has not yet considered what action is to be taken, but it is suggested by Hon. W. J. Hanna and the insurance officials that a circular should be sent out by the Provincial Government showing the licensed companies doing business in Ontario. All the companies licensed by the Dominion are licesed by Ontario, but Ontario companies in several instances do not carry Dominion charters.

A number of the largest business houses and manufacturing concerns in Ontario carry no insurance with Canadian licensed companies, and may of them carry insurance in the non-tariff companies of New England only.

THAT RAILWAY BRIDGE AGAIN

Property Owners Discussed It—Commission Asked To Reconsider Order

The Executive of the Property Owners' Association held a meeting last evening at which the action of the Railway Commissioners in regard to the C.N.R. bridge across the Moira River was fully discussed, and it was resolved that the correspondence be sent on to the City Council, with the request that the matter be taken before the Railway Commission for reconsideration, and that a further direction or order be asked for and that the dredging suggested in the report of Dr. J. G. Sing be done first before the bridge be constructed or completed, and that immediate steps should be taken by the City Council to protect, so far as possible, the interested owners and occupants of property along the river front. And also to have a further reduction in the number of piers to three at most.

The matter of the judicial inquiry into civic matters was considered and stands until the next meeting of the Associated to be held at the City Council chamber Friday night, the 13th inst., for the City Council to take action in the meantime.

Deceased married a Miss Nelson, of Seattle. The remains will be brought here for interment.

THEY INSURE AGAINST TRIPLETS IN ENGLAND

Hearts, fingers, eyes and even the family cat are being insured in England nowadays. "Yes, of course," says Lloyds, the big insurance combine, "we insure cats. A cat is a fine risk Why, everyone knows a cat has nine lives."

Insurance against death, fire and accident is common enough. Insurance against broken hearts, marriage, triplets and other so-called catastrophes is rather new."

But insurance against broken hearts! "impossible," declare the incredulous. Well, read this:

A titled Englishman wishes his son and heir to marry. He goes to Lloyds and gets insurance that his son will marry. Sometimes he wants insurance that it will be a chorus girl. His son finally becomes engaged. If it is to a rich American girl, the whole family often wakes to the terrible independence of that liberty-loving person, and several policies may be taken out not be jilted. Such policies are issued to father o,eth rr,mb shrdlu mf ued to father, mother, brother or sister. The prospective bridegroom often has one himself. And on it he may have to raise money before the wedding day.

INSURE FORTUNE HUNTERS.

If the rich girl marries him, he pays his debts out of her million. If she changes her mind and doesn then the insurance policy makes good and the tailors, jewelers and florists lose nothing.

And does this queer insurance stop when the titles and the millions are finally married? Does it? It has only begun. Milord hikes back to Lloyds and gets insured that there will be issue of the marriage. Gets insured that it will be a son. Gets insured that the son will live. Gets insured that he will reach his majority. And so on.

A father with several daughters on his hands gets insurance that they will marry. A funny part of issuing such a policy—or tragic, as the case may be—consists in the careful summing up of the girl's chances in matrimony. This falls to the lot of an old man, long in the business, who says a knowledge of psychology and physiology is necessary for this work. He sees each girl twice, for half an hour cah time, talks with her, sounds her, reads her. He meets her at some social function and the girl doesn't know who he is. That is, the father keeps to his agreement she does not.

But if the father puts the girl "next," the wonderful old man, with an almost Sherlock Holmes ability to fathom deceit, reports to Lloyds, and not for love or money will papa be able to get a policy written now.

PROVIDE AGAINST STORK.

Not all Englishmen approve of large families. Those who do not sometimes get insured against such a calamity. Some get insurance that they will not have a child. Some get insurance that they will not have twins. Some men, naturally pessimistic, want insurance against triplets. The two latter kinds of insurance are often taken out after the stork has announced that he is about to make a visit.

Before such policies are issued Lloyds gets reliable data on the number of double or treble births on ea side of the house. And the premium is large or small accordingly. In one year four wise English families who had reason to think the stork mig deal bounteously with them took out policies against triplets. In each case there was a history of triplets on o side or the other of the house. Only one family had them. And the insurance was considerable enough clothe, feed and educate three ve fine boys.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Municipal Finance

Under the above heading the Financial Post, of Toronto, publishes a highly interesting comparison of taxation figures in Ontario cities.

For general municipal purposes, which means all purposes, exclusive of schools, the 18 cities under review levied taxes in 1909 amounting to $7,607,264. Based on 1910 population and assessment, this sum represents an average per capita of $10.47, and a tax rate of 1.67 per cent. or 16.7 mills, equivalent to $16.70 per $1,000 of assessed value for taxation. Assuming for the moment, that the prevailing custom of exempting certain classes of property from taxation did not exist, the average rate would be 1.42 per cent. or 14.2 mills, equivalent to $14.20 per $1,000 of gross assesed value, instead of $16.70. The difference, $2.50 per $1,000, represents the extra burden that tax-paying property must bear in addition to its own, in order that governmental property,—municipal, provincial, and national,—may escape, and institutions,—relgious, philanthropic and educational—go free.

The average rate per capita, as stated, is not exorbitant compared with figures elsewhere, and is more or less favorable in comparison with some of the newer sections of Canada. The actual per capita for each city, however, as shown by a table which is given, reveals most striking variations in the distribution of the average.

In this comparison Guelph, with an average rate of $2.71 is the lowest, and Chatham, with $13.96 per capita, is the highest. Belleville is eighth, with $9.02 per capita.

As to the abnormal showing made by Guelph, the Post remarks:

"It is well known that exceptional conditions obtain in Guelph, but the public will scarcely be prepared to believe without more detailed information and confirmation, that that city, however well managed, and whatever advantages it may possess over other cities, has succeeded in establishing a regular rate of taxation which, so far as the writer is informed, is unrivalled in Canada or elsewhere. The Post has made an exhaustive enquiry into the various circumstances surrounding Guelph's civic administration and enterprises, and will publish its conclusions in an early issue.

One half of the cities have a per capita rate exceeding $10, and seven of these are in excess of the average, ranging from $10.62 to $13.96. No harm can, and much good may be accomplished by these comparisons, and in the case of Chatham, the figure is so notably out of alignment that perhaps the citizens might do well to seek out the reason why.

'For school purposes the average tax levied in 1909 amounted to $2, 927,921; averaging $4.03 per head of population, or an approximate rate of .645 of 1 per cent., equal to 6.45 mills. Belleville stands fourth in this comparison with $4.03 per head of the population.

Combining the two taxes, municipal and school, it is found that the average rate per capita is $19.50, and 2.325 per cent. on the assessment for taxation. This equals an average total rate of 23 1-4 mills, or $23.25 per $1,000 valuation.

The position of the several cities is shown in the table which follows:

Table showing the total taxes (municipal and schools) of the cities in Ontario for 1909 arranged in consecutive order from the lowest per capita upward:—

	Municipal and school taxes.	Total per capita.
Guelph	$ 91,558	$ 6.17
Woodstock	91,096	9.85
Kingston	193,428	10.07
Peterboro	182,907	10.77
St. Thomas	165,133	11.17
Stratford	173,285	11.72
Belleville	120,678	12.05
Hamilton	861,021	12.25
Brantford	277,873	13.41
St. Catharines	165,148	13.41
London	684,106	13.82
Niagara Falls	119,554	14.37
Windsor	248,542	15.08
Toronto	5,170,746	15.28
Fort William	277,853	15.42
Ottawa	1,319,245	15.83
Port Arthur	213,962	16.63
Chatham	184,077	17.83
	$10,535,185	$14.50

Guelph, with the lowest assessment per capita of all the cities, still holds first place by a heavy margin, and Chatham retains the same place as in the first table, though the excess figure over the next highest rate per capita, is considerably reduced. Of the four largest cities, Ottawa shows the heaviest total tax, being 55 cents per head higher than Toronto with $15.28. Hamilton and London are both below the average, with $12.25 and 13.82 respectively. Belleville shows well in this respect, standing seventh with $12.05 per head, which is $2.35 below the average.

It should not be assumed, however, argues the Post, that a low tax per capita proves, of itself, that a city is well administered. It may, to an extent, be proof that it is behind the times. Public improvements cost money, and no credit is due to any municipality which secures a low rate of taxation by avoiding such expenditures as are necessary for health, comfort and convenience of its citizens. Belleville is not lacking in this respect, as the city has heavy investments in the water works, gas plant, granolithic walks and sewers, city hall, schools and police station not forgetting a large number of lots held for taxes. Belleville is a progressive city; it is not overburdened with taxation and the future is bright. It is the duty of all good citizens to assist in making that future as bright as possible by lending their aid and countenance to those whose object is to see it governed wisely, and above all, honestly.

MAKE LIFE WORTH LIVING

SAYS ELDER CUNNINGHAM.

When pure healthy blood courses through every vein and artery of the body, the organs are in a healthy condition, and a strenuous, active life is a pleasure to man or woman.

But if the blood is impure or sluggish, the appetite poor, digestion weak, and vitality not up to the standard, life is a burden; then you need Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil. Such evidence as comes from Henry Cunningham, elder of the Baptist Church, Kingston, N. C., should be convincing. He says, "I was run down and weak from general debility, and suffered with vertigo. I took Vinol with the most gratifying results. I gained in health and strength and now feel unusually well."

Elder Cunningham's recovery was due to the combined action of the medicinal elements of cods' livers, aided by the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

WOMAN'S REASON :—'B—CAUSE.

In growing numbers the women of the United States, east and west, north and south, are pursuing their suffrage campaign with increasing ardor. Some effective suffrage literature which has just been published by the 'Just Franchise' League of a county in Maryland gives the 'woman's reason' why women should have votes—'Because.'

Because women have to obey the laws just as men do they should vote equally with men.

Because women pay taxes just as men do, thus supporting the government, they should vote equally with men.

Because women suffer from bad government just as do men, they should vote equally with the men.

Because mothers need every help in making their childrens' environment good, they should vote equally with the men.

Because women are in industry and their health and that of the future citizens is endangered by evil working conditions that can only be remedied by legislation, they should vote equally with the men.

Because women of leisure that serve the state in public matters should be able to back their advice by their vote, the should vote equally with men.

Because busy house-mothers and professional women cannot give such public service, and only serve the state by the same means used by the busy men—namely, by casting a ballot, they should vote equally with men.

Because women need to be trained to a higher sense of responsibility, and such sense develops by use, they should vote equally with men.

Becaue women are the consumers, and the consumers need fuller representation in politics, they should vote equally with men.

Because women are citizens of a democracy, which is a government of the people, by the people, for the people, and women are people, they should vote equally with men.

Because women's chief interest is the home, and women will vote for the home

SPREAD MANURE IN FALL.

Old Practice of Keeping Until Spring Generally Abandoned.

The old method of keeping all the manure produced upon the farm and spreading it in the spring is practiced but little at present, says a correspondent of the American Cultivator.

There is a time perhaps during the month of October when the average farmer is too busy husking corn and getting ready for winter to stop to haul manure out every day or every few days. But after this rush period the manure should be hauled out every few days and spread broadcast.

This method is very advantageous in that it will give the horses exercise through the winter. It does not take long each day and cuts out the task of hauling manure continually for two or three weeks in the busy spring season. By hauling out as soon as it is made all danger from heating is done away with and the valuable constituents of the manure are saved. Nitrogen, one of the most valuable constituents of manure, is often lost by heating when in piles.

Carefully conducted experiments at the Massachusetts experiment station tend to show there is no loss in richness when the manure is spread broadcast in the winter. A difference is always noted for the better in this method over the other way of waiting until spring and spreading.

Even though the lumps of manure freeze while in the field, it has been shown that this is just what the manure needs. The action of the weather on the various constituents is just what is needed to make the manure more available as a plant food.

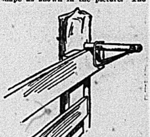
The possibility of washing is practically the only objection against winter spreading, but applies only to hilly land. With the exception of these very sloping lands it is found advisable to cart during the winter in practically all cases. It is beneficial both as a saving of time and as a benefit to the soil.

> The great farm cry now is not more land, but more fertile land, and the only solution in successful future farming is in the increased fertility of the soil. It must be made more fertile. Future human food supply depends upon it.

SIMPLY MADE AND GOOD.

Gate Latch Constructed of Easily Procurable Materials.

The latch shown in the accompanying cut is one of the most satisfactory a writer in the Kansas Farmer has ever seen on a farm gate. It is made of a solid iron bar threaded on one end so as to screw into the gatepost. On this is hung, by a bolt through its ends and the iron bar, a small iron rod which has been bent into proper shape as shown in the picture. The bar must have a pin through it at the proper place to catch the latch and prevent its being thrown clear over when the gate is closed with force. A piece of gas pipe may be substituted for the iron bar in the post. If desirable a small piece of hoop iron can be nailed upon the end of the gate board which engages the latch and thus prevent wear. This, however, is not necessary. This latch is the invention of R. J. Linscott of Holton, Kan.



HANDY GATE LATCH.

The Hum of the Hive.

Injury is done beekeepers by spraying fruit trees with poisonous substances before the petals fall.

The use of comb foundation has made possible the production of straight brood and extract combs and marketable comb honey.

It's nice to have your supers all clean, with the foundation fixed in the frames and sections. When the bees need them put them on.

Some beekeepers use a trap at the entrance of the hive. This trap allows the workers to pass, but catches and holds the queen when the bees swarm.

Did you ever think that an ounce of wax is worth nearly 2 cents, that it does not take a very large piece to weigh an ounce and that there are always a demand and ready sale for it?

If you keep your smoker in the honey house cut an old five gallon can in two and nail half of it to the wall near the door, in which to place the smoker when you have emptied out the coals after using it. Should a few stray sparks remain in it there will be no danger of them dropping on to something combustible and starting a fire.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA

Strong Testimony of Emigrant Commissioner the Hon. George Starr, as to the Power of Radway's Ready Relief in a Case of Sciatic Rheumatism.

Van Ness Place, New York.

Dr. Radway—With me your Ready Relief has worked wonders. For the last three years I have had frequent and severe attacks, sometimes extending from lumbar regions to my ankles, and at times to both lower limbs.

During the time I have been afflicted I have tried almost all the remedies recommended by wise men and fools, hoping to find relief, but all proved to be failures.

I have tried various kinds of baths, manipulation, outward application of liniments too numerous to mention, and prescriptions of the most eminent physicians, all of which failed to give me relief.

Last September, at the request of a friend (who had been afflicted as myself), I was induced to try your remedy. I was then suffering fearfully with one of my old turns. To my surprise and delight the first application gave me ease, after bathing and rubbing the parts affected, leaving the limbs in a warm glow created by the Ready Relief. In a short time the pain passed entirely away. Although I have slight periodical attacks, approaching a change of weather, I know now how to cure myself and feel quite master of the situation. Radway's Ready Relief is my friend. I never travel without a bottle in my valise. Yours truly,

GEORGE STARR.

Must Have License.

Ottawa, Jan. 7—To prevent the over-exploitation of the salmon fisheries of British Columbia, and their consequent depletion by the canneries and curing establishments, an order-in-council has been passed, declaring that no boat will be allowed to engage in salmon fishing except under license from the Minister of Marine, while the number of boats which will be allowed each cannery and curing establishment has been named. The canneries in all will be allowed 1,990 boats.

Toronto's Bill of Health.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—There were 408 more cases of typhoid in Toronto in 1910 than in 1909. Dr. G. G. Nasmith, city bacteriologist, attributes it to the fact that more care was observed in reporting cases last year.

The figures for diphtheria in 1910 were 1,155 as against 1,292 in 1909; and in scarlet fever 1,494 cases were reported in 1910 in comparison to 1,564 in the previous year.

An Object of Pity

That part of our nature which we call the emotional is much more highly developed in women than in men. They are more sensitive, more tender, more sympathetic, more pronounced in their likes and dislikes, more susceptible to the extremes of pleasure and pain; and these refined mental qualities, no less than beauty of form and feature, make up the atmosphere of attractiveness and charm which always surrounds true womanliness.

The continued existence of these winning, engaging womanly characteristics depends to a very large extent on the regularity of the womanly functions and the condition of the womanly organs; and when these functions and organs become disordered or diseased the same mental qualities which are the glory of a well woman become the source of suffering and torture almost indescribable. Her cheery hopefulness is changed to a feeling of despondency, almost of despair, and she is haunted with forebodings of worse evils to come. Instead of being entertaining and companionable, she becomes moody and irritable, being unable to keep her mind from dwelling on her troubles. She becomes morbidly sensitive, imagining that she is being slighted or foresaken by her relatives and friends and she has a most humiliating sense of her miserable condition and of her loss of her womanly attributes. If she is religiously inclined she is very liable to be oppressed with doubts and fears in regard to her spiritual condition, or to think that she is eternally lost. In addition to this, she has also to endure the most distressing aches and pains.

What makes the case still more pitiable, especially with married women, is the fact that few men understand or appreciate the extent of their suffering, or the seriousness of the troubles causing it. Many doctors even speak of these disorders as subjects for ridicule, and the poor sufferer often gets a reputation for being a crank or a scold when she more nearly approaches being a martyr.

As these disorders are due to a disordered condition of the womanly organs, it is evident that to effect a cure these organs must be restored to normal condition; or, in other words, the circulation, which has become congested and stagnant in these parts, must be improved so that the waste matter will be expelled, and the nourishment so badly needed be brought to these suffering organs. It is the waste matter, or broken down tissue, which is held in the stagnant blood vessels in these parts that causes most of the suffering by oppressing the nerves located in these parts.

ORANGE LILY
TRADE MARK

The remedy known as ORANGE LILY will positively relieve this congestion and restore normal circulation in the disordered organs. It is an applied or local treatment, and acts wholly on these parts. It is absorbed into the blood vessels in these organs, and as it has powerful antiseptic properties, it immediately acts on the waste matter held there, and causes it to be discharged. As this dead matter is discharged the nerves are relieved, the pains and mental troubles become less, and the nerves and blood vessels become stronger. ORANGE LILY thus proves its merit by actual, visible results. It acts as certainly and as positively on all female troubles as anti-toxin does on diphtheria.

Winnipeg, April 23th, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—I am very grateful to ORANGE LILY for the change it has made in my life. When I commenced its use eight months ago I felt I would be surely insane before the year was ended. The pain I suffered often made me wish for death, and besides I would have such fits of depression and nervous twitching that I would have to scream. I had doctored with three different doctors for over two years, and had also used both the Pierce and Pinkham medicines, but none of them seemed to reach my case. I felt some improvement after the first month's use of ORANGE LILY and have kept gaining ever since. I do not feel that I am entirely cured yet, but I am so much better than I was that I am sure I will soon be entirely well. I sleep well, and feel cheerful and happy, except that I am occasionally somewhat depressed, but these spells are getting fewer and milder. I have also noticeably improved in appearance. Enclosed find $3 for which please send me two boxes of ORANGE LILY and one of [illegible] Massage. I might add that the matter which used to be freely discharged, and which looked like a chicken's gizzard, is becoming very scant, and I imagine that the circulation is pretty well restored. Am I not right in this? Your sincere friend, MRS. L. E. A.

Free to all Sufferers

In order to enable every woman suffering from any form of female disorders to test the merits of ORANGE LILY, I will send to everyone who will send me her address, or the address of any suffering friend enough of the remedy for ten days' treatment, absolutely free. As this is worth 35c. it is only because I know that it must give relief that I make this free trial offer. Further, if any woman wishes expert medical advice, and will write me a full description of her case, I will submit same to the staff of the Coonley Medical Institute, Detroit, Mich., and they will write her direct without

IT IS NO WRONG TO SLAY THEM

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—While New York press comment on the Stephney affair is somewhat inclined to sarcastic wonderment that such things could happen in the greatest city of the world, still the seriousness is also recognized.

"Should an ambitious novelist write of such a battle in the streets of London, the critics of the world would rise as one man and declare his picture impossible," says the Herald. "By yesterday's battle the attention of the world is called to what from this distance appears to be a serious state of affairs in the English capital, beside which our troubles with Black Hand and kindred bodies pale into mere nothingness. It is probably part of the price that England has to pay for harboring anarchists."

"For years the cult of militant anarchy has been ominously growing in London," says The Tribune. "Lax immigration laws have permitted criminals from every land to find asylum there, with too great confidence that their appreciation of the value of the asylum would restrain them from abusing its privileges. So London has become the habitat of many alien anarchists, to the increasing apprehension of thoughtful citizens. The double murder not long ago by a Hindoo anarchist, who has been in close association with similar criminals of other countries, was the first rude awakening of the British capital to an actual realization of conditions, and the assassination of policemen by alien anarchists last month brought matters to a head.

"The episode is another reminder of the persistence of primitive passions and of the necessity of primitive methods in dealing with them. These anarchists in London were animated by precisely the same spirit as that of a Malay runnig amuck, or of a renegade Sioux at bay in the Bad Lands. They had made themselves outlaws and foes to the human race, and there was nothing for them to do but to kill and be killed. Their besiegers were under a dreadful compulsion from which there was no escape. It was no wrong to the trapped tigers to slay them, and it would have been a wrong to society and to humanity to let them escape."

"Without the use of troops in meeting the fire of the besieged desperadoes, the police, however numerous, would have been at their mercy," says The World. "They were dealing with a class of outlaws who shoot to kill without hesitation. The London policeman is an admirable peace officer for ordinary purposes, but in time of sudden emergency he is unable to defend either himself or the public. To continue to pit unarmed and defenceless policemen against armed criminals will only mean the recurrence of such needless murderers as have recently so greatly shocked the British capital.

Tie-Up in Lumber Yards.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—A tie-up of the Booth lumber business for two days resulted from a delay on the part of the C.P.R. in allowing the G.T.R. to use a quarter of a mile of track at the Chaudiere terminal. The Railway Commission ordered the G.T.R. off a viaduct, and to get in on the level, the C.P.R. line was necessary.

Last night a temporary agreement was got. Immediately work was started, and continued till the last of the waiting cars had been sent on its way. Specially augmented crews worked all night to do this, the railway sparing no effort to relieve the congestion. One hundred and seventy-five flat lumber cars had lain idle and 40 of Booth's teams stood in the stable while the dispute lasted.

Will Protest Moderator Action.

Kingston, Jan. 7.—Notice has been received by the clerk of the Kingston Presbytery that the action of the moderator in calling a meeting of the presbytery for Jan. 19 to discuss church union will be protested, and, if needful, an appeal will be sent to the synod and the assembly. It is contended that the moderator acted illegally in putting aside the decision of the presbytery and substituting one of his own.

Register Chown of Queen's is receiving the ballots of the graduates who are voting on the question of church union. All ballots are to be in by March 1.

Carried Under the Ice.

Bathurst, N.B., Jan. 7.—A young man named Levasseur, from Amqui, Que., was drowned here at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In crossing the bridge over Nepisiquet River to Intercolonial station, his hat blew into the water, and in attempting to get it, he broke through the ice and the strong current carried him under. His companion shouted for help, but it arrived too late to save him. Levasseur was 22 years old, and unmarried.

Cause and Cure of Headache

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

Says New York Is In Danger.

New York, Jan. 7.—The Merritt joint legislative commission of enquiry adjourned sine die yesterday still with no word from the missing city chamberlain, Charles H. Hyde, who is a Nova Scotian. An evening paper offered a reward of $10 for the first person to give information of his whereabouts, providing he does not publicly appear at his office before Jan. 15.

Harold Herrick, president of the Niagara Fire Insurance Co., a witness, told the committee that New York may yet see such a fire as devastated San Francisco.

"A holacaust in New York," he said, "is quite within the bounds of possibility. We have an excellent fire department, and an efficient chief, and thus far they have jumped on every fire and put it out; but no fire department ever existing subdued a conflagration once it got under way. It only ceased when it reached a natural obstacle.

"If New York has a fire like San Francisco, God help us. There would not be a solvent insurance company left in the world. No one could compute the billions of loss."

Hurried, cheap construction by speculators, and poorly installed heating plants, said Mr. Herrick, were responsible for one-third of all fires and a greater share of their spread.

"But in the city of Hamburg," he continued, "where they won't tolerate poor construction, there has not been a fire that spread outside the house in which is started since 1842."

Fireman Under Fallen Wall.

New York, Jan. 7.—The falling wall of a fire-swept factory building on Wooster street buried a fireman on the ground floor in its debris yesterday. Chief Crocker and a squad of firemen, who narrowly escaped the crash, extricated the pinioned man, who was but slightly injured.

INQUEST AT COLBORNE

Witnesses Heard Voice Say, "Shut Up; Keep Quiet."

Investigation Into Death of Miss Brimacombe Shows That Matthews Under the Influence of Liquor Invited the Girl at Supper Time to Sit by Him—Several Noises Attracted Attention.

Colborne, Jan. 7.—It is "as you were" in the position of both the crown and defence after an all day's sitting at yesterday's session of the preliminary hearing into the charge of murder against Henry I. Matthews, jr., charged with the murder of Johanna Brimacombe on Dec. 17. John Mills, J.P., and Robert Snetsinger, J.P., are the presiding magistrates, E. Gus Porter, K.C., is conducting the case for the defence, and W. F. Kerr, K.C., crown attorney, is looking after the prosecution.

The evidence taken in the morning was largely corroborative of that taken at the inquest.

Helen Briscoe, dining-room maid at the Bristol Hotel, sprung a sensation in the afternoon when she said that when Matthews came in for dinner she saw that he had been drinking. Later, when he invited Miss Brimacombe to come and sit beside him, placing a chair handy for the purpose, she ordered him aside, but Miss Brimacombe was inclined to accept the invitation.

Joseph McMurray said the noise he heard at the head of the stairs was loud, like a woman's voice. It sounded like a scream. He avoided Mr. Kerr's question as to whose voice it was.

"Was it not the dummy?" counsel askd.

"It was the dummy, I thought," was the answer.

The witness confirmed the previous evidence of Matthews being seen downstairs with his vest open and his watch dangling from a guard. He couldn't explain why he hadn't mentioned to Matthews the noise that had attracted his attention.

"Are you sure now, Mr. McMurray, that it was the dummy that made the noise?" asked Mr. Porter.

"No."

"You would not undertake to venture any opinion that might be relied upon?"

"No."

Nelson Murphy corroborated McMurray's evidence as to the noise, and of his ascending the stairs with Smith. While he likened the noise to that of the "dummy," he persisted in the thought that it came from Teasdale and his wife, engaged in a wrangle. Murphy firmly resisted Mr. Kerr's pressure that he might have heard a man's voice in the room, and repeatedly dodged the question as to whether it was the voice of a man or a woman.

"Did it sound to you like the voice of either Mr. Teasdale or Mrs. Teasdale?"

"No."

"Why didn't you go further?"

"I didn't want to get into trouble."

He could not tell whether the sound indicated pain or pleasure, but thought it meant distress. Contrary to his evidence at the inquest, Murphy said he did not know there was a "dummy" in the house.

Murphy told Mr. Porter that Matthews, when he came downstairs, did not look like a man who had come through a severe struggle. He did not look like a man who had just had a forcible encounter with a woman. In accordance with the testimony of Bert Rogers, the witness said that it was after eight when Matthews came down stairs, and that, under the circumstances, he might not have had supper.

John Smith, who went upstairs with Murphy to investigate the noise, said his attention was attracted by a squealing noise. He thought someone was being hurt. The sounds were coming from the door of room 14. It kept up all the while he was in the house.

"Did you hear any other sounds?" asked the crown attorney.

"Yes, sir, I heard somebody speaking."

"Could you tell the words?"

"It sounded like somebody saying, 'Shut up, shut up; keep quiet.'"

He would swear it was a man's voice. He did not pursue the question further for fear of intruding. Under cross-examination, the testimony of Smith was unshaken.

Charles A. Post, barber, for the defence, cleared up the question of the scratch on Matthews' face. It had been made on the Wednesday prior to the 17th, and had been broken again at the rink on the following Monday.

The hearing will close Saturday morning, when Teasdale's evidence will be taken. Matthews is still in Cobourg jail. In striking contract with his showing before his arrest, his face is wane and careworn. He is nervous, and at times during the hearing he perspired excessively.

Offer Power at $25.

Kingston, Jan. 7.—J. C. Kerry, consulting engineer of the Seymour Electric Co., is here endeavoring to get the Council to close a contract for power. The company's offer is to supply power at $25 per horse-power.

A Narrow Escape.

Winnipeg, Jan. 7.—Mr. Justice Metcalf, and other occupants of 317 River avenue had a narrow escape from asphyxiation yesterday morning from coal gas escaping from the furnace, while the occupants were asleep.

All Because of a Lie.

Philadelphia, Jan. 7—Because he believed that his wife had told him a lie, Henry Beckman fatally shot her at their home, 2,636 South Watts street, yesterday, and then killed himself.

INVESTING IN CANADA.

British Financier Says Field Is Considered First Class.

Montreal, Jan. 7.—K. N. MacFee of the London financial firm of K. N. MacFee & Co., doing a very large business in Canadian municipal bonds, is here and relates that there is a steady enquiry for new Canadian municipal securities. There has been no default in Canada, he says, for 50 years, except Brandon 15 years ago, and that city afterwards paid in full, so the British investing public have every confidence in the municipalities of the Dominion, especially when they are doing as at present, viz.: keeping their borrowing limit down to from eight to ten per cent. of the assessed value of the property of the municipality.

Mr. MacFee, who has been in the West, says that during the coming six months, western municipalities will be in the market for at least from thirty to fifty millions, and they will be able to justify their faith in their town's ability to carry the tax. The credit of Halifax and St. John, as well as the Ontario towns, is, he says, first class, while Montreal and Quebec can be placed in the number one class, but the English investor knows less of the Quebec municipalities, and their bonds are consequently more difficult of handling. In conclusion, Mr. MacFee drew attention to the fact that in the British Trustee Act certain securities are specified as legal for trust investments, and while this includes the securities of the Dominion of Canada and the Australian states the Canadian provinces are not in the favored categary, and while the credit of all the Canadian provinces is the best, their securities would sell better if they were included in this list.

Would Amend Treaty.

Washington, Jan. 7.—It became known yesterday that the President has been sounding certain Senators, members of the committee on foreign relations, to ascertain the chances for an amendment of the existing arbitration treaty with Great Britain, calculated to broaden the scope of that convention. It is aimed to remove the present prohibition in article one, against the submission to arbitration of questions of vital interest to the two partes or involving their honor.

If these soundings reveal a change of mind on the part of the Senate since, 1908, when strong ground was taken by a large majority against any such unlimited arbitartion, then the British Government will be approached to ascertain if it is willing to begin negotiations looking to the amendment of the existing treaty.

Escaped Death In Explosion.

Minneapolis, Jan 7.—Minneapolis was plunged into darkness and the commercial life of the city almost paralyzed yesterday morning by an explosion of the "13,000 wire" leading into the power plant of the Minneapolis General Electric Co. Eleven men employed in the building made their way to safety through the valley of the mill race, after the explosion. The plant was wrecked and a tangled mass of wire and machinery was thrown in every direction by the force of the explosion. Fire followed and completely demolished the building.

Two men were injured, and the damage to the property is estimated at $500,000.

Ask For Investigation.

Perth, Jan. 7.—At yesterday morning's session of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association it was decided to request the Dominion Dairy Commissioners to appoint a commission of experts to investigate and consider different methods of paying for milk delivery to cheese factories and creameries, to consult the authorities and experts of other countries, and, if possible, to recommend some methods that will be acceptable to dairy authorities and generally adapted to the deirymen of the Dominion.

Investigating Teddy.

Washington, Jan. 7.—Representative Rainey of Illinois offered a resolution in the House Thursday asking for the appointment of a committee of five to investigate the railroad expenses of Theodore Roosevelt for travel while he was President, with authority to examine the books of the Pennsylvania Railway, the Southern Railway and the Northern Pacific Railway, to determine what expenses were paid by the former President and what proportion furnished by the railroads.

Western Telegraph Rates.

Winnipeg, Jan. 7.—In connection with the complaint of the Board of Trade against excessive telegraph rates into and out of the city, the Railway Commission has notified the Board of Trade that they have recommended to the Minister of Justice the appointment of public counsel to represent the applicants, and that the appointment of counsel and date of hearing will be fixed in the near future.

Historic Church Burned.

Kingston, Jan. 7.—Fire, believed to have been caused by a defective chimney, yesterday destroyed the Methodist Church at Odessa, built in 1869, of which Rev. J. H. Bell is pastor. A bucket brigade was formed of villagers, but was of little use. It will require over $20,000 to replace the building. The church site was given by Capt. Booth, a pioneer U. E. Loyalist. It was partially insured.

Will Build Nurses' Home.

Brantford, Jan. 7.—At the annual meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary here yesterday, $11,200 was reported in the treasury to be applied to the building of a nurses' home in connection with the John H. Stratford Hospital. It is expected that the home will be built this year.

Eight Additional Indictments.

New York, Jan. 7.—Eight additional indictments, charging the further larceny of $217,000, were returned yesterday against Joseph G. Robin, recently indicted on the charge of larceny of $80,000 from the Washington Savings Bank.

LEGISLATURE JAN. 24

Official Announcement Is to Be Made To-Day.

Sir James Whitney Does Not Expect an Unusually Heavy Session, But For All That There Will Be Plenty of Routine and a Large Quota of New Measures—Col. Matheson Reports Good Financial State.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—To-day's Ontario Gazette will contain the proclamation of His Hon. Lieut.-Governor Gibson, summoning the members to attend the session of the twelfth Parliament of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario on Tuesday, Jan. 24, inst., at 3 o'clock of the afternoon of the aforesaid date.

The announcement of this early date will not come as a surprise, as it is but one week earlier than the date referred to a few days ago as that looked for by the officials at the Parliament Buildings. The date, however, is in the nature of a bombshell to the members of the legal profession, who were relying upon a prediction given as semi-official in a Toronto newspaper, which named March 19 as the probable date for the opening.

Sir James Whitney stated last night that although the session was called at the earliest date that the progress with the completion of the west wing rendered convenient, it was not because of any expectation that the business of the session would be excessively heavy or its duration be prolonged. The indications were for an ordinary, useful session.

Delicate and difficult will be one issue to be dealt with by the Legislative Chamber, that of dual languages in the schools.

According to a statement from a well-informed source, the Provincial Treasurer has a measure well advanced for submission to the House for a graded higher license system with respect to the sale of intoxicating liquors.

Hon. Col. Matheson will again have a most satisfactory financial statement to make for the financial year, which closed Oct. 31. The returns will show that the current revenue and expenditures have been well balanced, and that the estimates presented last spring were prepared with an excellent appreciation of the year's outlook.

The Legislature will be asked to authorize an issue of bonds to the amount of about $300,000,000 for the purcahse of certain license holders' extensive timber holdings in Algonquin Park.

Private legislation may not assume its full proportions, owing to the comparatively short notice of the session, which opens one day earlier than a year ago. The legal departments of the various railways holding Ontario franchises have, however, already a number of them, posted notices of applications for extensions of their lines.

Amendments to the Public and Separate School Acts are looked for as probable in relation to the French schools in Eastern Ontario, as well as the dual language problem in Essex County. The Sturgeon Falls situation is also likely to be dealt with.

Cut In Toronto Licenses.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—There is some talk around the city hall that the temperance aldermen may institute a measure to reduce the number of shop licenses in Toronto this year from 50 to 24, and to curtail the hours of selling liquor in both hotels and shops.

It is also noteworthy that the local hotel proprietors are anticipating some new move on the part of the license department that may affect their profits in some way. This uneasiness is aroused by the fact that the commissioners are demanding to know the average daily receipts over all bars; the highest day's receipts and the lowest day's receipts during the past year.

Mayoralty Protest.

Winnipeg, Jan. 7—Mayor Evans yesterday retained H. Whitlaw, who until recently was city prosecutor, to represent him in the petition brought by the unsuccessful candidate, E. D. Martin, to contest the mayoralty election. The city prosecutor is an appointee of the Provincial Government.

First Fire Chief Dead.

London, Jan. 7.—Captain Thomas Wastie, first chief of the London fire brigade as a paid organization, died yesterday at San Jose, Calif.

Captain Wastie was in command of the ill-fated steamer Victoria the season before it went down on the River Thames with 200 persons.

A Dancing Doctor.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Sir James Grant, dean of the doctors of Ottawa, gave an example of energy at the age of 80 by dancing a highland fling Thursday night before his fellow members of the Medico-Chirurgical Society at the annual dinner at the golf club.

Nearly Bled to Death.

Calgary, Jan. 7.—President J. L. Sayre of the Sayre Automobile Co. nearly bled to death by a cut from broken glass, when his automobile collided with a street car at the subway. His condition is precarious. He will lose a leg.

Must Have Safeguards.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Fire Chief Graham will notify the Government that it cannot continue storing alcohol and methylated spirits under the same conditions as were revealed by the fire in the inland revenue warehouse on Queen street.

Had a Royal Time.

London, Jan. 7.—Postmaster-General Lemieux is greatly pleased with his visit to South Africa. Everyone was attentive and considerate en route. They had a royal time. He was a public guest everywhere the steamer called.

IS AGAIN REMANDED

Farmers Disappointed at Postponement of Travers Case.

Manager of Farmers' Bank Appears In Court and Adjournment of a Week Is Taken — Delegation of Shareholders From Halton Go to Toronto to Watch Trial—They Are Anxious For a Full Investigation.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Considerable surprise was expressed yesterday morning when W. R. Travers was again remanded in police court for yet another week's delay. Crown Attorney Corley had announced at his last arraignment that the crown would be ready to open its case yesterday and witnesses had been summoned from the Finance Department at Ottawa to swear to the returns made to the Government by the former general manager of the Farmers' Bank, but these were not called, and Mr. Corley once more declared that he was not ready to go on, and asked for a week's remand. This was reluctantly granted by Magistrate Denison.

At each previous appearance of Mr. Travers, H. H. Dewart, K.C., his counsel, has bitterly protested against the delay, but yesterday he smilingly concurred. Bail was renewed in sureties of $20,000 in each case, both of which were supplied by A. M. Orpen.

The public demand for a deep and searching probing into all the affairs of the bank is growing daily more forceful and more insistent. Yesterday a number of farmers, shareholders of the bank, journeyed to the city from Halton County, where the stock is heavily held, to hear the opening of the case. These were bitterly disappointed when the "nothing doing" sign was put up for another week.

The question most discussed by those interested, and which seems to be uppermost in the mind of the man-on-the-street is as to the possible implication of others than Mr. Travers in the failure of the bank and the likelihood of their prosecution. These have been looking to the trial of Mr. Travers for the uncovering of facts implicating such possible additional parties, and yesterday a fear was spread among them that should the former manager plead guilty to the charges preferred against him, no investigation would follow, and that he would merely be sentenced and the matter allowed to drop without the real facts of the bank's mismanagement being brought to light.

Palatial Varsity Club.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Proud varsity students will before long be able to show their friends one of the finest college club buildings on the continent. President Falconer made the first official announcement yesterday regarding the students's club building, a munificent gift of the Massey estate, and of which the plans are already made. The building will cost from $300,000 to $500,000, and will have a gymnasium with modern equipment, smoke rooms, billiard rooms, lounging rooms, a library and dance halls.

Work will be started as soon as the weather permits in the spring, and along with the work of excavation will go the old gymnasium, which is fast becoming antiquated.

A Delightful Memorial.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 7.—Bishop Worrell received an acknowledgement yesterday from the Bishop of London of a handsomely bound edition of the proceedings of the Anglican Congress held in Halifax last summer. Bishop Ingram says:

"The delightful memorial of my visit to you all in Canada has just arrived. I must write at once to thank you for it. It was a very, very happy time to me, and it is delightful to think that I was any help to you. The book will always lie upon my table to remind me of the many kind friends on the other side of the Atlantic."

Discriminating Rates.

Winnipeg, Jan. 7.—The Board of Trade have been notified by the Railway Commission that the C.P.R., C.N.R. and G.T.R. have been notified of the application of the Vancouver Board of Trade for an order directing the C.P.R., amongst other things, to cease from charging discriminating rates on Alberta grain to the Pacific coast, as compared with grain rates to Port Arthur and Fort William, and that the companies will be required to speak as to the reasonableness of the rates on grain and grain products between Lake Superior and the mountains.

Protectorate For Honduras.

New York, Jan. 7.—A Washington special to The American says: American protectorate over Honduras, through an assumption of the national loan of that republic by a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan, it is said, will be effected within twenty-four hours.

Gen. Peredeux, Minister of Finance for Honduras, left New York Thursday night for Washington to complete the deal.

LARGE AMOUNT UNCLAIMED BY YORK LOAN SHAREHOLDERS

Over five years after the York County Loan and Savings Co. went into liquidation there are still 10,000 shareholders who have made no application to the National Trust Company, liquidators, for the amount of their claim against the defunct company.

The winding up order was made on the 16th, December, 1905. At that time, or within two years afterwards, 114,000 shareholders sent in their pass books to claim the amount due them. An inspection of the books by the liquidators shewed 25,000 shareholders with balances to their credit who had not sent in their books.

Day by day these pass books have trickled in. Not a week passes but some come to hand. Yesterday one came from Toledo, Ohio. In the last three years of the missing 25,000 books, 15,000 have come to hand. But there are still 10,000 shareholders, with claims aggregating roughly $60,000, whose books have not been sent in. If these people now send in their pass books they will at once receive a cheque for the first dividend of 25 per cent.

The work of the liquidator has revealed the trek which is in steady progress from Old Ontario to the West. The indications are that this is a serious menace to Old Ontario, as in the case of the thrifty farmers who deposited their savings with the York County Loan a great number have moved out to the prairies.

Many have moved, leaving no trace of their whereabouts, and there are now in the hands of the liquidators, 3000 letters containing cheques which have been returned undelivered. There were sent out to the best address on the files of the company, but failed to locate the addressee. These letters represent dividends aggregating about $5,000, and may be had by the persons to whom they are addressed if their correct address is sent in to the liquidators.

As illustrating the wide ramifications of the defunct company, cheques have been sent out to shareholders in Japan, in Sweden, and in Switzerland. It is stated that most of these claims originated in Winnipeg, where a large foreign population took advantage of the prospects offered by York County Loan Co. These foreigners have gone back to their homes and their dividends must be sent after them.

The first dividend was paid on November 1st, 1909. The date of the second depends on the rate at which the assets are realized. It takes $750,000 to pay a dividend of 25 cents on the dollar and though there is still that amount already in sight, it will be some months before it is realized. The second dividend, which it is hoped will be paid by the end of this year, will not be a final dividend, though how much more than 50 cents on the dollar will be paid altogether cannot yet be said.

Nine-tenths of the real estate has already been sold, there being about 5,550 feet still fo rsale. This, which has an estimated value of $150,000, it is anticipated will be disposed of by September. This property is mostly residential, only about 200 feet being in business sections.

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE"

Clever Comedy Capably Rendered at Griffin's Last Night To A Big House

Charles A. Sellon's jolly musical jingle, "The Cat and the Fiddle," was produced at Griffin's Opera House last night to a large and appreciative audience. The play is somewhat different from the usual musical comedies and appears to depend to a considerable extent for its success on the scenic effects, which are decidedly good. The choruses were well rendered by an even balanced company. The airs are catchy and the songs rendered of the latest. Harry B. Watson, as "Happy, a child of fortune," was the chief comedian, and while he had a role that was decidedly funny, he was equal to the occasion and kept the audience in good humor. Rose and Arthur Boylan made a great hit in their "Dance of the Rose," which was most cleverly executed by them. Both are recognized as great delineators of eccentric dancers and they certainly born out that reputation. All who took part in the play carried out to the letter the parts assigned to them. One of the chief numbers rendered and which appeared to appeal to the audience most was "My Maid in the Moon," by J. O. Campbell and a fine balanced chorus. The play throughout was one that was thoroughly enjoyed by all who were present, judging from the hearty applause which at times was most liberal.

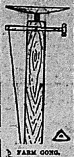
An Effective Farm Gong.



FARM GONG.

Get a disk from an old disk plow and drive a bolt through it into the top of a post as shown in the sketch. Then bore a small hole through the handle of a hammer and fasten it with a twenty-penny nail to the post about six inches from the top. A twelve foot post set eighteen inches into the ground is about right. This gives you a first class serviceable farm gong. — Farm and Fireside.

Keeping Cabbage In Fall.

Early in December turn each head over to the north and bank the soil over the stem and base of the head, leaving merely the top exposed. Some make the mistake of turning the heads south, and the heads will be certain to get damaged, for the stem and base of the head are the most tender parts, and these will be to the north, while the morning sun will strike the open head to the south when frozen and damage it, says Progressive Farmer.

The Corn Knife.

A good corn knife makes the work of cutting corn easier. One with a strap for the wrist relieves the ache wonderfully.

The Hum of the Hive.

Economy in the use of foundation is wasteful, and it is a poor practice to put first strips or slatters of foundation in the section boxes, for it is an indisputable fact that a full sheet of foundation in each section box means not only their ready acceptance by the bees, but also the building of straighter combs.

By selection and restriction in the matter of queens we can improve our bees just as we can other stock, and there is always present in every apiary some choice queen far ahead of the others which will give us most excellent queens for requeening.

Don't keep bees unless you mean to give them the proper care and attention. If you can't do that you had better leave some one else keep the bees and buy your honey from him.

A man who knows "all about bees" and does not believe that anything more can be gained by reading bee journals, books on bees, etc., will soon be far behind the age.

The present improved system of management requires that hives should not stand too near each other. There should be at least six feet between them, and ten feet would be a preferable distance.

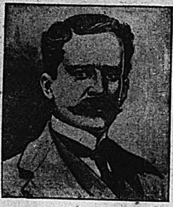
I AM SATISFIED THAT "FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED ME OF SCIATIC RHEUMATISM

AND "FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL CURE ANYONE WHO TAKES THEM AS DIRECTED



JOHN B. McDONALD

McMILLAN'S CORNER, ONT., SEPT. 30th, 1910.

Your remedy, "Fruit-a-tives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatica, or Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year for days at a time, and not being able to work at anything. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything, it would pass away. They gave me mustard plasters and other remedies that did no good. Plasters took no effect on me—except to blister me and make raw sores on the place applied to. I took many advertised remedies without benefit, but, fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives", and they cured me.

Since then I take them occasionally and keep free from pain. I am satisfied "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism, and they will cure anyone who takes them as directed. I can conscientiously recommend them to any Rheumatic sufferer, and hope they will try them. Mr. J. S. Munroe of Monckland Station is where I purchase them, and he recommends them, also.

If this letter would be of value to you, I hereby authorize you to publish it, as well as my accompanying photograph.

(Signed) JOHN B. McDONALD.

Almost everybody in Stormont County, Ontario, knows "John McDonald". For twenty three years, he has been "the village blacksmith" for a good part of the population. He is an expert at his chosen vocation and people came from miles to avail themselves of his services.

Being such a well known man, Mr. McDonald is naturally careful in making any statement for publication, knowing that his friends, neighbors and patrons will believe what John B. McDonald says.

Yet Mr. McDonald is very grateful to "Fruit-a-tives"—not only for saving him so much suffering, but also keeping him in good health so that he can work daily at his business. Mr. McDonald believes in "Fruit-a-tives" because these famous fruit tablets cured him when all else failed. Quite naturally, he is willing to sign his name to a clear statement of the facts.

Mr. McDonald is quite right in saying "Fruit-a-tives" is a panacea for Rheumatism. It is more—it is the greatest cure for Rheumatism in the world. We would go a step farther and say "Fruit-a-tives" is the only cure for Rheumatism in the world. "Fruit-a-tives" goes to the seat of the trouble—the blood—and keeps the blood free from uric acid by completely regulating the bowels, Kidneys and skin. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit. "Fruit-a-tives" contains the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, combined with valuable heart and nerve tonics—the whole forming a curative combination which has no equal in the annals of medicine. Being made of fruit, the action of "Fruit-a-tives" is mild while the taste is extremely pleasant. If you feel your old enemy Rheumatism coming back, drive it out of your system by taking "Fruit-a-tives" the wonderful medicine made of fruit. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

OFFICE OF THE MAYORESS.

The duties of the mayoress of a Canadian city differ from those of the mayoress of an English town,—in degree, rather than in kind, to the extent that wome take a much greater part in public life in the Old Country than they do here. So exacting are the duties of an English mayoress that the nominee for the mayor, before his election, sometimes consults his wife, or sister, or daughter as to her willingness to undertake her part of the office.

Usually, says the London Daily Chronicle, her first definite social and official action is to call upon the wives of all aldermen and town councillors. This is a sufficiently trying start on a new career, for quite properly the constituent members of the corporation belong to widely different strata. Some will already be well known to her; others count themselves in a more exclusive set; there will be worthy matrons ill at ease in gilt and alabaster drawing rooms, and a few perhaps doing the honors of best parlors and with some difficulty refraining from dusting the best chair But rich or poor, the mayoress, by her tact and happy touching of their common interests, must lay then the foundation of a twelvemonth of good will.

Two sorts of duties stand out conspicuously on a mayoress' list. One sort has relation to her position as municipal hostess; the other is concerned with the assistance expected of her in a widely diversified philanthropic sphere. She is expected to give a certain number of 'civic at homes' at which, while following precedent, her individuality has plenty of scope. For these functions the Council Chamber is at her disposal. When the sovereign or some exalted personage connected with the Crown honors the city with a call the actual reception party devolves on the mayoress.

Philanthropically a mayoress' duties are still more exacting. Nearly every committee of a flower show, baby show or what not expects her to open it—especially bazaars. These last are something of an ordeal to one who has never been the central figure on a platform. She must have prepared a few sentences of sympathy and congratulation—'I have much pleasure in declaring this bazaar open' is scarcely sufficient.

The office has, of course, its compensations. The influence of a chief citizeness' name is worth while, and the mayoress is in a position to further various projects of helpfulness. In English towns and boroughs the Council Chamber is at her disposal for meetings, etc., when not required for its specific purpose, but politics are outside the range of her activities. The English mayoress has also the privilege of wearing a civic jewel or badge, which may be like a lesser mayoral chain, or pendant or medallion.

A MATINEE HAT OF 1779.

To those who feel inclined to criticize the modern headgear as represented by the unduly wide hat, the following description of a 'creation' of an eighteenth century milliner is commended, as taken from a letter written in 1779:

'If I had thought of it time I would have sent you a drawing of a cap which I got from Paris, a commission I undertook for a young lady in Holland. It is the admiration of all beholders, being in the newest and most court-worn taste. It has a towering feather on the right, a drooping one on the left, and a boquet of Jasmine in the centre. Likewise a bouquet of hyacinths towards the left The whole is surrounded with a row of pearls (not real) from which hangs down at the left side and far back, a dangling bunch of pearls like a bell. There is a great deal of blonde and gauze bunching out on all sides. I was obliged to send for a wright to open the box to satisfy the curiosity of those that wanted to see it.'

MAGYAR EFFECTS IN VOGUE.

The Magyar effect on bodice and blouse seems to reign supreme, and it is the exception rather than the rule to see the upper part of a dress made with an armhole. When correctly cut the arrangement is very pretty, and shows the grace of the shoulder line much more distinctly than with the separate sleeve and oversleeve. This is particularly the case with evening bodices, many of which are extremely simple. It has often been proved that the extreme popularity of some pretty fashion results in its speedy downfall, but at present this does not seem to apply to the overdress, with which almost every evening dress is supplied. With the help of this the prettiest shot effects are produced over a simple slip (consisting of a Magyar bodice and plain skirt) of silk or satin. A very beautiful combination is a yellow-pink tone for the foundation and over this a tunic of mole ninon, finished with bands of beaded gold or silver embroidery and some kind of shaped plaque of the same finishing as the narrow waistband at the front and back. Then there is the beaded overdress which is seen at its best when cut on a semi-fitting princess lines and perfectly plain and close fitting at the knees Such overdresses are simple and easy to make and can be achieved at home with the help of a good pattern, to hide the defects in some half-worn evening gown.

THE SKATING SKIRT.

It is almost impossible to make the ordinary walking skirt serve in the skating rink this winter, as the narrow skirts will allow of no movement so free as the long athletic strides of the graceful skater. The skating skirt combines with absolutely straight lines sufficient fulness to make skating as simple as it was in the days of the side plaited model. It is really easier and more comfortable for all kinds of exercise than the old skirt, which contained so much fulness that the extra folds and plaits of the material were continually hampering the wearer. The necessary fulness about the feet in the skating skirt is hidden beneath the wide double box plaits which hang perfectly straight ordinarily, but open out full and just as wide as desired when active exercise is indulged in. It fits flat and snug about the waist and hips, but must not be drawn back so flat that it will strain A border of fur about the hem o fthe skirt is not advisable. Unless it is sewed on very firm there is always the danger of the skate catching through the fur and causing a nasty tumble. For this same reason any trimming such as braid or folds or bands of material is not to be advised as a means of adorning the hem of a skating skirt.

GOLD AND SILVER MEDALS.

In three weeks from to-day a very important Bible study contest starts in connection with the Intelligencer.

Most if not all, of our readers are aware of its importance, and its conditions, and this is simply to 'stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance.'

The Inernational Press Bible Question Club is divided into four classes, composed of newspapers which join the club during any given year. They are known as Class A, Class B, Class C, and Class D. The classes are numbered according to the quarter of the year in which they join. The Intelligencer Local Club belongs to Class C. There will be given to each class as prizes, to the first five contestants five solid gold medals; five solid silver medals to the next five contestants, and to the next five contestants five Teacher's Bibles, value $5.50 each; and to the next thirty-five contestants, thirty-five copies of the book "The Heart of Christianity," price $1.50 each. A beautifully engraved diploma will be given to all who complete the course. The conditions of the contest are that, commencing with the lesson for Sunday, Jan. 29th: (1) A coupon should be cut out of this paper for 52 consecutive weeks, certifying that the lesson has been read, together with the suggestive questions based upon same; (2) Any five of the questions that are to be answered in writing must be so answered. (3) Must deliver to this office within one week after the close of the 52 weeks' period all the coupons which have been cut out and signed, together with the five written answers. The prizes will then be awarded in order to those who deliver to any newspaper office in the class, the greatest number of coupons. The ties will be broken by an impartial examination of the answers, and the prizes will go to those who have the highest number of marks.

Each contestant will need the Intelligencer, so as to read the questions and get the coupon. Send in your order now.

I had ulcers and falling of the uterus, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

BELLEVILLE'S NEW CITY GOVERNMENT

Mayor Ackerman and The Aldermen Elected Assumed Their Duties This Morning--The Council as at Present Constituted, Has Two Vaccies--Mayor Ackerman's Inaugural--Several Excellent Suggestions Contained in it--Standing Committes Appointed and Other Business Transacted

At 11 o'clock this morning, in accordance with the statutes, the newly elected members of the City Council for the year 1911, assembled at the Council Chamber for the inaugural meeting and the transaction of general business. A number of spectators were present and evidenced considerable interest in the proceedings.

Whilst the Council should be composed of the Mayor and twenty-one Aldermen, there are at present only nineteen Aldermen owing to the fact that in Foster and Coleman Wards, but two of those nominated made out their declaration.

The Council as now constituted, is composed of Mayor Ackerman, Aldermen W. H. Panter, F. M. Clarke, G. L. Sills, Dr. J. Caldwell, J. E. Parks, A. McGie, Dr. A. O. Marshall, W. B. Riggs, R. W. Adams, R. C. Chown, L. Anderson, Jas. St. Charles, jr., R. Bogle, A. R. Thompson, P. Flagler, W. Lott, W. A. Woodley, A. G. Vermilyea and J. Canning.

After City Clerk Mikel had made his declaration as to the result of the elections, Mayor Ackerman was escorted to the chair by two Aldermen and invested with the insignia of office.

THE MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

His Worship then delivered his inaugural address as follows:

Belleville, Jan. 7th, 1911.

Gentlemen of the City Council.

I wish to congratulate you on your election as Aldermen and I wish also to congratulate myself that I am permitted to preside over such a representative body of men.

The contest is now over, and while some of us have been pitted against one another in a hot contest, I am glad to say as far as I know, the best of feeling prevailed, but should there have been any animosity, I trust the hatchet will now be buried and one and all pull together for the advancement of the grand old City of the Bay.

THE RAILWAYS.

With the completion of the Canadian Northern and the likelihood of the Canadian Pacific negotiating for an entrance to the city during the present year, this should be one of the most important years in Belleville's history, and it is only by a united effort that good can be accomplished, and I trust all members will work harmoniously toward that end.

DEEPENING OF THE BAY.

The Board of Trade have already taken up the question of the deepening of the Bay of Quinte and the Murray Canal as well as increased dock accommodation, and I think we would do well to co-operate with that body towards the securing of these improvements which will mean much to our fair city.

SALE OF CITY LOTS

We have heard considerable the last few weeks about the sale of certain City lots, and as the City Treasurer has asked for an investigation, I think it would be wise to name a small committe to inquire into these sales and determine the best course to pursue. In fairness to ex-Mayor Marsh and the City Treasurer this matter should be cleared up without delay.

NEW INDUSTRIES.

I would recommend the appointment of a strong industrial committee and an active campaign for new industries.

PURCHASE OF SUPPLIES.

That no goods be purchased for the City without an order from the Chairman of the department requiring same, so that the chairman can see that all dealers are given fair treatment in the expenditure of the city money. Carbon copies of all orders to be retained in the order book, so all accounts brought before the committee can be systematically checked.

EXECUTIVE.

I would recommend that immediate steps be taken to collect all back taxes and as the pay roll this year will not be ready for the collector before probably Sept. 1st, we should insist on the return of all rolls before the 1911 roll is placed in his hands.

PUBLIC WORKS.

Already there are a number of contracts let for sewers to be copleted during the present year, and I would recommend that the building of sewers be continued on streets where the majority of property owners request them as as the city finances will permit of their being built, keeping always before us the debenture debt.

The paving of Front street is another matter that should be settled during the present year. The keeping in constant use of a repair wagon and a more general use of the road roller.

GAS.

I would recommend an active canvass by the Manager for an increase of services especially for fuel purposes, and I trust with an increased sale a further reduction in price in this article will be accomplished.

WATER.

A revival of the Zwick's Island filtering scheme. While the tests usually show the water supplied to the citizens to be alright, there are certain seasons of the year when the quality could be greatly improved upon, and to my mind the filtration through Zuicks Island is the remedy. With the installation of the new electric pumps and the extension of sewers we should be able to make a further reduction in the price of water this year.

MARKET

That as soon as the new police cells are completed the city offices be re-arranged and the assessor moved to the City Hall, so all civic officials will be easily reached.

FIRE.

The affairs of this department seem to be in fairly good shape at present, but the sleigh ordered for the ladders is badly needed, and I trust the chairman will see it is completed without delay.

LIGHT AND PARKS.

The establishing of more arches on Front street in the place of arc lights The city is now fairly well supplied with good parks which are a good asset, but I would like to see a park on the triangle at McGinnis' Corners. The chairman might look into this matter.

But, gentlemen the one thing to keep uppermost in our minds is the finances of the City, and keeping within the limits of the appropriations for each department, so that at the end of the year we will have everything paid for and no

MAYOR ACKERMAN GIVES STRAIGHT CONTRADICTION

Mayor Marsh's Statement as to Sale of Lots Was Incorrect--Ald. Ackerman Did Not on Sept. 13 Initial Sale of Lots--Was Delirious On That Day—His Physician's Certificate Shows That To Be The Case—A Highly Interesting Statement

Mayor Marsh and City Treasurer Price have been unfortunate, to say the least, in their statements as to the sale of those city lots. In previous issues of The Intelligencer Mr. J. P. C. Phillips and Mr. Harry Burrell have given emphatic contradiction to the statements made by Messrs. Marsh and Price, and now Mayor Ackerman is to be added to the number of the witnesses against the officials in question as to their dealings with the property which was committed to their charge as trustees. Mr. Ackerman writes as follows:

Belleville, Jan. 7th, 1911.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—It was stated by Mayor Marsh at Monday night's meeting that I agreed to the sale of certain of the lots which has caused so much discussion during the last few weeks. Had I been present at the time this statement was made, I would have given it an unqualified denial. It is fortunate for me, however, that I was not present as I find on referring to the City Treasurer's books he wrote me on Sept. 13th as follows:—

Belleville, Sept. 13th. 1910.

Dear Sir,—I have an offer for lots 6E, 7E and part of 8E on east side of Bleecker Ave. of $ 00 0, free of taxes to Dec. 31, 1910, from Mrs. B. E. Smith. These lots cost the city at tax sales of 1898 and 1902, $116.34. Mrs. Smith would like this decided at once. Sorry to hear you are unwell.

Very truly yours,
Sgd. DAVID PRICE.
(Sgd.) L. W. MARSH.
(Sgd.) H. W. ACKERMAN.

Also offer for 5 lots W. Alice, $80.00.

(Sgd.) H. W. ACKERMAN.

This he claims to have brought to my house on that date and I confirmed the sale, which had evidently been previously confirmed by the Mayor. I can quite understand how the transaction had gone entirely from my memory, as my physician's record shows I was delirious on Sept. 12th, continuing in this condition for several weeks.

I am writing this letter to give the public the facts as far as I am concerned, as I have no desire to shirk my responsibility in these transactions I have no doubt I would have confirmed the balance of the sales had they been referred to me in a similar manner, as I had the utmost confidence in Mayor Marsh and City Treasurer Price.

Yours truly,
H. W. ACKERMAN.

THE LOCAL HOSPITAL EXTENSION FUND

Full List of the Names of Those Who Helped Along The Good Work

The following list comprises the names of those to whom the W. C. A. is already indebted for subscriptions to the Hospital Extension Fund. Any further assistance our citizens are able to give will be most gratefully received, as the Association is most anxious to have the building finished at the allotted time (May 1st, 1911) and free from debt as far as possible.

The Association has for many years done its utmost to maintain the institution in an efficient manner, but this heavy expenditure necessarily involved in the much needed addition now in building calls for the generous co-operation of all our citizens, either as individuals or as a corporate body represented by the City Council. We regret not being able to publish also the names of those who contributed to "Block Day," but as many envelopes were nameless and others illegible, it would be unfair to do so.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Those who attended the men's meeting yesterday afternoon in the Palace Theatre were fully repaid for the time spent. Mr. Jas. Dyer sang that beautiful old hymn, "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night," which was much appreciated. Mr. Stewart was introduced by Mr. Hess and his description of the different scenes and events of Samuel's life was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Mr. Stewart, in closing, gave some good advice to those who wish to make a success in life.

The senior gymnasium class will be held on Tuesday night instead of Wednesday this week.

The Y. M. C. A. hockey team will play at Stirling Wednesday night.

All members of the Hockey Club are requested to be on hand to-morrow evening at the rink sharp at 6.15.

THE MAYOR'S GUESTS

After the meeting of the City Council to-day, Mayor Ackerman entertained the Aldermen and a few friends to dinner at Hotel Quinte. A report of the proceedings will be published in the Intelligencer to-morrow.

GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE.

Clifford and Hall, in a screaming black-face comedy act hold the boards at Griffin's for the first half of this week. This act is a hummer from start to finish and guarantees "A Smile a Minute." Vancello, a foot juggler and equilibrist, comes highly recommended. He performs an act out of the ordinary, his marvellous foot juggling standing out prominently as a feature of the act. Coupled with five reels of the best motion pictures and illustrated songs, this should be a banner bill for Griffin's.

HEARD FROM

It was Mr. Nethery, not Mr. Lount, who was elected Reeve of Ameliasburg. The Picton paper had it that Mr. Nethery had not been heard from in the Reeveship contest, but it was a poor attempt at a joke. Mr. Nethery was very much heard from as he had no opponent.

With hen fruit selling on the market at 45c. per dozen, anybody's old hen can now lay golden eggs.

The Council of 1911 has made a beginning that augurs well for the future.

An expert accountant ought to be engaged to assist in the preliminary investigation of those graft charges.

The Toronto News of the 6th inst. says it has information from Washington, which may be accepted as excellent authority, that the Canadian Government has completed all preliminaries for the appointment of a Canadian Agent or Consul at Washington, acting directly under the British Embassy, and will in fact announce the name of the representative within a very few weeks. That the arrangements necessary for such an important step have been completed with the Home Office of the British Government and all other adjustments effected through the Federal Government here is the information your representative received this morning.

In virtue of an amendment passed at the last session of the Quebec Legislature, Recorder Weir, on the 5th inst., in sentencing Robert Elford, of Coursol street, to six months in jail for non-support, directed that whatever money he may earn as a prisoner be remitted to his family. This is the first application of the new law. This is a policy which our legislators would do well to follow. It at once punishes the offender and compels him to earn something for his family.

Taking a College Course

(Too often too true!)

"Mother, may I go out to school,
Go to a woman's college?
For every girl goes as a rule,
To gather special knowledge.
She goes away from friends and home
With all her gems and laces,
The halls and campuses to roam
And other classic places."

"What! Would you go away to school?
Would you, my little daughter,
There to drink at the knowledge pool
Of wisdom's sparkling water?
Would you sit there at night alone,
Over your studies poring,
Making the ancient lore your own,
In all your classes scoring?"

"Why, mother, mother, how you talk
Of lore and stuff and knowledge;
Just in the classic halls I'd walk
Of some swell woman's college;
There I would wear the college pin
And as the gay year passes,
Through all the games and spreads I'd spin
And not go near the classes!"

It is about time that labor unions were taught they do not govern the country. In Winnipeg the late street railway strike has resulted in good, having taught, as it has done, the unionists that they cannot insist upon violators of the rules of the company being retained in the service. Here is an instance: On the 5th inst. the Winnipeg Street Railway Company issued orders forbidding union conductors and motormen to wear their union buttons on duty. One union man was discharged for calling a strike-breaker working on another car a "scab."

The Morning Post, of London, Jan. 5th, in discussing Australia's destiny in the Pacific says the longstanding idea is that Canada will ultimately assume administrative control in the British West Indies, where for many years she has been trying to foster trade. The thing is far remote in the future, in view of the present sentiment in the Indies and the preoccupation of Canada in problems of international development. Meanwhile unquestioned advantages are fostering the intercourse between Canada and the West Indies.

RUNAWAY HORSE

Mr. Charles VanBlaricom, who resides in Sidney township, reported by phone to the police that on Saturday afternoon a horse attached to a cutter ran into his barn yard and that he secured same. The animal had evidently ran away and had apparently ran for some distance. In the cutter were two black robes. Who owns the outfit is not known.

FEAR OF DEATH

A Well-Known Magistrate Doubts Its Deterrent Effect on the Criminal

The well-known magistrate, Mr. Plowden, contributes an interesting study in criminal psychology to the discussion on the death penalty which has been carried on for the past fortnight in the columns of the "Times." Incidentally Mr. Plowden pleads for a saner judgment of the character and motives of the murderer. He says:—

It is a popular fallacy to regard a murderer as the worst of criminals. The real truth is that in many cases it is hardly fair to describe him as a criminal at all.

No one who has not been through the fire can tell what may be the effect on his self-control of a long course of studied insults and provocation on the part of a worthless wife against her husband persevered in day by day, for months and even years at a stretch.

Sir Henry Smith, in his virtuous indignation with Crippen, makes no allowance for desperate circumstances like these.

He is angry with Crippen on account of his coolness in the witness-box, which he calls an outrage, and he apparently regards it as a distinct aggravation of his conduct that he should have sworn to love and cherish at the altar the wife whom he subsequently put to death.

It is somewhat amazing to me that considerations such as these should weigh for a moment in any just appreciation of Crippen's character. They were to me absolutely irrelevant.

What Crippen actually did, and for which he suffered death, was to kill a wife whom he hated for the sake of a woman whom he loved. Probably of all the murders that are committed under the sun, in one country or another, there is no more common type of murder than this.

It was the irony of Crippen's fate that he did not meet No. 2 until after he had met No. 1. Had such been his good fortune he would probably have lived a life not better nor worse than his neighbors, and have enjoyed with the best of them the reputation of a contented, law-abiding citzen. I am convinced from such experience as I have had of criminal courts, extending over many years, that what a man murderously inclined really dreads is not death, but pain.

The spectre of death, though it can always be conjured up, is too remote and shadowy to have much effect on the nerves of a man in the enjoyment of full and vigorous health. Not so with pain. There is no imagination so dull that it cannot take in the terrors of the "cat"; and I believe if such punishment could be made part of the sentence, even without abolishing capital punishment, the deterrent effect would be unmistakable.

I think even Crippen's courage, wonderful as it was, would have qualled on that dark and wintry morning, had he known that he would have to endure a flogging before he was hung.

And had he been asked which he feared most—the physical pain of the lash or the death to follow—can any one doubt what his answer would have been?

TO PUT DOWN DUELLING

Abbe Lemire has introduced in the Paris Chamber a Bill to make duelling a punishable offence. The penalty varies from imprisonment for six days to five years and fines from $20 to $2,000, according to the gravity of the offence. The severest punishment is for the dueller who kills his man; the lightest for taunting a man for not fighting.

WOLVES IN FRANCE

There are still wolves in France. A bonus of $10 per head is paid by the State for an adult wolf, and $2.50 for cubs weighing less than 19 lbs. When it can be proved that the wolf has attacked human beings the slayer receives a special bonus of $20. Last year the number of wolves killed was sixty-eight.

A first edition of Milton's "Paradise Regained" realized $75 at Sotheby's, and a first Edinburgh edition of Burns fetched only $15.

HAPPILY WEDDED THIS MORNING

Mr. James Conlin and Miss Ray Eustace Married in St. Michaels

At 8 o'clock this morning a pleasing wedding took place in St. Michael's church, when a well known and popular young couple of this city were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Spratt, and a number were present to witness the interestin ceremony. The bride was Miss Alice Ray Eustace, eldest daughter of Mrs. S. Eustace, and the groom, Mr. James J. Conlins, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Conlin, of this city. The bride looked charming in a gown of violet serge cheviot with hat to match. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Stella, who also also wore a gown of violet serge and a large black velvet picture hat. Mr. John O'Reilly, of Toronto, did the honors for the groom. At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests repaired to the residence of the bride's mother on Church street where a tempting repast was partaken of. The popularity of the bride was evidenced by a very large number of costly and useful gifts she was the recipient of. The groom's present to the bride was a set of mink furs and a gold necklace, to the bridesmaid coral ear rings and to the groomsman a pearl stick pin. Mr. and Mrs. Conlin left on the noon train for a trip in the eastern provinces. They will reside in Montreal. The many friends of the young couple in this city will unite with the Intelligencer in wishing them a happy and prosperous wedded life.

HUBBS—SAGER.

The marriage of Miss Ida Sager, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Sager to Mr. Wm. J. Hubbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hubbs, recently of Alberta, now of Rednerville, took place very quietly Wednesday afternoon, January 4th, 1911. Rev. W. V. Sexsmith officiated at the Methodist parsonage in the presence of a few friends. The bride, who was unattended, looked charming gowned in a travelling suit of navy blue cloth, trimmed with lace and braid, with large plumed hat to match.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hubbs were driven to the Belleville station and left on the 5.25 train for Toronto and western points, the bride wearing beautiful fur lined coat, the gift of her mother. On their return they will reside in Rednerville.

HOCKEY NOTES.

With keen ice and fast teams there ought to be a game worth seeing when the Belleville and Trenton Intermediates meet to-night at the Arena.

—o—

The Kingston Frontenacs have decided not to allow any of their players to participate in City League games on the side.

—o—

Peterboro' made no less than 17 goals on the Lindsay juniors. How the mighty have fallen.

—o—

The Kingston Whig remarks: People here are wondering how it is that Trenton, Picton and a lot of other places a great deal smaller than the Limestone City can have professional hockey teams. These places may have pro. teams, but the amateur teams which battle for the old Limestone City would put it all over the hired hockeyists. Kingston doesn't want cheap professional hockey. It's no good. Had the Whig seen last Thursday night's game between Port Hope and Belleville it would have revised its crude ideas.

—o—

Kingston does not want professional hockey. It prefers to win with "old boys" against junior teams, and did last year.

—o—

The Y.M.C.A. will play at Stirling on Wednesday night.

—o—

Saturday's games resulted as follows: Waterloo pros. 9, Galt 5; Ottawas 1, Wanderers 5.

GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE, WEDNESDAY, JAN. 11.

Ian Robertson in His Anecdotage. —The Flowers That Were Not Strewed on Ophelia's Grave.

When playing the King to his brother, Forbes-Robertson's Hamlet some years ago, Mr. Ian Robertson (now starring in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back") witnessed a unique incident in the grave scene. The court had all assembled and the corpse of Ophelia had been lowered into its last resting place, when it is the duty of the Queen to step down to the grave and, with the words "Sweets to the sweet, farewell," strew flowers upon the dead body. On this occasion it must have appeared to the audience that a miracle happened, for instead of the flowers obeying the natural law of gravity, the air was clouded with their assent to the heavens; then, seeming to gather together at a given point, they descended in a graceful downpour upon the sable-clad, sad and long suffering Hamlet. Alas! from the sublime to the ridiculous; the flowers were made of paper and the engines under the stage had caused a great draught to rush up the trap. Hence these flowers.

The Liquor Law

In administering the Liquor License Law, the Whitney Government has proved a success, and deserves the support of every one who desires a rigid enforcement of the law. A scheme is now on foot by which a considerable increase in the cost of liquor licenses in the Province, it is understood, is looked for by the Provincial Secretary as a result of a graded call which may be adjusted this year all over the Province. Last year there was about $575,000 paid in by the licensees and the total this year is expected to exceed $700,000 through a raise in the fees. All over Ontario the inspectors have received instructions to send in a report on the approximate amount of business done over the bar.

Commerce per Capita

Canada's commerce per capita is greater than that of any other country in the world, with the exception of Great Britain. Here are the figures:—

County—	Commerce per capita.
Great Britain	$105.25
Canada	92.42
United States	35.59

In the ten years ended 1909, the increase of Canadian trade was 88.14 per cent. This compares as follows:

County—	Increase of trade, 1898-1909. per cent.
Canada	88.14
United States	55.19
Great Britain	37.81

The only country in the world whose trade increased in a greater ratio than that of Canada was Argentina, with a percentage of 161.88 per cent.

These interesting figures are contained in the third annual statistical review and outlook number of The Monetary Times, published January 7th.

The Mayor's Inaugural

The address which Mayor Ackerman delivered this morning at the inaugural meeting of the City Council, when he assumed his duties as Chief Magistrate of the city, was worthy of the man and of the occasion. It is the practical utterance of a practical business man and has the right ring throughout. The suggestions which are contained in it are all of a pertinent character and evince that intimate knowledge of civic affairs which is necessary in the head of the Council—without which, indeed, the business of the municipality cannot be carried on satisfactorily.

What with the completion of the Canadian Northern Railway through the city and the operation of that road, the probable coming of the Canadian Pacific Railway to Belleville, and the undertaking of public works of much importance, the year 1911 gives promise of being one of the most important in the history of the city, and Belleville is fortunate in having a Mayor and a Council who are fully capable of dealing satisfactorily with the weighty matters which are to be decided upon and who will honestly discharge the duties imposed upon them.

Hudson Bay Railway

There is no little speculation as to who is to control the building and running of the Hudson Bay Railway. The people in the west insist upon the Government running the road. It is to be hoped they will not assume that responsibility. A telegram from Ottawa on the 6th inst. says: It was announced by a prominent official of the Railway Department yesterday that Mackenzie & Mann had offered to lease the Hudson Bay Railway under the same conditions as those under which the Grand Trunk Pacific will operate the eastern section of the Transcontinental. In other words the Mackenzie & Mann interests are willing to pay an annual rental of three per cent. of the cost of the road if allowed to operate it free for the first seven years. The Marine Department has advised against the selection of Churchill as the terminus of the road, and as the engineers are also strongly in favor of the Port Nelson route, the latter has been practically decided on as the terminus.

MANAGEMENT OF THE HEAD OF THE HERD

By the time the bull has reached the age of one year he should have been given a number of lessons in leading, writes F. M. Twining in the Farm Journal. If you have not taught him to follow you in going to and returning from the pasture, begin now, using at first a head halter and gradually changing to the nose ring, above all things being gentle, patient and firm. Don't unnecessarily irritate his sensitive nose by violent jerks, as it quickly teaches him to become cross. When he is unruly give him a smart rap with your hand until he realizes that you are master.

From this time on he may be used for light service. Now comes the time when it is no longer safe to allow him to run loose in the pasture. Some develop the tendency to challenge all living and inanimate things in a much more violent degree than others, but none is to be trusted, and the farseeing breeder who is striving for the best will conserve that masculine vigor that would go to break down his fences, destroy his cornfield and jeopardize the lives of all who traverse "green pastures" by providing special quarters for his bullship. It is impossible also to tell when the cows are due to calve if the bull is allowed to run with them—an item well worth every up to date business man's attention.

The proper place for the bull is certainly in a good sized box stall with a concrete or plank floor (if concrete two or three layers of tarred paper should be laid beneath the surface when constructing to keep out the cold) covered with enough clean bedding to insure comfort. It should be well lighted and well ventilated without the light coming in through a leaky roof and the fresh air in a draft through a crack in the wall. He should be tied to a post with his left side toward the door by which you enter. A good stout chain or cotton rope (a hemp rope will irritate his neck) should be fastened around his neck and attached to the post, with a lighter chain fastened to his nose ring a little more slack than the first.

The dairy Shorthorn bull Knight is an unusually fine specimen of his breed. He is five years old and won the championship at the Vermont state fair last year.

The bull must be fed liberally, enough to keep him in a good, thrifty condition without being fat. The grain should be of a light, nutritious nature, the amount varying with the individual and with the work he has to do. Give him plenty of bright clover or alfalfa hay and also plenty of pure, clean water.

Late Fattener For Hogs.

Nothing for fattening hogs in the fall is preferable to field corn. In the northwestern part of the state, says the Minnesota experiment station, the flint or other early ripening varieties should be planted for this purpose. In southern Minnesota the regular field varieties may be used successfully. The experiment station has found that hogs given free access to the field do better than when corn is snapped and fed to them.

Treatment For Cracked Heels.

For cracked heels in horses clip off the hair, cleanse parts and poultice with warm flaxseed meal for a week. Smear some vaseline on the surface of poultice to keep it from sticking. After discontinuing the poultices wash the parts again and dry them thoroughly; then apply twice daily an ointment composed of two parts flowers of sulphur, one part ichthyol and one part calomel to eight parts lard or lanolin.

Dairy Wisdom.

It is not always the cow that gives the largest amount of milk that is making the most money for you. Test her and be certain.

The care given the heifer calves during their first year has much to do with their future usefulness. Keep them sleek and growing and give enough clover or alfalfa hay to develop a capacity for handling food.

Fresh air has an actual money value to the dairy farmer. Without fresh air the cow cannot digest as much food, and without plenty of food she cannot make so much nor as good milk.

Save enough straw to give your cows good, comfortable beds during the winter. Selling straw is "saving at the spigot and leaking at the bunghole."

Barb wire has ruined many a good dairy cow. It doesn't take many losses to pay for the price of a pasture fence.

An Italian soldier has invented light metal attachments by which a sledge ambulance can be made in a few min-your example will be followed and you and other militarx equipments.

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

"I told you so, Mamie. It was up. You said down. Here's the big glass house—and Mr. Pyne."

She quickened her speed though her left arm was in a sling. Pyne, dreading lest she should fall, hastened to help her.

"I'se all right, Mr. Pyne," she announced with an air of great dignity. "I make one step at a time Then I ketch the rail. See?"

"You've got it down to a fine point, Elsie," he said. "But what in the world are those women-folk thinking of to let you and Mamie run loose about the place."

Elsie did not answer until Mamie stood by her side. Judged by appearances, Mamie was a year younger. Apart from the nasty bruise on Elsie's left arm and shoulder, the children had escaped from the horrors of the wreck almost unscathed in body and certainly untroubled in mind.

"Mamie came to my room for breakfast," explained Elsie at last. "We's awful hungry, an' when we axed for 'nother bixit Mrs. Taylor she began to cry. An' when I said we'd go and find mamma she cried some more."

"Yes. We's awful hungry," agreed Mamie. "An' please, where's mamma?"

Pyne needed no further explanation. The little ones had lost their mother; her disfigured body, broken out of all recognition, was tossing about somewhere in the under-currents of the Channel. None of the women dared to tell the children the truth, and it was a heart-rending task to deny them food.

So, they were permitted to leave their refuge, with the kindly belief that they would come to no harm and perchance obtain a further supply from one of those sweet-faced girls who explained so gently that the rations must run short for the common good.

Pyne glanced up at the lantern. Outside he could see Brand hauling down the signal. He sprang to the tray and secured his half biscuit and tea cup.

"Come along, Elsie," he said, crooking his left arm for her. "Follow close, Mamie. Mind you don't fall."

"Your mamma is asleep," he assured them in a whisper on the next landing. "She just can't be woke up for quite a long time."

Then he navigated them to the door of the second bedroom, where Mrs. Taylor was. He broke the hard biscuit in two pieces and gave one to each child.

"Here, Mamie, you carry the cup, and go shares in the tea."

"I don't like tea," protested Mamie. "If I can't have coffee I want some milk."

"Well, now, you wait a little bit, and you'll be tickled to death to see what I'll bring you. But drink the tea. It's good an' hot. Skip inside, both of you."

He held the door partly open and they vanished. He heard Mrs. Taylor say:

"Didn't I tell you those two little dears would do their own business best."

He regained the service-room to find Brand steeping the remains of his biscuit in an almost empty cup. The lighthouse-keeper greeted his young friend with a smile.

"I suppose that you, like the rest of us, never had such an appetite in all your days?" he said.

"Oh, I'm pretty well fixed," said Pyne, with responsive grin.

"There you are fortunate. There is usually a wretched little fiend in a man's inner consciousness which prompts him to desire the unattainable. Now, I am a poor eater as a rule, yet this morning I feel I could tackle the toughest steak ever cut off a superannuated cow."

"I don't deny," admitted Pyne, "that the idea of a steak sounds good. That is, you know," he went on languidly, "it might sort of appeal to me about one o'clock."

"I should have thought you could do with one now, especially after the hard night we have gone through. Perhaps you are a believer in the French system, and prefer a light br'akfast."

Brand finished the morsel of biscuit and drank the cup dry.

"It's a first-rate proposition—when you are accustomed to it," said Pyne. "But talking about eating when there's little to eat is a poor business, anyway. Don't you find that?"

"I do indeed."

Brand rose and tapped the barometer, adjusting the sliding scale to read the tenths.

"Slightly better," he announced. 'If only the wind would go down, or even change to the norrard!"

"What good would a change of wind do?" inquired Pyne, greatly relieved himself by the change of topic.

"It would beat down the sea to some extent and then they might be able to drift a buoy, with a rope attached, close enough to the rock at low tide to enable us to reach it with a cast of a grappling iron."

"Do you mean that we could be ferried to the steamer by that means?"

"That is absolutely out of the question until the weather moderates to a far greater extent than I dare hope at present. But, once we had the line, we could rig up a running tackle and obtain some stores."

"Is it as bad as all that?" said the younger man, after a pause.

They looked at each other. The knowledge that all true men have of their kind leaped from eye to eye.

"Quite that bad," answered Brand.

Pyne moistened his lips. He produced a case containing two cigars. He held it out.

"Let us go shares in consolation," he said.

Brand accepted the gift, and affected a livelier mood.

"By lucky chance I have an ample supply of tobacco. It will keep the men quiet," he said. "By the way," and he lifted a quick glance at Pyne, "do you know anything about chemistry?"

"Well—er—I went through a course at Yale."

"Can colza oil be converted into a food?"

"It contains certain fats," admitted Pyne, taking dubious stock of the question.

"But the process of conversion, the chemical reaction, that is the difficulty."

"Bi-sulphide of carbon is a solvent, and the fatty acids of most vegetable oils can be isolated by treatment with steam super-heated to about 600 degrees Fahrenheit."

Brand threw out his hands with a little gesture of helplessness; just then Constance appeared.

"Dad," she cried, "did not Mr. Pyne tell you of my threat?"

"No, dear one. I am not living in terror of you, to my knowledge."

"You must please go to sleep, both of you, at least until ten or eleven o'clock. Mr. Emmett is sending a man to keep watch here. He will not disturb you. He is bringing some rugs and pillows which you can arrange on the floor. I have collected them for your special benefit."

"At this hour! Impossible, Connie."

"But it is not impossible, and this is the best hour available. You know quite well that the Falcon will return at high water. And you must rest, you know."

She bustled about, with the air of a housewife who understood the whole art of looking after her family. But something puzzled her.

"Mr. Pyne," she inquired, "where is your cup?"

"I—er—took it down," he explained.

For some reason, Constance felt instantly that she had turned the tables on him since their last rencontre. She did not know why. He looked confused, for one thing: he was not so glib in speech, for another.

"Down where?" she demanded. "Not to the kitchen. I have been there since you brought up your breakfast and dad's on the same tray."

"I breakfasted alone," remarked Brand calmly. "Mr. Pyne had feasted earlier."

"But he had not," persisted Constance. "I wanted him to—"

She stopped. This impudent American had actually dared to wink at her, a confidential, appealing wink which said plainly: "Please don't trouble about me."

"You gave your tea and biscuit to somebody," she cried suddenly. "Now, who was it? Confess!"

"Well," he said weakly, "I did not feel—er—particularly hungry, so, when I met those two little girls foolin' around for an extra supply, I—er—thought nobody would mind if—er—"

"Father!" said Constance. "He has not had a mouthful."

"Then take him downstairs and give him one. You must have found my conversation interesting, Mr. Pyne, whilst I was eating. But, before you go, let me add a word in season. There must be no further discrimination between persons. Stand or fall, each must abide by the common rule."

Pyne, with the guilty feeling of a detected villain, explained to Constance how the cup might be rescued.

"I shall keep a close eye on you in the future,' she announced as they went below.

"Do," he said. "That is all I ask for."

"I am a very strict person," she went on. "Dad always encouraged us in the sailor's idea of implicit obedience."

"Kick me. It will make me feel good," he answered.

Entering the second bed-room, where Elsie and Mamie were seated contentedly on the floor, she stooped and kissed them. And not a word did she say to Enid as to the reason why Mr. Pyne should be served with a second breakfast. She knew that any parade of his unselfishness would hurt him, and he, on his part, gave her unspoken thanks for her thought.

Conversation without words is an art understood only by master-minds and lovers, so these two were either exceptionally clever persons or developing traits of a more common genus—perhaps both.

CHAPTER XI.

MRS. VANSITTART'S FEAR

The tribulations which clustered, in bee-like swarm, in and around the Gulf Rock Lighthouse during those weary hours were many and various. Damp clothing, insufficiency of food, interior temperatures ranging from the chill draught of the entrance passage and stair-ways to the partial suffocation of rooms with windows closed owing to the incursions of the rising tide—this unpleasing aggregate of physical misery was seriously augmente dby an ever-increasing list of sick people, an almost total absence of any medical comforts, and a growing knowledge, on the part of those not too despondent to think, that their ultimate relief might be deferred for days rather than hours.

No mere man can understand, and a woman of ordinary experience can but dimly imagine, the difficulty and arduousness of the task undertaken by Constance and Enid.

To cook and supply for eighty-one persons with utensils intended for the use of three, to give each separate individual an utterly inadequate portion, so skilfully distributed that none should have cause to grumble at his or her neighbor's better fortune—here were culinary problems at once complex and exhaustive.

By adopting fantastic devices, bringing into service empty jam-pots and sardine-tins, they found it was possible to feed twenty at a time. This meant the preparation of four distinct meals, each requiring an hour's work. Long before the last batch, which included themselves, was lamenting the absurd discrepancy between appetite and antidote in the shape of any thing to eat, the first was ravenous again.

The women complained the least. In the occupants of the two bedrooms the girls encountered a passive fortitude which was admirable. It was an extraordinary scene which met their eyes when they entered either of these stuffy apartments. Many of the rescued ladies had not given a thought to changing the demi-toilette of evening wear on board ship for more serviceable clothing when the hurricane overtook the vessel. They all, it is true, possessed cloaks or wraps of some sort, but these garments were still sodden with salt water and therefore unwearable, even if the oppressive warmth in each room rendered such a thing possible. Their elegant costumes of muslin, cotton, silk or satin, were utterly ruined. Lucky were the few whose blouses or bodices had not been rent into tatters.

Some of the worst sufferers in this respect were now the best provided. Blankets and sheets had been ruthlessly torn up and roughly stitched into articles of clothing. Mrs. Vansittart, for instance, who first suggested this via media, wore an exquisite Paris gown and a loose dressing-jacket arrangement of yellow blanket, the component parts of which she persuaded two other women to sew together on the model provided by her own elegant figure.

A few quick-witted ones who followed her example exhausted the available stock, and pillow-cases and rugs would have undergone metamorphosis in the same way had not Constance come to the rescue by impounding them, declaring that they must be reserved for the use of those sufferers who needed warmth and rest.

The men passed their time in smoking, singing, yarning and speculating on the chance of the weather clearing. Ultimately, when the banging of the waves again made the column feel unsafe, a small section began to plan petty attempts to pilfer the provisions. It is the queer mixture of philosopher and beast in the average human being that makes it possible for the same man, in one mood, to risk his life quite voluntarily to save others, and in another, to organize selfish theft.

After an ingenious seaman had been detected in the attempt to pick the store-room lock, and when a tray of cold ham was deliberately upset whilst a football scrimmage took place for the pieces, Mr. Emmett stopped these ebullitions by arming the watch with assorted weapons from the workshop and issuing stern orders as to their use in case of need.

Here, again, the warring elements which form the human clay were admirably displayed. On duty, under the bonds of discipline, the coarse-grained foremast hand who had gobbled up a surreptitious lump of fat pig during the first successful scuffle, would brain the daring rascal who tried to better his condition by a similar trick a second time. Discipline, sometimes, converts a skulker into a hero.

When the state of the tide permitted, storm-shutters were opened and a free draught of air allowed to enter through the door. Then all hands eyed the sea with anxiety. The wind was strong and piercing, and the reef maintained its ceaseless roaring. Wherever a window opened towards the land there was a small crowd waiting to peep through it. At last, the sense of orderliness gradually permeating the inmates of the lighthouse actually resulted in the formation of queues, with stated intervals for moving on. There was a momentary relief in looking at the land. The cliffs, the solitary white houses, the little hamlets half hidden in cozy nooks, seemed to be so absurdly near. It was ridiculous to imagine that help could long be deferred. The seaward passing of a steamer, carrying flowers from the Scilly Isles to Penzance for Covent Garden, caused a flutter, but the sight of a Penzance fishing-smack scudding under jib and close-reefed foresail between the rock and Guthenbras Point created intense excitement. Noah, gazing across the flood for the return of the dove with the olive branch, could not be more pleased than these castaways in their granite ark when the brown-sailed boat came within their view.

The window in the coal-cellar opened fair towards the Land's End, and the grimy occupants of this compartment could look their fill at the messenger of life. A rich New Yorker in vain offered a hundred dollars to any man who gave up his place in the line after he himself, by the operation of the time-limit, was remorselessly sent away from the narrow loop-hole. Dollars and pounds sterling have a curiously depreciated value under such circumstances

The men of the watch were always questioned for news by the unemployed majority. They related the comings and goings of the Falcon, carried sympathetic inquiries from story to story—promiscuous passing to and fro being forbidden owing to the narrowness of the stairs—and seized every trifling pretext on their own part to reach the topmost height and feast their eyes on the extensive panorama visible from the storm-girt gallery. Had they watched the coastline less and the reef more their observations would have had value.

Quite early in the day, the purser handed to the occupants of each room a full list of passengers and crew, with the survivors grouped separately. In only three instances were husband and wife both saved. The awful scene in the saloon accounted for this seeming discrepancy. Dazed men and senseless women were wrenched from each other's clasp either by the overwhelming seas or during the final wild fight for life at the head of the companion stairway. A wreck, a fire in the theatre, pays little heed to the marriage tie.

The third and last meal of the day was eaten in silence and gloom. All the spare lamps were diverted to the kitchen, because Brand, during a further detailed survey of the stores, made in company with Mr. Emmett and the purser, discovered that there was an alarming deficit of fresh water in the cisterns.

In the hurry of the earlier hours a serious miscalculation had been made in transmuting cubic feet into gallons. It became an instant necessity to use every heating appliance at command and start the distillation of a drinkable fluid.

The Gulf Rock Light did not possess a proper apparatus. The only method that could be adopted was to improvise a coil from canvas sewn into a tube. The exterior was varnished, and wrapped in wet cloths to assist the condensation of the steam. Hence, every kettle and pot being requisitioned for this paramount need, cocoa could be supplied to the women alone, whilst the taste of the water, even thus disguised, was nauseating. No more potatoes could be boiled. Raw, they were almost uneatable. And potatoes happened to be the food most plentiful.

The genuine fresh water, reduced to a minimum in the cistern, was only a little better in condition unless it was filtered, and Brand decided that it ought to be retained for the exclusive use of those seriously ill. Patients were multiplying so rapidly that the hospital was crowded; and all fresh cases, as they occurred, perforce remained where they were.

Neither Constance nor Enid felt the time hang heavily on their hands. They were too busy, though the new ordinance regarding the food supply transferred their attention from active cooking to the replenishing of utensils which must be kept full of salt-water at boiling-point.

Pyne was an invaluable assistant.

In the adjustment of refractory canvas tubes over hot spouts, in the manipulation of the condensing plant so that it might act efficiently, in the trimming of lamps, and the stocking of the solitary coal fire, he insisted on taking to himself the lion's share of the work.

He always had a pleasant quip or funny story to brighten their talk.

"You can conquer trouble with a grin," he said. "Worry doesn't cut ice."

Enid, of course chaffed him about his American accent, which, she protested, she would acquire after a week's practice.

"It is quaint to our ears," she went on. "I never before grasped the reason why Mark Twain makes me laugh. All he does is to act as a phonograph. Every American is a born humorist."

"There's something in that," admitted Pyne. "We do try to dis-inter a joke. Say. Have you girls ever heard how an English professor explained the Yankee drawl?'

"No," they cried.

"He said it represented the effort of an uneducated man to make a speech. Every time his vocabulary gave out he lifted his voice to show he wasn't half through with his ideas."

"Oh," said Constance, "that is neither kind nor true, surely."

"Well," agreed Pyne, slowly, "that is the view a friend of mine took of the remark. So he asked the professor if he had a nice agreeable sort of definition, all ready for use, of the way Englishmen clipped their syllables. The other fellow allowed that he hadn't pondered on it. 'I guess,' said my friend, 'it represents the effort of an educated ass to talk English.'"

Though the laugh was against them they were forced to snigger approval.

"I think," said Constance, "that our chief national failing is pomposity, and your story hits it off exactly. In one of our small Cornish towns we have a stout little Mayor who made money in cheese and bacon. He went to see the Paris Exhibition, and an Exeter man, meeting him unexpectedly at the foot of the Eiffel Tower, hailed him with delight. 'Hello, Mr. Mayor—' he began. 'Hush,' said the mayor, glancing around mysteriously, 'I'm 'ere incog.'"

None who heard these light-hearted young people yelling with merriment would imagine that they had just dined off a piece of hard-baked bread made without yeast and washed down with water tasting of tar and turpentine.

"Now, Miss Enid, your turn," cried Pyne.

Her eyes danced mischievously.

"Unfortunately, by the accident of birth, I am deprived of the sense of humor," she said.

"It seems to be in the family all right," he hazarded, looking at Constance.

"Alas!" said Enid, "I am an American."

"I'll smile now, if that is all," said Pyne.

"But, please, I am not joking a little bit. When you go ashore you will probably hear all about me, so I may as well take the wind out of the sails of gossip. I am a mere waif, who came sailing in out of the West one day in a little boat which must have come from the New World as no one appeared to have lost either me or it in the Old. Dad picked us both up and adopted me."

Pyne did not know whether to take her seriously or not, until he sought confirmation in a pair of tranquil eyes which he gazed into at every opportunity.

"It is quite true," said Constance gravely. "I suppose that the mysterious affinity between parents and long-lost children which exists in story-books is all nonsense in reality. No family could be more united and devoted to each other than we are, yet Enid is not my sister, and my father is her's only by adoption. He found her half dying, drifting past this very rock, and before he could reach her he fought and killed a dreadful shark. We are very proud of dad, Mr. Pyne. You see, he is our only relation. Enid knows neither her father nor mother, and my mother died when I was a baby."

"Great Scott!" cried Pyne.

CHEAP AND DURABLE HOLLOW BLOCK SILO

The silo shown in the accompanying illustration is built of hollow vitrified clay blocks. It is twelve feet inside diameter and forty feet high, with a capacity of 100 tons of ensilage. The bottom of the silo is about eight feet in the ground.

It takes for silo of this diameter thirty-eight blocks for one course and fifty-three courses to complete it to a height of forty feet. This would require, after deducting eight blocks for each of the six openings, 1,966 blocks. No skilled labor, forms or machinery is necessary in the erection of this silo, writes a correspondent of Hoard's Dairyman. It is only necessary to start with a perfect circle and keep the blocks level and perpendicular.

The hollow spaces in the blocks and between the ends of the same are filled with concrete and slightly tamped to fill all crevices. Almost any one can lay the blocks and fill with concrete. The silo is re-enforced with two No. 9 galvanized wires placed in the grooves left for the purpose in the top of each course, and these wires are connected by short wires of the same size securely fastened to the horizontal wires above and below at a number of places in the circumference of the silo.

The silo is therefore practically reenforced by a No. 9 galvanized woven wire fence within the silo blocks. The openings or doors are closed from the inside by sheets of heavy galvanized iron about six inches larger than the openings, which are 24 by 36 inches. Two strips of iron are bolted lengthwise on these sheets and turned up at the bottom so as to hold them in place until they are made secure by the pressure of the ensilage in filling the silo. In the construction of this silo seventy barrels of cement were used in about the proportion of one to four. No account was kept of the amount or cost of sand and gravel, as both were obtained from a creek bed on the farm. The blocks cost 10 cents each f. o. b.

VITRIFIED CLAY BLOCK SILO.

One small carload of blocks will build a silo of the size 12 by 40 feet. This silo was erected in September, 1909, and was almost immediately filled with corn. It has stood through the winter without a crack or leak of any kind and to all appearances is as solid and will stand as long as the Washington monument. The vitrified blocks and concrete make an absolute air tight silo for all time and under all conditions, with a hard, smooth inner surface, impervious to moisture and acids and therefore perfectly sanitary. In addition to this the silo, save for the roof and shoot, is absolutely indestructible.

Lameness In Horses.

Shoeing is a very frequent cause of lameness and in a great many cases of incurable lameness. Sufficient attention is not given to this matter. It often happens that by a little mechanical contrivance in the alteration of the shoe or in the way the foot is shod the horse will travel sound or become workably sound. Bad shoeing and the mulitation of the foot render many a horse valueless, and cutting away the frog, removing frog pressure, cutting at the bars and shortening the toes are main causes of chronic diseases of the foot. The horse's foot being exceedingly vascular and its blood supply great, it naturally follows that if the foot is mutilated the blood supply becomes impeded, and consequently chronic diseases and atrophy are set up.

Cause of Ropy Milk.

Bacteria cause ropy milk and are usually found in the milk utensils and not in the cow's udder. Clean up, disinfect and whitewash stables and perfectly scald and sun dry milk utensils. See that the drinking water and water used in cleansing the vessels are free from contamination. If the milk is affected when drawn from the udder the cause is garget and bacteria in the udder. For that treat by physicing the cow, giving a tablespoonful of saltpeter twice daily in water for a few days and then mixing half an ounce of hyposulphite of soda in feed night and morning for a week. The milk will be safe for pigs or chickens.—Breeder's Gazette.

Next to the tragedy of having NO buckwheat cakes is to have 'em for the first time and be so late for work that you can't stop to eat any.

BOWSER GOT BIRD

Bought to Make the House Homelike In Winter.

HE KNEW A WHIPPOORWILL.

Sure This Was One That Would Trill in the Night, but Mrs. Bowser Had Chased Blackbirds, and This Was of That Species.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

WHEN Mr. Bowser came home the other evening he had a boy with him, and the boy was carrying a birdcage with a bird in it. Of course Mrs. Bowser was full of curiosity about it, and the explanation was:

"My dear woman, fall is here, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"And winter will soon follow. There will be long evenings to get through with. We do not care much for the theater or cards, but we must have some form of amusement. I am, as you know, a domestic man. I want things around me homelike."

"But what of the bird?" she asked.

"You have heard of the whippoorwill, I presume?"

"Oh, yes."

"He sings at night. His is a joyous song. Sitting in front of an open fire, with a pan of popcorn on one side and a dish of apples on the other and with the whippoorwill singing his lay, can you present a greater picture of a happy and contented fireside?"

"No, but"—

"But what?"

Mrs. Bowser had knelt to have a closer look at the bird. She arose without answering his query. She had made a discovery, and she didn't exactly know how to handle it.

BOWSER'S PLUMAGED PURCHASE.

"Ever see a finer bird?" he asked as they descended to the dining room.

"Did you buy him at a bird store?"

"I did. I had had my eye on him for a couple of weeks."

"And they said he was a whippoorwill?"

"They didn't have to. I called and said I wanted to buy him. He doesn't look to you like a turkey gobbler, does he?"

"Oh, no."

"He'll be worth his weight in gold this winter. I'm expecting to hear him burst into song any instant. Lord, but I wish winter were here now. The bird store man said that if you gave the bird the key on the piano he'd sing most anything. The phonograph or the pianola won't be in it with him."

"When you were a boy on a farm you saw whippoorwills, perhaps?" queried Mrs. Bowser after an interval.

"Seven or eight million of them, I guess."

"And you saw quail and robins and larks?"

"Certainly, and what of it?"

"I—I don't know," faltered Mrs. Bowser and turned the subject to something else, although he hung on to it like a choice morsel.

Was It a Whippoorwill?

"The bird will be company for you when I happen to be out of an evening," he went on. "Some folks think a whipporwill's song is a bit mournful, but I don't. It's a fact that he sings with such fervor as makes the first few notes seem tinged with some great grief. You had no idea that I was after such a bird, had you?"

"No-o-o."

"I try to be considerate toward you. Indeed, I may say that I bought the bird solely on your account. I hope you will take to each other and that in time he will sit on your shoulder and utter his lay. We will now go up and hear him trill forth."

The cage was brought from the hall into the sitting room and placed under the light. Mrs. Bowser took another and still closer look, and she gazed at Mr. Bowser in a pitying way. He failed to notice it, but stood before the cage with his fingers in the armholes of his vest and said:

"Only cost $10, and he's worth double that. It surely was a happy thought of mine. See him cock his head on one side and look at me."

"Yes."

"Do you think he knows that I'm Bowser?"

"Very likely."

"That's what the bird man said—that he'd know me in a very little time. Be very quiet now. He's getting ready to warble."

But the bird wasn't. He sat on his perch and had a puzzled look about him and finally closed his eyes in sleep.

"Like a tired infant," whispered Mr. Bowser, as he tiptoed away and sat down.

There was utter silence in the room for the next five minutes. Then the bird gaped and uttered a sort of croak.

"That's a sign of hunger," was whispered. "Mrs. Bowser, have you any cold corned beef in the house?"

"Mercy, but he won't eat such stuff! You'll have to get seed of some sort."

"Um! I forgot that. I'll be out of bed at 6 in the morning. I'll try him now with a drink."

Bird Fails to Take Water.

A pint bowl of water was put in the cage, but it attracted no notice.

"Mrs. Bowser, it's you," said Mr. Bowser after standing and puzzling for awhile. "You and the bird are not en rapport, and he feels it. Birds can tell when people are down on them."

"But I'm not down on this one."

"But he feels a sort of constraint, a coldness. You had no welcome for him. I don't want to say anything harsh to you, but if you assume an inimical attitude toward this helpless and innocent hearted bird I shall have to have a talk with you. Go into the other room for awhile until I get him to singing. He looks as if he expected you to hit him with the ax every instant."

Mrs. Bowser went upstairs and was gone twenty minutes. Just as she returned the bird opened its mouth, flapped its wings and uttered a sound between a squawk and a shriek.

"By thunder!" gasped Mr. Bowser.

"That is one of his songs, I take it," she observed.

"He did that as he caught sight of you. The poor thing knows you are ready to murder him the moment my back is turned. By John, woman, even the birds of the air can read you!"

"That's because I used to chase so many out of the cherry trees when I was a little girl."

"Chase whippoorwills at night?"

"No—blackbirds by day. Mr. Bowser, you have been done for. That is a blackbird as sure's you're born!"

"Woman, what do you mean?"

Species Diagnosed.

"Just what I say. I should have thought you'd know better. He's no more a whippoorwill than our cat."

"Woman, this is the last straw," he said as he came nearer.

"And from the looks of it I should say it was about the last blackbird as well. Blackbirds have been taught to squawk a little, but never to sing. A whippoorwill is so different"—

"In my own house I am insulted!"

"I don't see how."

"I am told that I am a fool."

"I have simply told you that you bought a blackbird for a whippoorwill. Even if you had got the latter he never would have uttered a note. That breed of birds never sings in captivity."

Mr. Bowser lifted up the cage and left the house with it, going straight to the family butcher.

"I'll get you hundreds like him from the farm at 10 cents apiece," was answered. "Can you leave the bird here? Of course. Yes, perhaps I can give him and the cage away. Am I sure as to the breed? Why, man, your own wife must know that this is a blackbird. If you want something to amuse you during the long winter evenings get a jewsharp and learn to play it."

When the cageless and birdless Mr. Bowser got back to the house Mrs. Bowser looked at him inquiringly, and he replied:

"As soon as convenient you had best consult your lawyer as to a divorce. You must know that things cannot go on in this way any longer!"

"I shall go up with Mr. Grahame-White or any other pilot without the slightest hesitation, and be glad of the chance," he said. "I am the heaviest man in Britain, and I have an ambition to take my big weight into the skies. You may be sure the event will come off."

The proceeds of the record flight are to be given to the Willesden Cottage Hospital, it being Mr. Ecclestone's intention to raise money enought to endow four new beds.

Laurier Declines Invitation.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not attend the dinner to be given by President Taft on Wednesday next at Washington to the Canadian envoys to the reciprocity conference and Earl Grey, who is at present in New York. The Premier was invited by the President to attend, but has replied to the formal invitation that his Parliamentary duties will keep him from going. The House of Commons resumes after the holiday recess on Wednesday, and, as so many of the Cabinet Ministers are absent already, the Premier feels that his presence is necessary at the opening, as much important Government business is on the program for immediate discussion.

NERVOUS WOMEN EASILY CURED

Says Italian Doctor Who Bids Them To Just Stop Talking

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 7.—Women stand little show of curing themselves of nerves and temper, according to Dr. Enrico Serafini, of Italy, who says silence is the only cure for neurasthenia and all nervous disorders.

"Nervous depression and neurasthenia are due—it results after diligent research—" said Dr. Serafini to-day, "to a tendency to talk too much. Now to talk does not mean to sound letters, but a mental effort which excites the nervous system. The effort of thinking, of making up phrases, of listening to and forming arguments with hearers, of being attentive to them, of co-ordinating the thread of conversation. All these things intensify a general awakening of the person which finally results in a nervous breakdown.

Persons who are not loquacious, medical records show, have always been remarked for their good health, and this silence is directly related with the first order a doctor gives his patient that of absolute quiet."

ELEVATORS IN ENGLAND.

Grain Growers' Guide Says That Is Next Step.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—The Government is considering the question of terminal elevators facilities in British ports for the handling of Canadian grain exported via the Hudson Bay route. This is the strong statement made editorially in the Grain Growers' Guide, the official organ of the Grain Growers' Association of the prairie province, and the editor of which was one of the farmers' representatives who remained behind to confer with the Premier after the recent delegation had gone. The editorial says:

"Sir Wilfrid very frankly told the committee the attitude of the Government towards the undertaking. He stated that the Government was prepared to build the road and the necessary terminals for the handling of grain, and own them in perpetuity, but that the Government was opposed to operating the road after it was built, but gave the committee distinctly to understand that the question of operating would be left in abeyance until the road was well under way.

"The Premier also assured the committee that the Government, either through the board of Railway Commissioners are some other commissioners, was prepared to keep complete control; not only of the freight charges on the land portion of the system, but would also control the rates of any steamship companies that formed a part of the through export charges on grain from the prairie provinces to Liverpool, and that it was also contemplated by the Government to provide the necessary elevator and terminal facilities at Liverpool or some other English port for the handling of Canadian grain exported via the Hudson Bay route."

TO LEASE HUDSON BAY RAILWAY

Mackenzie and Mann Offer Terms Similar to Transcontinental Deal

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—That the Mackenzie and Mann interests have proposed to operate the Hudson Bay Railway under a lease from the Government, similar to the one under which the Grand Trunk Pacific will operate the eastern section of the National Trans-continental, was the important announcement made by a promient official of the Railway Department this afternoon. This would mean that Mackenzie and Mann are willing to pay an annual rental equal to three per cent. of the cost of the road if allowed to operate it for seven years, rent free. The proposition will meet with strong oppostion from the people of the West.

In this connection it may be stated that Port Nelson has been practically decided upon as the terminus of the road. The Maritime Department advised against the selection of Churchill upon the report of the Hydrographic Surveys, recently completed at that harber. Engineer Anderson's report will not be made public, however, until the arrival of Engineer Perrozeau, who has been in charge of surveys at Nelson and who is now proceeding from that place by dog train to the Pass enroute for Ottawa. As frequently stated by the Hon. Mr. Graham, the Railway Department has all along favored the Port Nelson route. It is nearly a hundred miles shorter than the alternative route from Split Lake to Churchill. The road by this route would present fewer difficulties from an engineering standpoint and pass through a better coutry. With the decision of the Maritime Department against Fort Churchill there is no doubt but that the railway department will recommend Nelson as the terminus of the road.

Tariff Envoys Are in Secret Conclave at Washington.

Their Meetings Will Be In Camera—Only Small Concessions Expected and Negotiations Will Probably Last a Week—The Prospect of an "Opening Wedge" In Reciprocity Will Be Welcomed Across the Line

Washington, Jan. 9.—A determined effort to lay the foundation for a reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada was initiated Saturday, when Secretary of State Knox explained to the envoys the powers conferred upon the representatives of the Department of State, and the purposes of the United States Government in entering into the negotiations. There were just six members of the conference assembled in the snug little office in the State Department assigned to the committee.

Among the negotiators are Chas. M. Pepper and John B. Osborn for the United States, and Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, and Hon. W. Paterson, Minister of Customs, for Canada. Secretary Knox himself gave up his afternoon to the conference. Indications are that the negotiations will consume at least a week's time. There is an enormous amount of detail to be considered, and the tariff schedules of both countries will be subject to most careful study, in the light of elaborate figures showing the extent of the exports and imports and the capital invested in various lines of industry likely to be affected by any changes in the customs duties.

As usual in the negotiations of a treaty, the participants are bound to absolute secrecy. It is, therefore, improbable that there will be anything in the nature of an authoritative statement available before the close of the negotiations beyond a mere announcement as to what progress is being made.

It is said that the conference will result in the addition of a few raw products to the free lists, reductions of duty on American manufactured articles not now largely made in Canada and reduced duties on some Canadian agricultural staples largely used in the United States. Even this much will be regarded by the State Department as a satisfactory accomplishment, as the opening wedge for the extension of the idea of reciprocity in supplementary conventions to be drawn in the future.

The first conference lasted about two hours, and an adjournment was then taken until Monday afternoon at three o'clock. Beyond the mere announcement that the conference had met to renew the negotiations, "initialled by the President some months ago," the only formal statement to be had was the following:

"It was decided that no statements would be given to the press until the results of the negotiations should become definite; thereupon an authoritative statement will be made jointly by the representatives of both Governments, and will be issued through the Department of State. Meanwhile, anything purporting to be information as to the progress of negotiations will be the mere speculation of individual writers, and the negotiators will not feel called on to confirm or deny any such reports."

Guest of Roosevelt.

New York, Jan. 9.—Earl Grey, the Governor-General of Canada, arrived here Saturday from Ottawa, and late in the afternoon motored down to Oyster Bay, where he was the guest Saturday night of Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill.

"My visit to New York, said Earl Grey, "is purely a social one."

At the Hotel Plaza, where the earl spent Sunday, he said he would be unable to accept the invitation of President Taft to attend the state dinner to be given at the White House for the representatives of the Dominion who are in Washington in negotiation with Secretary Knox regarding the proposed new reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada.

Found Dead In Woods.

Cornwall, Jan. 9.—Angus McDonald, son of the late Angus McDonald of St. Andrew's, who recently returned from the west, was accidentally killed in the woods near his mother's residence on Friday. He went out in the afternoon with a shot gun, and when he did not return it was thought that he had gone to his uncle's. On Saturday his body was found, and it was evident from the position of the body and gun that he had drawn the weapon towards him over a stump. Both barrels had been discharged, making a terrible hole in his abdomen, which must have caused almost instant death.

The coroner, Dr. C. J. Hamilton, decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The deceased was a fine young man, 23 years of age.

Went Through Ice.

Halifax, Jan. 9.—Two brothers, Ainslie and Miles Mariatt, aged 12 and 10 years respectively, were crossing Chocolate Lake, on the outskirts of Halifax, yesterday afternoon, on their way from Sunday school to their home. It was a short cut. The lake was clear of ice at the beginning of last week and had frozen over again in the last cold spell, but it was weak, and the two chaps went through. The older clung to the edge of the ice and was pulled out, but Miles went out of sight almost at once and was drowned.

Threaten Federenko's Family.

Winnipeg, Jan. 9.—M. J. Finkelstein, who conducted the defence of Savio Federenko, has received a letter from a friend of the latter in Russia, who says that the police have raided Federenko's home, seized all his papers and personal belongings and threatened his family that every member will be thrown into jail unless the Federenko agitation is immediately stopped.

TO SUPPRESS ANARCHY.

International Action Will Be Taken Against Agitators.

London, Jan. 9.—International action to stamp out anarchy will be, it is predicted here, a development of the near future. To the average Londoner, intensely excited over last Tuesday's sensational fight in Sidney street, the suggestion is welcome.

He is convinced that something more is needed than ordinary police measures and the conventional criminal codes of modern states.

Expression is given to the spreading sentiment by a forceful, but dispassionate writer who asks if all sensible men will not agree with him in thinking that altogether too little attention is paid by the great powers of Europe, America and Asia to the need and feasibility of concerted steps to stamp out enemies of order.

If the powers cannot arrange for concerted action, he argues, they might bright about simultaneous individual action to effact the "whole miserable brood of London's Peter the Painters" and Tokio Kotokus and Barcelona bomb hurlers, and Rome Mafia men, and New York and Chicago's Black Hand pests.

In Paris, where the prevailing view is that the duty of leadership in a campaign for international action against anarchy rests with France and the United States, because of their republican character, the point is made that "The mere existence of The Hague tribunal paves the way for indefinate multiplication of mutual defence measures."

Scarce In Montreal.

Montreal, Jan. 9.—The Anarchists appear to be at work, for, according to one Therien of this city, there is a conspiracy afloat to blow up the City Hall and the archbishop's palace. It appears that Mayor Guerin received a letter the other day signed T. Therien, written in French, saying that there was a conspiracy on foot, participated in by two men whose names were given in the letter, and which would result during the month of January in both the City Hall and the archbishop's palace being blown into the air.

His worship at once handed the document over to Chief Detective Carpenter, and it was learned soon after that his grace Mgr. Bruchesi had received a letter, also written by Therien, informing him of the alleged plot and of the coming destruction of the episcopal palace, as well as the City Hall. Both letters are now in the hands of the chief detective, who is endeavoring to find out what there is in it.

The mayor stated that he had received many letters during the progress of the Eucharistic congress, some of the missives declaring that his worship would be done away with during the passage of the great procession in September last.

A Perilous Voyage.

Halifax, Jan. 9.—Battered by gales after a 4,000-mile voyage, with less than two tons of coal in her bunkers, and her food supply almost depleted, the tiny Government quarantine boat Alva, from Dartmouth, Eng., made Halifax via the Azores and Bermuda, yesterday morning. The net tonnage of the Alva is forty-eight tons. She left Dartmouth on Nov. 22, and after nine days' rough weather made the Azores, where she was detained thirteen days on account of storms. After leaving the Azores, the next port of call was St. George's, Bermuda, which was made in eighteen days. The Alva sailed from St. George's, last Monday. Soon after the port was cleared she encountered rough weather, and on Wednesday night the little craft nearly foundered, when a great sea swept over her. It was with the greatest difficulty that Capt. Tucker kept his boat afloat, and it is remarkable that the voyage was made without serious damage or loss of life. The Alva was built at Dartmouth for the Dominion Government, to be used in quarantine service in Halifax harbor.

Demanded Bilingual Ticket.

Quebec, Jan. 9.—The first conflict respecting the Lavergne law, passed at last session, occurred on Saturday last, and as a result actions of damages will be instituted by Mr. Trudel, notary of St. Roche, against the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway, and against Conductor Richards. Mr. Trudel resides at Charlesburg, but comes to town every day, and on Saturday morning he asked the railway agent at Charlesburg for a ticket printed in both languages. As there were no such tickets to be secured, Mr. Trudel refused to purchase any other, and got on board the train. When Conductor Richards came along, Trudel informed him that he had no ticket, and the conductor offered to sell him one, but as it was not printed in French, refused to accept it. As a result he was ordered off the train at Limoilou station, and had to walk into the city, and gave his counsel instruction to issue actions against the company and the conductor.

Expelled for Twenty Years.

Lisbon, Jan. 9.—A Government decree, issued on the subject of the property rights of the religious orders, contains a clause forbidding monks and nuns of the order to wear a distinctive dress, and prohibits the return to the country of expelled Jesuits until twenty years have elapsed following their expulsion.

The decree permits any person to arrest an offender against either provision of the law.

Woman Arrested.

Hamilton, Jan. 9.—Annie Mirfin was arrested on Saturday afternoon on the charge of shooting Mrs. Maud Lampman (Maud Mulholland) with intent. The shooting took place last week at the prisoner's home, where both parties live. The plaintiff was not seriously wounded, although she had a narrow escape.

Appointed Administrator.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—A special edition of The Canada Gazette appoints Sir Charles Fitzpatrick administrator of the Government in the absence of Earl Grey.

MATTHEWS COMMITTED

Evidence of George M. Teasdale Taken at Cobourg.

Hotelkeeper, Now Serving a Term In Jail for Selling Liquor Without a License, Testifies to a Conversation With Prisoner, In Which Latter Said He Wanted to Get McDonald to Keep His Mouth Shut.

Cobourg, Jan. 9.—Henry I. Matthews, jr., was on Saturday committed for trial on a charge of murdering Miss Brimacombe, a deaf mute, in an hotel at Colborne. The final hearing was held in the Cobourg jail for the purpose of taking the evidence of George M. Teasdale, in whose hotel the murder was committed. Teasdale is serving a term for selling liquor without a license. Teasdale bore testimony as to the good character of Miss Brimacombe. He said he had gone to bed early on the evening of Dec. 17. He was roused about eight o'clock by hearing somebody in the dining-room. He heard the clock strike eight, and said to his wife that they were having a pretty late supper. He didn't hear any noises except that. The next morning he heard the waiter go up to the third floor and knock on her door. He then got up. The room in which Miss Brimacombe was murdered is directly opposite that in which Teasdale and his wife slept. He went over to the door and opened it.

This was O'Rook's room, and he was away. He saw Miss Brimacombe lying on the bed, and thought she was asleep. He didn't know who she was, and walked over and took her by the arm. He found her cold and stiff. He thought it might be his wife and went back to his room. His wife rose up in bed, and he asked her if she had put anyone in that room. Then he went down stairs and told Don Haynes.

The evidence which the crown had come to get referred to a conversation between Matthews and Teasdale on Monday afternoon.

"Did you have a conversation?" asked Mr. Kerr. "Yes."

"What was said by Matthews?"—"Well, he asked me why I hadn't told him about the papers being served on him. He was wanted as a witness in my liquor case, and I was going to plead guilty. He said if I had told him, he could have been away."

"Anything else?"—"Yes, he said it wouldn't look well to have two papers served together."

"Why did he say that?"—"I'm sure I don't know," was the reply.

"Now, Mr. Teasdale," said the crown attorney, "was there anything said about this other affair?"—"Yes, he wanted me to get the old man, Torozo McDonald, to keep his mouth shut."

"Why did he say that?"—"I asked him why and he said because the old man had seen him in the kitchen when Joey was there." For the first time aMtthews smiled, then his face grew grave again.

The evidence given at the inquest by Matthews was read. In it, he had said that he had heard no sounds, such as some of the other witnesses had described. He denied having put his arm around Miss Brimacombe in the kitchen, saying that he hardly even knew her by sight. He said he had not seen her upstairs. This having been read, Mr. Kerr asked for a committal on the evidence, saying that he had no alternative. He pointed out that the doctors had stated that death had been the result of stangulation.

"There is no doubt that Matthews and the women were in the kitchen together, and they both disappeared. Smith went upstairs, and heard the moaning, and a man's voice saying, 'Shut up.' Matthews was not seen again until the sound had ceased, and he came downstairs with his vest open.

"Walking home with Edward, he exclaimed what fools we married men are."

The crown attorney also referred to Teasdale's evidence with reference to the conversation with Matthews, and the talk of "getting the old man to keep his mouth shut."

"Is there sufficient evidence before you to place this man in jeopardy of a trial?" asked Mr. Porter, in speaking for the defence.

"It would be utterly impossible to convict a man on the evidence before you." He asked that Matthews be discharged for lack of evidence. He spoke of the serious nature of the charge, and the fact that, if committed, Matthews would have to lie in jail until April, whether he be guilty or innocent. If he were innocent, it would be a great injustice; if guilty, the crown could at any time prosecute.

"On all points he is corroborated by the other witnesses. There is nothing else, but some slight suspicion, on which to make a committal," declared counsel. "You can't even say that the woman was murdered, for the doctors say that she might have choked to death. Now, in the face of that, can you commit him?"

The two magistrates deliberated for some twenty minutes, and ordered a committal. The trial will be in Cobourg on April 10.

Had Hip Bone Crushed.

Smith's Falls, Jan. 9.—Alexander Johnston, 76 years of age, was walking along the C.P.R. track when he saw No. 3 express train coming. He stepped to another track when onlookers warned him of the Ottawa express coming. He just cleared the track, but the buffer struck him. He escaped with a crushed hip bone.

Dynamite Exploded.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—Felix Dusans, an Italian, residing in Ottawa, entered a shack on the Canadian Northern Railway at Shannonville on Saturday, when five sticks of dynamite exploded from an unknown cause. The small structure was blown to pieces, and the young man killed.

ONTARIO AWAY AHEAD

She Leads the Provinces, in Lumbering Operations.

Total Yield From Forests In 1909 Is $30,050,354, and British Columbia Is Next With $11,374,989, Quebec and Saskatchewan Show a Decrease While Ontario's Is a Big Increase—Spruce Leads In Value and Cut.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—In a report on the forest products of Canada for 1909, issued by the forestry branch of the Department of the Interior, compiled from statistics supplied by operating sawmills, trade papers, prominent lumbermen, provincial, county and township officials, Ontario leads all the provinces in the value of lumber cut by the magnificent total of $30,050,344; British Columbia is second with $11,374,989; Quebec comes third with $9,48,9386, and the following provinces in the order named: New Brunswick, $5,336,974; Nova Scotia, $3,273,177; Saskatchewan, $1,448,079; Manitoba, $1,025,268; Alberta, $798,320; Prince Edward Island, $22,940. In the case of Quebec and Saskatchewan a decrease is shown over the figures for 1908, while Ontario shows an increase both in quantity and value of 17.3 per cent.

The number of mills operating in Canada, with the exception of a few small plants in Quebec, is 2,085; the quantity of timber cut, 3,814,942,000 feet board measure, and the total value $62,819,477. This is an increase for the Dominion of 13.9 per cent. over 1909. The return from the Department reads: "The 1909 reports are, without doubt, close to the truth and the most accurate yet received in Canada. There are still a number of small mills not reporting, particularly in the Province of Quebec, but their combined annual cut is only a very small percentage of the total."

For whatever the comparison is worth, it is noted that the total cut in Canada for 1909 is a little less than one-ninth the lumber cut of United States for 1908, and a little less than the lumber cut in the State of Washington for 1907. The per capita lumber production in Canada for 1909 was 468 board feet, or 27 per cent. greater than the per capita lumber cut production of United States for 1908.

In respect of Ontario the report says: "It holds this position (top) by virtue of its great annual cut of white pine, and by reason of its diversified forests, which give it a small annual cut of almost every wood produced in Canada. Ontario has been Canada's greatest lumber producer for a great many years; it produced over one-third the lumber cut in Canada in 1909, and the increase over 1908 cut was 17.3 per cent., or a greater increase per capita than that for the whole of Canada.

Spruce leads all other woods in quantity and value of cut. For 1909 the cut was 1,124,949,000 feet board measure, representing a value of $16,365,720; white pine, 1,046,447,000, value $22,563,417; Douglas fir, 469,656,000, value $6,850,579.

Did They Pay?

Montreal, Jan. 9.—Le Pays wants to know what become of furniture costing $30,000, which the Hon. Mr. Tarte purchased for the Canadian pavilion at the last Paris Exposition?

Where did the curtains go that were admired by everybody who visited the exhibition, and which cost 26,000 francs?

What has become, the same paper asks, of the carpets and the furniture de luxe which Mr. Tarte installed in the reception rooms?

"Who," asks Mr. Langlois, M. P., "inherited the curtains, the carpets and the magnificent furniture? It appears that some of these articles are installed in the residence of a very honest man in Montreal, consequently the question in our mind is, did those who divided the spoils of the Canadian building at the last Paris exposition, pay or indemnify the Government at Ottawa for which was taken? In fact, did they pay the duty on these articles de luxe? Light should be thrown upon this affair as an investigation would no doubt bring some very interesting revelations to the surface."

An Important Decision.

Regina, Jan. 9.—In a judgment handed down on Saturday by Justice Newlands, a far-reaching result will follow. The City of Regina imposed a floor space tax on the Dominion Express Co., which the company refuse to pay, claiming that, inasmuch as they paid the provincial tax, and, therefore, exempt from all municipal taxes. The company brought a test case on the matter before the court for an injunction to restrain the city from collecting such taxes. In his finding Judge Newlands declined to grant such injunction, and on the contrary holds that the express company is liable to pay the business tax.

The effect of this judgment is that all corporations doing business in the province are subject to the provincial corporation act, except railways, are likewise liable to pay a business tax to the municipalities wherein they are located, including banks, trust companies, etc.

Cartoonist Suicides.

Montreal, Jan. 9.—Alonzo Ryan, aged 36, hanged himself at his home in this city early on Saturday morning. An inquest was held later in the day and the coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide. The evidence was to the effect that deceased had lately been suffering from acute depression, brought about, it is understood by business worries. The deceased, who was the son of the late Carroll Ryan, was well known as a newspaper cartoonist, but he had recently been interested in the moving picture business.

Shot by Litigant.

Caney, Kans., Jan. 9.—J. D. S. Neeley, president of the Wichita Pipe Line Co., president of the Lima (Ohio) Trust Co., and head of several large oil companies, was shot and killed in the Palace Hotel here yesterday morning by Al. O. Truskett, a prominent business man of Caney.

The shooting was the result of litigation over an oil lease. Truskett surrendered immediately.

Truskett was taken by automobile to the county jail at Independence, Kansas.

The shooting occurred in the rear of the hotel. Mr. Neeley had been sitting in the lobby reading a letter. Truskett, sitting opposite, had been watching him closely. When Mr. Neeley got up and walked toward the rear of the hotel, Trusket hurried around to the sample room. As Neeley passed the door of this room, Truskett fired at him twice. One bullet passed through Neeley's heart and the other through his left arm. When employes of the hotel reached the prostrate man he was dead.

Express Car on Fire.

Winnipeg, Jan. 9.—The express car on C.P.R. train, 97, which left the city for the west, took fire a short distance west of Poplar Point, about 40 miles west of Winnipeg, Saturday night. The car was run back to Poplar Point, but the fire gained such headway that it was impossible to subdue the flames. It is stated that the contents of the cars were completely destroyed.

A Long Season.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—F. T. Congdon, M.P., says a record was made last season in dredging in the Yukon. It extended over 233 days. It is remarkable that a gold dredge can work to every advantage up to two weeks of Christmas, there are difficulties in the Yukon not experienced in other countries, but it is being proved that they can be overcome.

ENERGY—THE HUMAN POWER-HOUSE.

Mind, the master architect, engages energy to do various kinds of work. It must always have workmen or its plans cannot be executed.

The brain of man is a power-house in which there are many dynamos. Wires lead out from these dynamos to all parts and every organ of the body. The various parts or organs of the body are motors or engines that keep up their action by the energy they receive over the dynamos in the brain. The food we consume is the fuel which contains latent energy. Digestion prepares this fuel for admission into the blood. The blood carries it to the nerve centres, or dynamos, where much of it is finally burnt up, consumed, and the latent energy, which held the food together in its fuel form, istransformed into nerve en-

While there has been a large increase in the number of cases brought before the court during the past year I am pleased to state that there has not been any increase of criminal cases, and in most of these latter the perpetrators have been arrested, convicted and property recovered.

The members of the force during the past year have been compelled to perform a large amount of extra duty owing to the many conventions, Old Boys' Reunion and Grand Trunk Ry. strike. In connection with the latter, I desire to bear witness to the valuable assistance rendered to the force by His Worship Mayor Marsh, who, although just recovering from a serious illness, did duty night and day with the force, and by his help we were enabled to maintain good order during this very trying time.

New Police Station.

For some years past the question of new quarters suitable for a police station and police court combined has been discussed, but no definite action taken. This year, however, I am pleased to state that plans were prepared and contracts let for the reconstruction of the old meat market into new police quarters, with the necessary accommodations for police court, magistrate, lawyers and witness rooms with all modern conveniences, making an up-to-date sanitary police headquarters.

Police Constable Harman and Naphan were promoted to Sergeants on January 12, 1910. Charles Thompson on January 9th and E. W. DeShane on January 17th appointed constables. P. C. Malbeuf resigned on May 9th and D. J. Corrigan was appointed in his stead and went on duty on May 16th.

The force, as now constituted, consists of chief, two sergeants and four constables, and I am pleased to say are doing good work and working harmoniously together for the suppression of crime, in every sense of the word "comrades."

Inspector Arnott has, as in former years, returned to me the names of owners of dogs in city and acted as special constable when required by me.

All of the above respectfully submitted.

Your obedient servant,
JOHN NEWTON,
Chief Constable.

GOOD POINTS OF DEVON CATTLE.

Among the several breeds of cattle that have been imported into this country, mainly from England, the breed that has been most modest in pushing its claim, I am quite sure, is the Devon, writes a Missouri breeder.

Of course no one will claim for the Devons that they are as good cream and butter cows as the Channel island cattle, or such heavy milkers as the Holstein, or such beefmakers as Shorthorns and Herefords, but they are like the mediocre people in this world—without making great show they are among the attractive cattle that have come to this country.

If any one were to ask me what is the most noted character of the Devons that gives them prominence I would say that it is their great efficiency as work oxen. They seem to have a reputation in all parts of the world where they are known as being the best of all the breeds as work oxen. But, while their special adaptability in that field has certainly given them greater prominence in that line than any other breed possesses, it is by no means their only point of excellence.

In the first place, they are good all around cattle. They are medium sized, of a very attractive deep red color, smooth and blocky in shape, and their horns are more upright and symmetrically curved than those of some other breeds.

Of course they have less size than either Shorthorns or Holsteins, but they are more compact than either and are quicker in their movements. The oxen usually weigh from 1,600 to 1,800 pounds and are so trimly built and active that they are more efficient as ox teams than any other breeds. But because they are so superior as oxen is no reason for them to be low in the scale as to other points of excellence.

They are good milkers, and the milk is rich, and they have made many records as butter cows. A test made at an experiment station in the northwest shows that one Devon cow made two and two-fifths pounds of butter a day. But the breed has never been exploited as special butter cows or beef cows, although the quality of the meat and the distribution of the meat as to the proportion in the choice cuts have given them an enviable reputation for beef animals. So that young animals bring top prices as beef cattle, and as they mature early the chances are that Devon steers that have been fairly treated will show more of the best cuts in proportion than any other breed.

TYPICAL HEAD OF DEVON BULL.

In the department of agriculture report for the year ended July, 1907, the following figures show the number of animals registered of the best known breeds: Shorthorn, a total of 715,003; Jersey, 274,270; Hereford, 268,383; Holstein, 155,718; Angus, 105,392, while the Devons were only 22,572 head. They exceeded only the Ayrshire, Guernsey and Red Polled.

These figures show the total number of each breed registered since the herd books were started and do not represent only those now alive. The breed is holding its own in this country, and all who own and breed Devons are enthusiastic champions of their virtues.

Sheep Keeping.

Much has been said from time to time on the subject of the advantage of keeping sheep on every farm, says the Homestead. Yet there is no sort of domestic animal that has failed to meet with general appreciation in the same degree as the sheep. Truly there is no farm that can afford not to keep sheep. The sheep is an animal of refined instincts. He is not a gross feeder, so that neither in the fattening nor the growing periods is there demand for the laborious effort that attends hog raising at all times. He is a close grazer and will, if the need be, eke out an existence where other farm animals would find it impossible to do so. He will also devour weeds and objectionable vegetation that would otherwise prove a nuisance. He is a close cleaner, with the faculty of gaining his subsistence from grains and herbage that would else be lost.

Selling Corn or Hogs.

The farmer who makes a practice of raising grain exclusively, hauling it to the elevator and selling it is robbing himself, or, in other words, depleting the fertility of the farm.

Every year as the crop is gathered and sold off the place it is left with decreased productive power for the future. It is like mining or digging out the value of the soil and shipping to the market. It is selling your farm virtually through the elevator.

Selling the corn by the hog route or through any other live stock is retaining the fertility. By a proper system of diversified farming and rotation of crops you can build up and improve instead of destroying the productiveness.—American Swineherd.

GOOD FORM CHIT CHAT

Milady's Mirror

Here are a few rules that the girl who is determined to diet does well to observe. There is too much trifling with our digestions these days, and not the least harm is done by the notion for undereating.

Never diet on the advice of a friend. Her regime may have done wonders for her and will put you to bed or make you a sorry looking wreck.

Don't diet to excess at any time. Girls, make sure your doctors know dietetics. Many physicians, good in other things, have little knowledge of the effect of food upon the system.

If you must diet from a cause, as from diabetes or kidney trouble, do it religiously. Almost better not begin than to do it spasmodically, letting up whenever food tempts you.

If you diet only for the sake of figure or complexion count the cost before starting. Cutting out the foods of ordinary family meals is hard. Ask yourself, "Which means most to me—the loss of a few pounds or being a nuisance at mealtime?"

Don't keep on dieting if you feel that it disagrees with you. This holds good even when your food list is carefully censored by a physician. The best of them will make mistakes. Find out in time what is wrong.

Don't diet to excess at any time. Women often go to the point of weakening their entire systems by injudiciously following a doctor's advice.

Common sense and moderation are good things to hold to in the matter of food.

Care of the Feet.

The American woman is said to rival the Chinese in the abuse of her feet. But the oriental woman has the advantage over the occidental—she waddles frankly, while the American girl cultivates grace and eloquence of carriage in the narrowest of shoes, the highest of heels or the most treacherous of pumps.

Corns on the soles of the feet are often developed by wearing shoes which are too narrow. They can be removed with a lotion composed of collodion and salicylic acid.

Callosities made by the pump which slips can be rubbed off with pumice stone, after which cold cream must be applied.

To feet which swell easily some comfort is restored by a bath containing salt and borax.

For troublesome perspiration use orris powder, alum water or a lotion consisting of four ounces of bay rum and eight grains of tannic acid.

Sweeping Good Exercise.

Sweeping exercises every muscle of the body. It is sufficiently vigorous to give good exercise, and at the same time it is not so strenuous as to overtire. A woman who sweeps does it regularly at certain hours of the day, and regularity in exercise makes for good.

Then, again, the exercise is exercise with a definite object in view. The mind is interested at the same time as the body is employed.

Sweeping movements are particularly good for the lungs. The chest muscles are exercised all the time, and this helps to establish deep breathing. This naturally tends to produce a good figure as well as a pure state of the blood and therefore a good complexion.

The old fashioned broom should be used and not the patent carpet sweeper. Tea leaves or damp bran should be used beforehand to prevent the dust from rising and getting into the lungs.

Rest Cure For the Hair.

Rest cure for the hair is being practiced by American society women. It requires that they give up their social engagements for a week, but it rewards them with lustrous healthy hair, in addition to giving them a chance to relax from the strenuous rush of social calls. Autumn is the best time for the rest cure, as the hair thins out and often gives women much alarm. During the cure vanity compels the women to remain in hiding except to their most intimate friends. Hats and hair structures are discarded. The hair is permitted to hang loose. There are no curls. No hat is worn, and the sun is permitted to shine on the hair, giving it a rich luster. It is brushed frequently, and the hair is secured in coils rather than in curls, but as few pins as possible are used to hold the coils together.

Toilet Table Necessities.

A good face cream for removing soil.

A face powder that will protect and not clog in the pores.

A soap free from all impurities—better unscented.

A good nail polish.

Cucumber or witch hazel jelly for chapped hands and lips.

Peroxide for removing the dark lines on the neck left by high, tight collars.

A bag of almond meal to use in the bath for whitening the skin.

A Good Cleanser.

A mixture for removing dirt from the hands quickly, also for whitening and softening the skin, is made from melted castile soap and oatmeal mixed with a little water. A few drops of perfume may be added if the odor of the oatmeal is unpleasant.

The Love Story and Good Deeds of the Former Queen of Portugal.

THE FORMER QUEEN OF PORTUGAL.

The last few years have been unhappy ones indeed for the lovely and good Amelie, the former queen of Portugal. As every one knows, her husband, King Carlos, and the crown prince were assassinated while she was driving with them in the streets of Lisbon in 1908. The expulsion recently of her son, King Manuel, and the royal family from Portugal when the monarchial government was replaced by that of a republic is another bitter blow to this much tried woman.

Queen Amelie, the daughter of the Comte de Paris, was brought up in England in the utmost simplicity. Royal unions are not always love matches, but the marriage of King Carlos and Queen Amelie was an exception. There is a pretty story about this royal courtship. It seems the then Duke of Braganza was distinctly difficult to please in the choice of a wife. One day a portrait of Princess Amelie d'Orleans was placed in his way as if by accident, and the duke was immediately fascinated. Personal acquaintance increased the attraction, and eventually the young couple were married at Lisbon in 1886. The marriage proved a happy one, for the royal pair were as devoted to each other on the day of the king's death as in the first years of their union.

Until recently Queen Amelie was much beloved by the people of her adopted country. She studied medicine so as to understand hospital work and general nursing and was untiring in her efforts to improve the public health. The higher education of women enlisted her warmest support, and she was never happier than when going about incog. among the poor of Lisbon.

Queen Amelie was considered the best gowned of royal women, and she is a born milliner. In the palace there was a room set apart where hats and bonnets were continually in course of construction, and thereby hangs a pathetic story.

Once while out driving in the streets of Lisbon she observed a large crowd surrounding some object. The queen sent the footman to see what was the matter, and when he reported that a young woman had fainted she immediately left her carriage and had the unconscious girl taken to a neighboring shop and personally attended her professionally. The queen had the young woman removed to her own home, had inquiries made about her and learned the poor girl's history. She was a milliner and, having failed to get employment, had ventured to undertake work on her own account for the support of herself and her invalid mother, but with so little success that she was nearly starved.

Queen Amelie sent at once some necessaries and commanded the girl's presence at the palace. Here she received her in the workroom and handed the poor milliner three bonnets of her own creation. "Take these as models, call them 'bonnets Amelie' and tell your customers they are made after the queen's own fashioning." Her majesty wore herself one of the identical bonnets and commanded her ladies to do likewise. Within two months the once starving girl could take larger premises and today is herself an employer of over 200 women.

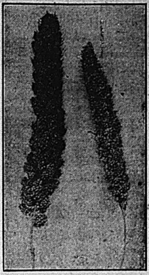
What Dr. Madison Peters Says.

Our presidents were largely accidents, called from the plain people. They made good as a rule. Almost any American can be a king. Our American women so unexpectedly called to accompany the presidents to the White House acquitted themselves with a sense of fitness, showing that any American girl can be a queen.

PREVENTING MILLET SMUT.

Soaking Seed In Solution of Formalin Prevents the Disease.

During the past year a fungous disease of millet appeared at various places in Iowa. The botanical section of the Iowa experiment station found upon investigation that the disease was millet smut, a trouble very common in the millet growing sections of Europe. It was probably imported to this country in seed brought from Germany.



HEALTHY MILLET HEAD AND ONE AFFECTED BY SMUT.

[Photograph by Iowa State college agricultural station.]

Professor Pammel finds that the disease can be prevented by soaking the seed for two hours in a solution of one pound of formalin to forty-five gallons of water.

The claims of millet as an important soiling food rest upon the fact that it is a good milk producing food, that it yields well on good land, that it may be grown as a catch crop and in hot weather in some instances after another crop has been harvested.

Its weak point as a soiling crop is the short season during which it can be fed.

When it comes to a choice between buying some new tool you need on the farm and putting the money in the bank, better buy the tool. It will help you gain the money back and save toil into the bargain.

Sorghum For Hogs.

The Alabama experiment station finds that sorghum pasture for fattening hogs has very little to recommend it. When used with corn it gave better gains than corn alone, but the gains were not profitable when the sorghum was cut and carried to the hogs. They made better gains when allowed to graze it. Excellent gains were made when the juice was extracted and fed, but for this purpose the price was worth but 1.8 cents a gallon. The expense of extracting the juice prohibits its use. In every case sorghum was much inferior to the legumes, and since it left the land poorer its use for hogs was discouraged where legumes could be grown.

Use of the Weeder.

The weeder is a very useful tool in the cultivation of potatoes when properly used. It should be run crosswise of the rows after each cultivation as long as the size of the plants will permit. It helps to pulverize the surface and destroys many of the weeds in the rows where they cannot be reached with the cultivator, thus making hand hoeing less necessary. Some growers continue to use the weeder lengthwise of the rows after the plants are too large to permit running it crosswise by removing some of the teeth from directly over the row.—American Cultivator.

Providing Early Greens.

Turnips if left in the ground will produce early greens in spring, and so will the stalks of cabbage if they are left with the roots in the ground.

Live Stock Notes.

Protection from stormy and inclement weather will make feed go further.

Clover and skimmilk are almost indispensable in the ration of the growing pig.

Provide a clean, dry bed and never allow a horse to lie on bare boards or stand in wet manure.

Save all of the garden beets that are not needed for the table and for canning to feed your pigs and dairy cows.

The ideal sheep pasture is blue grass and white clover. It makes the driest, closest sod, and dry land is best for sheep.

It never pays to starve a colt. Thirty bushels of oats will cost about $10 and be worth twice that much to any well bred colt in the winter.

Sows that come from prolific families are more certain to inherit those qualities and become good mothers than those that descend from families that are less prolific.

Here is an excellent recipe for a thoroughly good disinfectant whitewash for the stable: Crude carbolic acid in the proportion of one pound to five gallons of fresh water slaked lime wash. If possible apply with a spraying apparatus.

Relations between Japan and China are said to be strained. As the news comes through the cable correspondent's sieve, it doesnt bother me much.

EXPERIMENT FARMS' VALUE.

They Open the Eyes of Farmers to the Possibilities of Their Land.

The demonstration farm is just as necessary to the agriculturist as are the open air encampment and the sham battle to the militiaman. The reading of military tactics can never teach a man either to stand steady under fire or to capture an entrenched enemy. We know this because of the many instances where even a brief visit made by some neighboring farmer to these experimental farms has utterly changed practices which have existed for generations, practices which during some seasons have proved fairly successful and which have caused absolute failure only at intervals.

For example, shallow plowing got a black eye during the season of drought when the farmers noted the result at the experimental stations of deep plowing aided by frequent shallow cultivation, a method which kept corn green without wilt and produced a big crop of fully filled ears, to say nothing of keeping the potato plants green and healthy until a normal crop was matured.

The early planting of such extremely hardy vegetables as carrots and onions, which with them assures a good start because of the invariably copious rainfall of early spring, was only adopted when dry weather set in earlier than usual, and we by this method had assured ourselves a crop. In like manner the spraying of fruit trees annually, systematically and thoroughly was only brought about in the neighborhood by the extremely healthy appearance of the small demonstration orchards at the experimental stations, the farmers saying little, but being quick to note the dark green of the foliage and the handsome appearance and juiciness of the highly flavored fruit.—H. B. Fullerton in Craftsman.

The place of the thinking farmer is just the opposite to that of the "let well enough alone" man. The fertility of his farm, the yield of his crops and the general appearance of his place improve every year.

Dairy Doings.

Most trouble in raising calves comes from use of dirty pails and troughs. Give the calf clean water and clean food that doesn't vary in quality from day to day.

Fertility can be built up faster upon the dairy farm than upon any other kind of a farm.

Dried brewers' grains are valuable to feed with silage to milk cows or young growing stock, but cannot be recommended for fattening purposes. They should not be fed alone, but should be mixed with heavier and more concentrated feeds, like gluten and cottonseed meal.

You never can tell what cow is doing best until you begin to weigh and test.

A good cow never dies in debt to her owner.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

CURES ASTHMA

The specifics for this disease are the Ready Relief, the Resolvent and Radway's Pills. The Relief must be rubbed on the chest and throat until a burning sensation is produced, and the Pills must be taken frequently, to keep the bowels thoroughly open. The Resolvent must be given at short intervals, in small doses, and a dessertspoonful on retiring to rest. Give a teaspoonful of the Resolvent whenever a paroxysm occurs. Extraordinary cures of Asthma have been accomplished by these means.

Assets of The Farmers Bank All Depend On Keeley Mining Proposition

Toronto, Jan. 10.—The first authorized statement of the Farmers' Bank, since suspension, was handed out by G. T. Clarkson, curator and interim liquidator, yesterday. On the face of it the statement is much better than was expected. Below is an analysis of the figures.

The chief item of interest is, of course, the loan to the Keeley mine. The books are not clear as to the details of this transaction. As a current loan $321,100.14 was advanced, and an additional sum of $300,000 is charged as "call loans." Against this amount of $621,100.14 the bonds of the mine to the extent of $1,000,000 are pledged. There is, however, a further sum of $535,000 on the books of the bank as "stocks and bonds account," which appears to represent an investment covering that amount. On this point no positive information is obtainable, and it is not known, whether the $535,000 represents (as in the case of the $611,100.14) actual cash advanced, or is merely a clearing account maintained for the purpose of manipulation.

It will be observed that the curator is firm and decisive in his remarks, is seized with the responsibility of his undertaking, and will take every step to investigate to the limit in the interest of the public when the banks' officers are under examination.

The statement is as follows:

In presenting the interim statement of affairs of the Farmers' Bank of Canada, I desire to say that it is based upon the best information which I have been able to obtain up to the present time, particularly with relation to the value of its assets. The investments in the Keeley mine and real estate, together with office furniture and fixtures, are shown at the amounts charged upon the books of the bank, and being of indeterminate value cannot be valued.

It has been a physical impossibility to present this statement of affairs sooner by reason of the necessity for valuation of many assets including, as it did, consideration of the conditions surrounding them.

The branches of the bank are being closed with the approval of the board of directors to stop expenses.

In order that shareholders and creditors may not be under any misapprehension, I desire to say that they will be taken into confidence to the fullest extent, but they must realize that it takes time to ascertain the condition of affairs in a situation such as exists.

The appointment of myself as curator was made by the Canadian Bankers' Association, under the authority of a statutory right, which presented the only means available for protecting the assets of the bank for its shareholders and creditors during suspension.

The insolvency of the bank and its consequent inability to resume business having been admitted in the court by the representative of the general manager, and, subsequently confirmed by the board of directors, after certain facts had been placed before it, upon application of creditors an order, was issued by the Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell for the calling of meetings of creditors and shareholders to consider the condition of the affairs of the bank and to appoint a liquidator to wind it up.

At the present time I occupy the position of curator and inerim liquidator, and as the latter I shall seek the advice of the court upon any matters of moment that may arise.

With the appointing of the liquidator the assets and affairs of the bank will, by the terms of the Winding Up Act, pass under the direct supervision of the High Court of Justice to which the liquidator will be subject, as an officer of court, for the purpose of the winding up.

The Winding Up Act contains full provisions for examination and investigation into all matters connected with the affairs of insolvent corporations, and creditors and shareholders are, therefore, not compelled to seek other methods of procuring information, but can, as they will appreciate, rely upon the court to see that a proper and full investigation of the affairs of the bank is made, particularly as it is absolutely essential that such be undertaken in the winding up, no matter whether there are other investigations or not.

DEACON SHIRT CO'S NEW LOCATION

Have Secured Premises In The Springer Lock Company's New Building

At a meeting of the Directors of the "Springer Lock Manufacturing Company, Limited," held yesterday, that portion of the addition just erected on the south side of the factory was placed at the disposal of the "Deacon Shirt Company," whose premises were destroyed by fire on Saturday morning, until next Spring. This will enable the Deacon Company, should they not be able to secure premises elsewhere, to continue partially, their manufacturing operations until their new premises are ready for occupation.

THE EARLY LEGISLATORS OF UPPER CANADA

Ontario's First Law Makers Had No Easy Task—First Bye-Election Was Because Quaker Refused Oath of Office—Marriage Relation and Negro Slavery Were Bible Problems

It was at Kingston that John Graves Simcoe, the first Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, in the early part of the summer of 1792, organized the first government of that province. From his temporary offices in a small low dwelling house on Queen street, Kingston, and which is still standing, Simcoe appointed his legislative councillors and selected the members of the executive council or cabinet, divided the province into electoral districts, which were to return the members of the House of Assembly, and issued the proclamation calling the elections.

The proclamation was printed in Montreal by Fleury Mesplet, who was the first printer in this part of Canada, having been brought to Montreal from Philadelphia, in 1776, by Benjamin Franklin, when he came with the two other commissioners from Congress to win the Canadians to the side of the revolution.

Having failed in their mission, the commissioners returned home, but their printer, Fleury Mesplet, remained and sixteen years later he is found printing the royal proclamations for Simcoe, calling upon the pioneer yeomen of Upper Canada to choose their representatives in the first legislative assembly of that province.

In due time the elections were held, when sixteen members were returned—the full number provided by the Constitutional Act. It is a fact worthy of note that a man named Francis Baby was returned to this first Parliament as the representative of the Detroit district, "that port and settlement having not then passed from under British control." One member-elect was not seated—Philip Dorland, of Prince Edward and Adolphustown, who, being a Quaker, refused to take the oath of office.

The most serious question of the day to the settlers was that of the marriage relation. During the early years of the settlements there had been no ministers of religion in the country west of Montreal, and the marriage ceremony had been performed by military officers in command of posts, and later by justices of the peace. A carefully prepared report on the matter was drawn up by Hon. Richard Cartwright, Jr., a member of the legislative council, and the grandfather of Sir Richard Cartwright of to-day.

The report found "that the marriages of the generality of the inhabitants of Upper Canada are not valid in law." By an act passed during the second session, these marriages, contracted irregularly and without a minister of religion, because none was available, were made legally binding. The act also provided that for the future the ceremony could be performed by a justice of the peace, if the contracting parties were eighteen miles from a clergyman.

DRAINAGE SURVEYS ARE BECOMING POPULAR

That many farmers in Eastern Canada are earnestly alive to the immense advantages of tile drainage is shown by the rapidly increasing demand in Ontario for the drainage surveys made by the Physics Department of the Ontario Agricultural College. These surveys are made, and a plan given the owner of the farm, at no charge to the individual, save for the expert's travelling expenses; and, as his railroad fare is only one cent a mile, the cost of this valuable service is ridiculously low. It is certainly being appreciated. Prof. Wm. H. Day, head of the Physics Department tells us his staff has done more drainage surveying this year than in all the previous years since the work was commenced. Engaged in the work were ten field men, three draughtsmen and one supervisor, besides two stenographers kept busy with publicity work. Nor does the influence of the work end with the individuals whose farms are surveyed. Advantage is taken of the opportunity to hold local drainage meetings, with field demonstrations. One hundred and thirty-two of these have been held this year, with an average attendance of twenty-four interested auditors and spectators. Thus is the good seed sown, and thousands of additional men interested in an investment which most farmers who have experience declare will be repaid in from one to three years, depending upon the seasons, the soil and the kinds of crops raised. Prof. Day has been collecting data as to the past season's output of the tile-yards, and informed The Farmer's Advocate recently that 68 out of 15 yards had already reported. Most of these showed a larger make, the average net percentage of increase being 28.2. At this rate, the year's ouput should be about thirty-five million tile, which, if all used in field work, would drain seventy-five thousand acres.

MUST KEEP THE TARIFF UP

Hon Clifford Sifton Says Time Not Yet Come To Open Gates to the U. S.

Montreal, Jan. 10.—That the present is not the time to let down the bars of trade and turn Canada's natural resources over to the United States, was the opinion expressed at the weekly luncheon of the Canadian Club yesterday by the Hon. Clifford Sifton, chairman of the Dominion Conservation Commission, and a former member of the Laurier Government. His audience was composed of the leading bankers and business men of Montreal, as well as Senators and members of Parliament, and they cheered the sentiment to the echo. Mr. Sifton was careful to state that his views on reciprocity were simply his own, quite apart from political affiliations, and possibly out of harmony with the views of many of both great parties.

"If it's true," he said, "that it is essential in the interests of this Dominion of Canada, that we should conserve our resources, and work out carefully, painfully and slowly the best method of making them available, in order that we may have a strong, virile and well nourished population, it must be clear that this is not the time to take down the bars and turn these resources over to the United States. It would be altogether apart from my duty to discuss the political or national aspects of this question, but perhaps you will pardon me if I express my own convictions.

"It is this: If we enter upon trade relations of an extensive character with the United States, and if the same favorable anticipations which can be entertained turn out to be well founded, and our friends south of the line use us well and give us nearly everything we ask for, what is the inevitable conclusion? Must not our trade and business and very life become mixed with theirs, so that we shall become increasingly dependent upon them with the usual ultimate end of political union? And if these favorable anticipations are not realized, and they will not treat us well, and want to grab and quibble on the interpretation of any reciprocity treaty, what will that mean? It will simply means that ten or fifteen years from now we shall have to begin all over again, just where we are now, and start once again to put ourselves right.

"I do not hold with those who say that those who are opposed to a trade treaty between Canada and the United States are opposed to good relations between the two countries. On the contrary, my view is that the best way of continuing good relations between Canada and the United States is that each should do its own business independently, and have no entanglements—nothing in the world to quarrel about."

Borden Claims Misrepresentation.

Ottawa, Jan 10.—The attention of Mr. R. L. Borden was drawn to a despatch from Toronto which has been sent broadcast over Canada, and which represents Mr. Borden as having declared while in Toronto that the future of the Liberal party in Canada depended to a great extent, if not completely, upon the success or failure of the reciprocity negotiations at Washington.

Mr. Borden replied: "This is not an accurate report of my remarks. I said that a commercial treaty must necessarily be subject to Parliament for ratification; that the fate of such a treaty involves the fate of the Government which has negotiated it; that for this reason supporters of the Ministry are apt to vote for it, even if they did not approve it. I said that, for this reason, the Government ought to submit to Parliament a clear statement of the priciples upon which they propose to negotiate, and the basis upon which they intend to act, so that the country and Parliament may have an opportunity of expressing their opinion before it is too late."

MGR. GAUTHIER'S LIKELY SUCCESSOR

Several Names Mentioned -Will Likely Be From Outside The Diocese

It has not yet been definitely decided when Archbishop Gauthier will remove to Ottawa, but in the meantime rumor is busy with the name of his probable successor.

One name mentioned is Father McShane, of Montreal, while another very prominent name is Dean Morris of St. Catharines, a former classmate of Archbishop Glennon, of St. Louis, and by many said to be as brilliant a man as the distinguished St. Louis Archbishop.

A gentleman in the Kingston Diocese who is generally well informed on such matters, says his belief is that the successor of Archbishop Gauthier will probably come from outside of the diocese, and that the indications point to Dean Morris as the most likely man.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Why not sand the icy walks on all the hills in this city?

Daylight is now growing longer mornings as well as evenings.

The present condition of things naturally leads to the inquiry whether the sidewalks are intended for pedestrians or for coasters and skaters.

Bad generalship has lost many a battle after victory seemed assured. So it was with Belleville in the hockey match last night.

Truly this season is a more than old-fashioned winter. It has set a fashion for itself which, it is to be hoped will not be followed in the future.

Speaking on the 5th inst. at the Canadian Club banquet in London, Hon. Clifford Sifton said that the Conservation Commission was opposed to any reciprocity which would give away Canada's forests. They would last the United States but seven years, he said. On the question of water powers, he declared that Ontario led the way in this respect, by "legislation containing the organic principle of limited franchises and power to control," and, finally, the Government of Ontario had assumed the duty of giving its people power.

"If by an unwise treaty engagement with Washington the Government sacrifices the prospect of preference in British markets and defeats the whole movement for a fiscal union between Great Britain and the over-sea dominions, it will hold an unenviable place in history and probably mark the first step in the disintegration of the British Empire." This is the policy as enunciated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and many of his followers. Separation from Great Britain is, he has announced, his "day-dream."

ODD COMMON SENSE

CHANGE FOOD WHEN YOU FEEL OUT OF SORTS.

"A great deal depends upon yourself and the kind of food you eat," the wise old doctor said to a man who came to him sick with stomach trouble and sick headache once or twice a week, and who had been taking pills and different medicines for two or three years.

He was induced to stop eating any sort of fried food or meat for breakfast, and was put on Grape-Nuts and cream, leaving off all medicines.

In a few days heb egan to get better, and now he is entirely recovered and writes that he is in better health than he has been before in twenty years. This man is 58 years old and says he feels "like a new man all the time."

GOLDEN WEDDING AT FOXBORO

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wickett Celebrated Fiftieth Anniversary of Marriage

A very happy gathering and celebration was recorded at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wickett, Foxboro, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 3rd, when friends and relatives from far and near gathered to do honor on the auspicious occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day.

Those present were Mrs. A. N. Fox, of Wolseley, Sask.; Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Cruse and their son, Will, Winnipeg; Mr. and Mrs. G. Wooton and family, Peterboro, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wickett, residing on the old homestead; Mrs. F. H. Brown, Regina, Sask.; Mr. F. H. Wooton, Winnipeg, Man.; Mr. L. Draper, Wolseley, Sask.; and Mr. J. A. Holgate, Rev. E. C. Cragg and wife, Mrs. H. Mitchell, Mrs. R. Wickett, Mr. and Mrs. G. Wickett, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wickett, Mr. and Mrs. A. Demorest and Mrs. H. Wickett, all of Foxboro; Mr. and Mrs. H. Ashley and Miss N. Stratton, of Belleville.

Mr. Holgate acted as toastmaster, and in an eloquent address recalled many reminiscences of former days. The honored old couple were united in marriage in this vicinity and have resided in the Township of Thurlow ever since. They are successful farmers and energetic citizens. Both have for a number of years been active members of the church. Every guest gave his or her expression of warm sympathy and these, together with the many beautiful presents in evidence, were proof of the love and esteem of the household and the community at large. The many friends all join in wishing them good health and a long life with continued joy and happiness.

LONDON WILL LOSE ANOTHER OLD RELIC

Another relic of old London is about to be levelled with the dust in order to make room for modern improvements.

This is the house, No. 13, Archer Street, Soho, facing the stage door of the Lyric Theatre; a place which dates back some centuries, as testified by the sloping red-tiled roof, the old-time dormer windows and bottle glass panes.

Originally it was a farm house, surrounded by green fields and purling brooks, like the one which stood further west in what is now Farm street, Piccadilly. In more recent times this historic relic has been occupied by a metal worker, and for the last forty-five years by an art-fringe maker.

Tradition says that Charles I., on one occasion called at the farm, in 1637, and again in 1672 rumor has it that the place was granted to Henry Jermyn—he who gave his name to Jermyn street in the same neighborhood. It is possible, too, that this interesting spot may have been known to Dr. Johnston and his clubable set who used to meet in Gerrard street, close by. Certain it is that if these walls could speak they might tell of the wondrous comings and goings, of the building and demolition of Charles II's statue for instance; of the changing of names, Kings' Square—Monmouth Square—Soho Square, etc., of the disappearance of the White House and other aristocratic residences, and the coming of the Italian.

With change of time has come change of values. Once the freehold was offered for $7,500, the same sum as for which it had been bought; and for a while a bargain went begging. Now, however, things have altered; where was once open country is now the West End of London, the heart of theatre-land. Nevertheless, the County Council have taken care that the old place will not be forgotten: Photographs of the interior and the exterior have been made and a record made for future readers of by-gone London.

Many a man is kept busy acquiring the things he doesn't want.

BELLEVILLE LADY WED AT CALGARY

Ceremony Took Place at The Residence Of The Bride's Sister In That City

On Dec. 28 a quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Arnold, 124 Seventeenth avenue west, Calgary, Alta., when their sister, Tressa Watts, formerly of Belleville, and daughter of Mr. Wm. Watts, of Cannifton, was united in marriage to H. Norman Cronsberry, of the well known firm of Cronsberry Bros., of Calgary.

The bride was assisted by Miss Eva Monro, while Maurice R. Cronsberry ably supported the groom. Only immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present.

Rev. J. C. Sycamore, pastor of First Baptist Church, officiated.

HIS FUN COST HIM $10 OR TEN DAYS

James Wright's Disorderly Conduct Was Punished Severely By The Magistrate

Yesterday afternoon the police answered a call to Queen Street and arrested James Wright, who was drunk and acting in a disorderly manner. This morning he was brought up before the Magistrate, who gave him a rather severe lecture upon his conduct, and then imposed a fine of $10 and costs, or, in default, 30 days in jail at hard labor. Wright will, in all probability, serve out the sentence.

Patrick Bardy Sent to Jail For Filching an Overcoat From A Store

Patrick Bard, who on Saturday evening, December 31st, stole an overcoat from in front of Mr. Chester's store, here, was up this morning for sentence. In answer to an enquiry by the Magistrate, Bard stated that this was the first time he had ever been in jail, or had ever stole anything. He is a stranger to the police. A sentence of 30 days in jail at hard labor was imposed.

SILVER WEDDING

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Osberne, Consecon Lake, Prince Edward County, on Saturday, Dec. 31st, when they celebrated their Silver Wedding anniversary. The rooms were decorated with evergreens, silver and carnations.

A number of beautiful and useful presents were received. Among these present were friends from Hamilton, Kingston, Belleville, Toreto and Buffalo.

POLICE POINTERS

One prisoner and four weary pilgrims were last night occupants of the police cells. The latter were all young men whose ages ranged from 26 to 33 years.

OUT ON SURVEY

The Brockville Times of yesterday says: C. W. Whitney and a party of six engineers, who have been surveying the line of the Canadian Northern Railway between Belleville and Smith's Falls, arrived in town this morning from Westport and proceeded this afternoon to take up survey work on the proposed line east of Montreal.

WEDDED THE WOMAN WHOM HE RESCUED

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 9.—The wedding of Miss Lulu Leisemer, of this city, to Mr. Edwin Ellis White, geologist of the Cleveland Cliff Mining Co., will take place to-morrow morning in the rectory of St. Andrew's Episcopal church.

This is the culmination of a most romantic courtship. Miss Leisemer was a teacher in Ishpeming, where she became a great social favorite. One of her suitors, Edwin White, proposed marriage and was accepted, but she would not allow him to announce the engagement. This was not at all to White's liking but he had to be satisfied.

Another suitor paid so much attention to Miss Leisemer that there came a quarrel and Miss Leisemer gave White back the engagement ring which she had never publicly worn, saying, "Till I know my own mind better, I want you to take back this ring."

This was in May. A few days later Miss Leisemer went for a walk which passed close to the mouth of a deserted mine. White, much against her wishes, went with her. That they again discussed the question of her again accepting his ring is admitted by both. But what else was discussed neither will say. White admits that walking before her, he asked her a question, and getting no answer, turned to discover himself alone.

There was sound to tell him how or where she disappeared. He began a search that ended in his finding the girl bruised, broken and bleeding at the foot of the chasm, 125 feet below the surface. How it happened, neither of them know, but it is thought that, walking closer to the edge of the chasm than she realized, she had, in the excitement of the quarrel, stepped aside, and fallen into the pit. It was over an hour before Mr. White could get to her, and then she was unconscious, and lay in that condition, between life and death for weeks.

However she not only lived but she is nearly well of her bodily hurts, though still suffering from the shock to her nerves. She can walk, though, not for very many steps at a time, but it is said that she will recover entirely the use of her feet which were so cruelly broken, and be able to walk without the slightest limp.

The couple will leave to-morrow afternoon for Ishpeming, where they will make their home.

GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE, WEDNESDAY, JAN. 11.

"The passing of the Third Floor Back."

It is impossible to describe it. It must be seen. Its suggestiveness, its comedy, its characterization, its wonderful holding power, its brilliancy of dialogue, its great theme, its convincing atmosphere, above all, its everlasting truth. These are a few of the qualities of this "extraordinary play," which differentiate it from all others; which make it what it is admitted to be—the most daring, the most profound, the most moving work which has perhaps ever been seen upon any stage. It is no "stage play," but a living story unfolded by live people, who think and move—human creatures. There is no hero as we meet him on the stage—all virtue—no weaknesses. There is no heroine too good to be one of us. The heroine of this piece is a common slavey, but we love her, and are moved to tears by our sympathy for her. We take her to our hearts with all her frailty, for, like ourselves, she is human.

Is this an amusing play? Yes, it is filled with humor—Jerome's inimitable humor. Is it stimulating? Yes, for the characters are live people; we know know them all; we meet them every day. Is it sad? Yes, profoundly moving, but only in such a way that it leaves us full of thankfulness for such beautiful sadness. Is it interesting? Yes, for it is about YOU—all about YOU and Me, and all of us. Is it TRUE? Above all things it is TRUE, and therein lies its great power.

R. L. Borden

Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party, addressed the Canadian Club in Toronto the other day, when he tendered the Canadian people some excellent advice, of which the following is worthy not only thought, but of practicing:

"The question of your responsibility as citizens of this country," continued Mr. Borden, "is a subject to which I have devoted much attention." He spoke of the series of lectures on citizenship delivered at Yale University and trusted that some Canadian millionaire would endow a similar foundation in a Canadian university. "How do you expect to raise men, having a full responsibility of citizenship, when you don't teach it in the schools? If politics are dirty, whose fault is it? Yours. If they need cleansing, whose duty is it to clean them? Yours again. So long as the normal actions of the nation are to be vested in great political parties it is the duty of every man to ally himself to one party or the other. "How much of this do you teach your children? How much of it do we teach the immigrants from Continental Europe? I am an optimist, but I do not think it will be always well for Canada unless the full sense of responsibility is sunk deep in the breast of every citizen and into the breasts of the Canadian people."

Addressing himself to the question of wealth, he said:

"The possibilities of the increase in wealth, and the probability that it might be equally distributed, was another of Mr. Borden's topics. He said all men were born equal, but all men did not have the same opportunity of making money. Wealth that was not properly acquired was a menace to the constitutional and political life of a nation. It was in countries where there was no great wealth that the highest types of men were produced."

Failed of Their Duty

—o—

The action, or rather the inaction, of the City Council, at their inaugural meeting, with regard to the proposed investigation of the sale of city property by ex-Mayor Marsh and City Treasurer Price was distinctly disappointing.

Basing his action upon the letter of Treasurer Price asking for an investigation which was read at the meeting, Alderman Panter introduced a motion for the appointment of a committee for the purpose of holding an enquiry. On Ald. Clarke, however, raising an objection that no "specific or concrete" charge had been made in the premises, Ald. Panter's resolution was thereupon allowed to stand as a notice of motion.

This, we submit, is not such action as the Council was expected to take, or ought to have taken.

While it is technically correct to say that no "specific or concrete" charge has been formally presented to the Council, yet facts have been presented on the platform and in the press by reputable citizens with regard to the sale of city property to relatives of Messrs. Marsh and Price and the subsequent sale by those parties of the property purchased by them at a profit of some $1,600, which call loudly for investigation without further formalities. We allude particularly to the statement obtained from the Registry Office, which was first made public in the columns of The Intelligencer, and which was laid before one of the largest public meetings ever held in Belleville by ex-Mayor J. W. Johnson, M.P.P. The citizens there assembled, after hearing those facts, agreed with hardly a dissenting voice, to a resolution which requested that an investigation be held. Surely that expression of the opinion of the citizens and the letters of Mr. Harry Burrell and Mayor Ackerman are sufficiently "formal and concrete" to warrant our municipal rulers in taking the action which the citizens requested them to take.

And in justice to Treasurer Price, the investigation which he requested should be commenced without any further delay.

RIFLES ENCIRCLE BLACK HAND GANG

Attemps To Communicate With Alleged Assassins Frustrated By Authorities

VITERBO, Italy, Jan. 9.—The impenetrable walls of the prison Gardi, once the monastery of Saint Viterbo, and erected for the seclusion of the Dominican Friars, now hold with seeming security thirty-two members of the dreaded Camorra, whose trial next month for the murder of traitorous associates, is expected to test the strength and influence in high places of the most resourceful of criminal organizations.

Since the prisoners were brought here Saturday from Naples, the authorities have realized that comrades in the "Honorable Society" would not hesitate to adopt desperate measures to free Chief Enrico Alfano and his companions if they could foresee the slightest chance of success.

Detachments of carabineers surround the prison. Sunday passed without incident, but the stillness of night was broken frequently by a series of whistle calls, sounding at times as though from a considerable distance, and again seeming to rise from within the dungeon enclosure. In these the guards recognized the familiar signals of the Camorrists, who thus sought to establish communication with their imprisoned friends. According to the director of the prison the attempt failed. It had been anticipated and the criminals were purposely placed in cells opening on the cloisters of the ancient monastery and into which no sound from the outside could reach.

The prisoners are accused of the murder of James Cuccola and his wife, and have been pending trial for more than three years. On their behalf it has been boasted that such was the power of the Camorra that they would never be convicted in the courts of Italy. The minister of Justice has declared that the band of assassins and robbers must be wiped out.

YOUNG METHODISTS

Under the direction of the Devotional Department of the Epworth League, last evening, President Arthur Marsh spoke in the capacity of District Secretary as well, regarding greater service in the Master's vineyard. A fitting climax to the meeting was an earnest exhortation by Rev. Dr. Bishop as to one's responsibility and privilege.

DEATH OF AN AGED LADY

Mrs. Smith B. Russell, a resident of Rednersville, Prince Edward county, passed away this morning as the result a stroke of paralysis she was the victim of some time ago. Deceased, who was in her 78th year, was a life-long resident of the adjoining county and a lady who was esteemed by all who knew her. She was a member of the Anglican church. In addition to an aged partner in life, two sons, James H. and Smith B., of Rednersville, and one daughter, Mrs. J. P. Hunt, of Indianapolis, survive.

Past Help.

The man with the old clock under his arm laid it on the jeweler's showcase. "I wish you'd see what is the matter with this," he said.

The jeweler removed the dial, screwed his eyeglasses into place and inspected the works of the ancient timepiece.

"Nothing is the matter with it now. Its sufferings are over."

"Well, how much do I owe you?" asked the man.

"Nothing," answered the jeweler. "This isn't a professional treatment. This is a coroner's inquest."—Youth's Companion.

Counter Case.

Upon being called in the police court at Asheville, N. C., charged with an assault upon a clerk at a soda water fountain, the defendant arose and said, "Your honor, I am guilty, but I plead a counter case," whereupon the aforesaid clerk arose and replied: "Your honor, the counter didn't have anything to do with it. I walked around the counter before I struck him."—Case and Comment.

George Was Not the Only One.

"Come in this evening and our daughter will play and sing some of her own compositions."

"All right."

"Why so?"

KING GEORGE AND THE PRESS

His Majesty Inquires As To Arrangements Being Made for Them at The Coronation

King George evidently does not harbor any ill feeling against the press, for although the coronation is still six months off, he has already made inquiries as to what arrangements are being made for the convenience of the press representatives on coronation day, adding that he remembers that they were rather badly handicapped at his father's coronation through lack of suitable accommodation.

As a result of the King's interest in the matter a well-known journalist has been placed in charge of the press arrangements, and as soon as he has mapped out his plans, he has been commanded to attend an audience at Buckingham Palace to lay his scheme before the King, who has further intimated that he wants the representatives of foreign newspapers to enjoy the same privileges as their English colleagues. A representative of the London Society of Foreign Journalists, has, therefore, been appointed to co-operate with the English newspaper man in charge.

The whole of Westminster Abbey is to be closed to the public from about the middle of February and will then be handed over by the Cathedral Authorities to the Office of Works, which will then arrange for the necessary seating accommodation. At the coronation of King Edward seats for about seven thousand people were provided in the Abbey, but the number will have to be increased upon this occasion, since King George has expressly intimated that he desires room to be found for the members of the House of Commons and their ladies, and seats for these will be probably provided by the erection of galleries in the Edward the Confessor Chapel. Under any circumstances the accomodation will be taxed to the untmost, and many of those who receive the much-coveted "commands" will find themselves unable to obtain anything like a complete view of the ceremony. The sham Gothic annex to the Abbey, which was built for the last coronation will be erected again. This acts as a convenient place where the procession can be marshalled; while provision is also made for retiring rooms for the King and Queen and the Royal Princes who will attend on this occasion.

MOUNT SINAI HAS BEEN DISCOVERED

Dr. Musil, an Explorer, Is Said to Have Discovered the Biblical Mount

A London despatch says: One of the most active explorers in Arabia this year is Dr. Alois Musil, who, with a commission from the Turkish Government, left Vienna in April last for Northern Arabia. With Dr. Musil were a geologist, Dr. Leopold Kober, and a cartographer, Herr Rudolph Thomasberger.

Dr. Musil and his two companions succeeded in carrying out many important explorations and other scientific work. Besides collecting a great deal of linguistic, ethnological and geological material, the explorers gathered many plants and insects. It was found impossible to use a theodolite, but the mapping was effected by a plane-table and compass. A thorough examination of the little known area extending from Maan southward to El Gaw, and from the Red Sea eastward to Teima and the Wadi Sisham was also effected.

Dr. Musil believes that the main result of his journey is the identification of the famous Biblical Mount Sinai, a mountain about whose precise whereabouts a great controversy has been raging for some time. Some eminent writers and geographers—the most important among them being the famous Sir R. Burton—hold that it is futile to try to discover the exact spot where the mountain is situated, as all attempts at identification are necessarily vain. Nevertheless, those who do not doubt that it is possible to discover its identification declare that Mount Sinai is in the Sinai peninsula in the vicinity of Elath, and it is this very region which was explored by Dr. Musil and his party.

OUR NEW ALDERMAN

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—I read with interest the report of the opening proceedings of the new Council, as reported and published in The Intelligencer of last night, and would like to know, if you can tell me, what position Alderman Clarke occupies on the question of the sale of city tax lots. I find in the report that he seconded a motion made by Alderman Panter, "that the special committee recommended to be appointed by the Mayor, re sale of lots, be dealt with immediately."

And then, upon Alderman Panter moving for said committee, Alderman Clarke asked for delay on the ground "that no charges have been made in a concrete form." One would suppose that the resolution passed at the public meeting was "concrete" enough.

Does Alderman Clarke want to burk the inquiry?

Yours,

THE BELTED PLAID.

This Was the Original Dress of the Scottish Highlander.

The original dress of the highlander was the belted plaid. This was a piece of tartan cloth, two yards broad and four long, which was drawn around the waist in nicely adjusted folds and tightly buckled with a belt. The lower part came down to the knees in much the same manner as the modern kilt, while the upper part was drawn up and adjusted to the left shoulder, so that the right arm might be perfectly free. This upper part was the plaid, which was used as a covering for the shoulders and body in wet weather, and when the use of both arms was required it was fastened across the breast with a brooch, often curiously enriched. A brooch was also used to fasten the plaid on the left shoulder. To attire himself in the belted plaid required on the part of the highlander no small amount of dexterity. The usual way was to lay it on the floor and after carefully arranging the folds to lie down upon it and then buckle it on. The lower end was fastened at the right hip. The utility of such a dress in the highlands is obvious, for the plaid rendered the man indifferent to storms and prepared to pass a night in the open air in the most inclement weather, while the loose undergarment enabled him to wade rivers or ascend mountains with equal ease. It was thus peculiarly adapted to the warrior, the hunter and the shepherd.—London Mail.

The Art of Carpentry.

How many common figurative expressions in our language are borrowed from the art of carpentry may be seen from the following sentence: "The lawyer who filed the bill, shaved the note, cut an acquaintance, split a hair, made an entry, got up a case, framed an indictment, impaneled a jury, put them into a box, nailed a witness, hammered a judge and bored a whole court, all in one day, has since laid down law and turned carpenter."

Contrary Human Nature.

"I suppose it is our natural contrariness which makes us do such paradoxical things."

"Such as what?"

"As makes us long for things when we are short."—Baltimore American.

The Grafting Gent.

No busy little grafter
Will pause to think about
The sure and stern hereafter
When he will be found out.
He revels in the clover
While reveling is grand,
And when his day is over
He squeals to beat the band.

When things are coming easy
With gratifying haste
He is a creature breezy
And frank and open faced.
You cannot help admiring
His free and easy way
As with a zeal untiring
He shakes your hand away.

And in the twists and turnings,
The dodging here and there,
He looks upon his earnings
As strictly on the square.
And should we call in question
The things that he has done
He looks on the suggestion
As an insulting one.

When after years of plunder
The people call his stuff
And get him, for a wonder,
Red handed with the stuff
He thunders forth defiance
At those who make the move
And places his reliance
On what they cannot prove.

ANAEMA AND WEAKNESS

CONSTANTLY BEING CURED BY VINOL...AN INTERESTING CASE REPORTED.

Greensboro, N. C.—"I would not take a thousand dollars for the good Vinol has done me.

"I was told that cod liver oil was the medicine I needed for poor blood and my weakened condition. I could not take the greasy mixture, but when the druggist explained to me that Vinol contained all the medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil without the grease and tonic iron added, I made up my mind that Vinol was the medicine for me.

"I tried it, and to-day am strong and well."—Mrs. T. J. Snider. (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.) Vinol is a specific for impure, impoverished blood and it is the greatest tonic we know of.

We sell Vinol always with the understanding that if the purchaser is not satisfied with the result it gives we will cheerfully refund his money. That seems fair. J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

He turned quickly towards the door. Mrs. Vansittart, very pale, with eyes that looked unnaturally large in the faint light, stood there. For an instant he was startled. He had not seen Mrs. Vansittart since they came to the rock, and he was shocked by the change in her appearance. He did not like her. His alert intelligence distrusted her. But it was not his business in life to select a wife for his uncle, as he put it, and he had always treated her with respectful politeness. Now, owing to some fleeting aspect which he could not account for, some vague resemblance to another which he did not remember having noticed before, he viewed her with a certain expectant curiosity that was equally unintelligible to him.

She held out a scrap of paper.

"Mr. Traill is here," she said quietly.

"Here!" he repeated, wondering what she meant, and perplexed by her icy, self-contained tone, whilst he thought it passing strange that she had no other greeting for him.

"Well," she said, "that is the best word I can find. He is near to us, as near as a steamer can bring him. Mr. Brand has received a signaled message; he wrote it out and sent it to me by a man. I inquired where you were, and was told you were engaged in the kitchen."

For some reason Mrs. Vansittart seemed to be greatly perturbed. Her presence put an and to the gaiety of the place quite effectually.

The young man took the paper in silence.

He read: "Dear Madam—a signal just received from the Falcon runs as follows:—'Mr. Cyrus J. Traill is on board and sends his love to Etta and Charlie. He will make every preparation for their comfort ashore and trusts they are bearing up well under inevitable hardships.' Yours faithfully, Stephen Brand."

Pyne strode to the door.

"I must see if I can't get Mr. Brand to answer the old boy," he cried. "Perhaps you have attended to that already."

She did not make way for him to pass.

"No," she said. "I came to seek you on that account. If not too late, will you tell your uncle that I do not wish to delay a moment in Penzance. He will please me most by arranging for a special train to await our arrival at the station."

"What's the hurry?" he demanded.

"A woman's whim, if you like, but a fixed resolve, nevertheless."

"Will you travel in that rig-out?" he asked quizzically.

"It is an easy matter to call at a shop if we reach shore by daylight. Then I can purchase a cloak and hat to serve my needs. Otherwise, it is matterless how I am attired. Will you do this?"

"Why, certainly."

She gave a little gasp of relief. In another instant Pyne would have gone, but Enid, who happened to glance through the window which opened towards the northwest, detained him.

"There's no hurry now for sure," she said. "The Falcon is half way to Carn du by this time. I do not suppose she will return until it is too dark to do more than signal important news very briefly."

"But this is important," cried Mrs. Vansittart shrilly. "It is of the utmost importance to me."

"'Fraid it can't be helped ma'am," said Pyne civilly. "Anyhow we're not ashore yet, and I can't see that any time will be wasted."

The electric bell jangled in the room, causing Mrs. Vansittart to jump visibly.

"Oh, what is it?" she screamed.

"My father is calling one of us up," explained Constance. "It may be a message from Jack. You go, Enid."

Enid hurried away. She had scarcely reached the next floor before Mrs. Vansittart, who seemed to have moods in full compass, said sweetly:

"Convey my deep obligations to Mr. Brand, won't you, Charlie. Indeed, you might go now and write out the text of my message to your uncle. Some early opportunity of despatching it may offer."

"All right," he said in the calm way which so effectually concealed his feelings. "Shall I escort you to your room?"

"By no means. I came here quite unassisted. Miss Brand and I can chat for a little while. It is most wearying to be pent all day and all night in one little room. Even the change to another little room is grateful."

Pyne bowed, and they heard his steady tread as he ascended the stairs.

"Quite a nice boy, Charlie," said Mrs. Vansittart, coming forward into the kitchen, with its medley of queer-looking, hissing, steaming contrivances.

"Yes. We think he is exceedingly nice," said Constance. She wondered why the other woman seemed always to stand in the shadow, by choice. The strongest light in the darkened chamber came from the grate, and Mrs. Vansittart deliberately turned away from it.

"If all goes well he will soon be my nephew by marriage," went on the other. "I quitted New York yesterday week in order to marry his uncle in Paris. Rather a disastrous beginning to a new career, is it not?"

"I hope not, indeed. Perhaps you are surmounting difficulties at the commencement rather than at the end."

"It may be. I am so much older than you that I am less optimistic. But you did not grasp the significance of my words. I said I was to be married in Paris."

"Yes," said Constance, still at a loss to catch the drift of an announcement which Mrs. Vansittart seemed so anxious to thrust upon her.

"Well, the Chinook was wrecked last night, or rather early this morning. The name of the ship was not made known throughout the world until long after daybreak. It is quite impossible that Mr. Traill should have reached this remote corner of England from Paris in the interval."

For one moment the girl was puzzled. Then a ready solution occurred to her.

"Oh, of course, that is very simple. Mr. Traill was awaiting your arrival in Southampton, thinking to take you by surprise no doubt. That is sure to be the explanation. What a shock the first telegram must have given him!"

"How did he ascertain that his nephew and I were alive?"

"The very first thing father did was to telegraph the names of all the survivors. I know that is so because I saw the message."

"Ah. He is a man of method, I suppose. You are proud of him, I heard you say."

"I think there is no one like him in all the world. We are so happy at home that sometimes I fear it cannot last. Yet, thank God, there is no excuse for such night-mare terrors."

Mrs. Vansittart cooed in her gentle way.

"Indeed you have my earnest good wishes in that respect," she said. "Do we not owe our lives to you? That is an excellent reason for gratitude, if a selfish one. But, some day soon, you will be getting married and leaving the parental roof."

"I do not wish to die an old maid," laughed Constance, "yet I have not discovered a better name than my own up to the present."

She fancied that Mrs. Vansittart winced a little at this remark. Deeming her visitor to be a bundle of nerves she jumped to the conclusion that the other woman read into the words some far-fetched disparagement of her own approaching marriage.

"Of course," she continued, affably tactful, "I will hold another view when the right man asks me."

"Were you in my place," murmured her visitor, apparently thinking aloud rather than addressing Constance, "you would not be fearful of misfortune? You would not read an omen of ill luck into this dramatic interruption of all your plans? After many years of widowhood I am about to be married again to a man who is admirable in every way. He is rich, distinguished in manner and appearance, a person of note not only in the States but on the Continent. No woman of my years might desire a better match. Why could not the way be made smooth for me? Why should the poor Chinook, out of the hundreds of mail-steamers which cross the Atlantic yearly be picked out for utter disaster? It is a warning—a threat from the gods!"

The unconscious bitterness of her tone moved the girl to find words of consolation.

"I would not question the ways of Providence in the least," she said. "Surely you have far more reason for thankfulness than for regret."

"Regret! I am not regretting. But I have gone through such trials that I am unnerved. There, child! Forgive me for troubling you. And—and—kiss me, will you, and say you wish me well!"

She moved nearer, as if driven by uncontrollable impulse. Constance, not prepared for such an outburst, was nevertheless deeply touched by this appeal for sympathy.

"I wish you all the joy and happiness which I am sure you deserve," she said, stooping to kiss the wan, shrinking face held up to her.

Mrs. Vansittart burst into a paroxysm of tears and tottered towards the door.

"No, no," she gasped, as Constance caught her by the arm. "Do not come with me. I am—shaken. It will pass. For God's sake, let me go alone!"

CHAPTER XII.

PREPARATIONS

Pyne found Enid rosy-red and inclined to be tearful. The dying light of day was still strong enough in the service-room to permit these things to be seen.

"No bad news, I hope?" he inquired though the sight of Stephen Brand, seated at his desk and placidly writing, was reassuring.

The question steadied her to an extent.

"It is nothing of any consequence," she said and darted past him.

Brand looked up from his journal. He smiled, though the American thought there was a hint of pain in his eyes.

"I am going to lose one of my girls," he said. "Oh, no, this is not a loss by death but by marriage. If I were a Frenchman, I would describe it as gaining a son. Enid has just received what is tantamount to a proposal."

"By flag-wagging?" Pyne was naturally astounded.

"Yes. You would not expect one of the people from the Chinook to be so enterprising."

"I—don't—know," said Pyne, punctuating each word with a deliberate nod.

"Well, in any case, I would not have forwarded the application after an acquaintance of eighteen hours," observed Brand, with equal deliberation.

"They're two powerful fine girls," said Pyne, steering clear of the point. "They have just been telling me how Miss Enid happened along. It reads like a fairy tale."

"She was given to me by the winds and waves, yet she is dear to me as my own child. I shall miss her greatly—if all goes well here."

"I've cottoned on to both of them something wonderful. But, if I am not intruding into private affairs, how comes it that Miss Enid is being telegraphed for? Of course I can understand the gentleman being in a hurry. I would feel that way myself if the conditions were favorable."

Pyne could be as stolid as a red Indian when the occasion demanded it. Brand found no hint in his face of the hidden thought in his words.

"Have they said anything to you of a man named Stanhope?" inquired the lighthouse-keeper, resuming the entry in his diary after a sharp glance upwards.

"Y-yes. They pointed him out to me this morning. In the navy, I think. Fellow with a title, and that sort of thing."

"No. His mother is Lady Margaret Stanhope, being an earl's daughter, but his father was a knight. He has been paying attentions to Enid for a year and more, to my knowledge and to his mother's exceeding indignation, I fancy."

"That is where we on the other side have the pull of you."

"Have you? I wonder. However, Lady Margaret's views have not troubled me. I will deal with her when the time comes. At present it looks fairly certain that Master Jack has settled matters on his own account. I may be mistaken, of course. How do you interpret this?"

It Might Have Happened Otherwise.

An old Pennsylvania German living in the mountains had a hard three hours' dusty walk to accomplish one morning, and he arose very early to make his start. He had gone but a little way when he was overtaken by an automobile, which was probably the first that had ever passed along that way. The driver picked up the old man, and they were at his destination in about twenty minutes.

Not at All Private.

In the trial of a case recently in one of the English courts a witness was asked to repeat a conversation that she had with her husband. Objection was made that the question should not be answered because the conversation was private in its nature. The judge then asked the witness whether anybody except herself and husband was present. She replied that her mother and the husband's mother were, whereupon the judge remarked: "It appears that both mothers-in-law were present. I shall therefore rule that the conversation was public."

All Provided For.

"Before I come to call on you steady," said the young man with the low cap, "I want to know if you have got a kid brother?"

"Yes, I've got one," said the girl with the gum habit, "but maw said if I'd only ketch a steady she'd snake the kid out of the way on courtin' nights."—Boston Herald.

IS A GREAT MUSICIAN

SIR EDWARD ELGAR IS ENGLAND'S LEADING COMPOSER.

The Man Who Dominates Music In Britain To-day Looks More Like an Army Officer Than a Writer of Symphonies—He Had Little Help When He Was a Boy and Was Forced to Struggle Hard.

At the first concert this winter of England's leading musical society—the Philharmonic—Fritz Kriesler, one of the world's leading violinists, played a new concerto by England's leading composer, Sir Edward Elgar. "An Admirer" contributed the following article to The London Daily Mail:

The personality of Sir Edward Elgar dominates English music to-day, and yet at the first glance you would never take him for a musician. There are none of the traditional trappings of the composer about him—no long hair, or velvet coat, or flowing tie. Such things he despises as affectations. One should be a man first and a musician afterwards, so he thinks. With his closely-cut iron-grey hair and his military-looking moustache, you would probably set Elgar down as a retired colonel or a distinguished lawyer or politician — anything, in fact, but a composer. And yet a second glance will make you feel that you are looking at a very remarkable face—the face of a great thinker, with the eyes of a visionary. Such is Elgar to the outside; the man as his friends know him would require many pages. To strangers he appears as a reserved, almost taciturn man, but there never was a more charming and genial companion to those who know and understand him.

Apart from his great musical gifts, Elgar has a remarkable personality, and as a matter of fact there never was a composer who talked less about his work. You might chat with him for hours, and, if you did not know, would never suspect him of being a musician. On science, politics, literature, and other subjects he has many things to say that are worth the saying but he has a special aversion to talking "shop" about music, and there are, indeed, not a few people who have met with unmistakable rebuffs when they have tried to get his views on certain musical questions.

Elgar has the gift of attracting people; his circle of friends could be many times larger if he wished it. He is gifted with a delightful vein of humor, and is never so happy as when he is telling or listening to a good joke. Many an orchestral player can tell you of his dry humor at rehearsals, and they could also tell you of scathing remarks when things go wrong, for he is somewhat quick-tempered and severe on incompetence.

He likes a country life. For years he lived on the beautiful Malvern Hills, and now he has a house in a charming spot on the outskirts of Hereford Town. He has no hobbies, but is clever at a good many things. Like Caruso, he is gifted with the pencil and is an excellent caricaturist. Some time ago chemistry took up some of his spare time. But now, apart from his work and social relaxation, his time is spent in the country, for which he has always has a passionate fondness, and golf is almost his only relaxation.

Elgar's career has been an extraordinary one. He has won his way to the front rank against many adverse circumstances. As a boy in Worcester he was without money and influence and cut off from the musical world. He had to fall back upon his own resources. But there were books, and he and one or two other boys (now well-known citizens of Worcester) met almost daily, and were wont to talk of things which were far outside the humdrum philosophy of the old cathedral city's life.

Elgar has often jokingly said that the only music lesson he ever got was one given him by his father when he was eight years old. The boy was sitting one day at the table with a piece of paper on which he had ruled some lines. "What are you doing?" said Elgar senior. "Writing music," was the reply. "Well, don't you know that music is written on five lines, not four lines?" was the father's comment on seeing that his little son (doubtless having seen some Gregorian music on four lines had only ruled four lines on his piece of paper.) If his boyhood, indeed, had been spent in a more musical centre, doubtless Elgar would have been made a prodigy, for at fifteen he was writing music, and before that age he was a good player on the organ and violin.

In a way this exclusion from the musical world in earlier life has made him the individual force in music that he is, for his genius was free to mature unhindered by outside influences. But it meant twenty years' work, with scarcely any recognition till the end of that time. Everything in music Elgar has taught himself, and perhaps one of the secrets of his success, as in so many other cases, is that industry which is certainly the hand-maid of genius. Elgar has always been a marvellously quick worker. Erratic, he may do nothing for months, and then, when the creative impulse seizes him, work day and night to set down his ideas.

It is obviously impossible to attempt anything like a final estimate of Elgar's ultimate position as a composer. But no English musician has ever attracted so much attention, both at home and abroad, by his music. He is one of the half-dozen composers of to-day whose new works are awaited all the world over with eagerness. Individuality and sincerity are the two great essentials of his music. From every page of his music one can tell its authorship, and every page we feel is written as the outcome of a genuine emotion, and not in any way manufactured. In some ways Elgar has not been an innovator in music, and has not opened up new spheres like Strauss or Debussy. He has been content to take the musical apparatus largely as it was left by composers before him. But with this he has created music that is absolutely and entirely individual to himself.

A dentist may not be a society man, but he is right at home in a drawing room.

We want every person who is suffering from any skin injury or disease to personally prove the merits of Zam-Buk.

Read the experience of these three persons—possibly one of them may be well known to you—and then make it a personal matter. If you cut out this advertisement, write across it the name of this paper and mail it to us with a 1c stamp (to pay return postage) we will send you a trial box of Zam-Buk free!

Zam-Buk is a proved cure for eczema, ulcers, abscesses, poisoned sores, chapped hands, cold sores, eruptions, cuts, bruises, burns, scalp sores, babies' chafed or chapped places, and all skin injuries and diseases. It also cures piles. All druggists and stores sell at 50c., or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

What Followed a Scratch.

Mrs. Brown 7 Calumet Ave., Montreal, says:—"While busy in the kitchen one day the oven door fell off, striking my right leg and inflicting a nasty scratch. While this was painful, I never thought it would become a serious wound, but to my surprise it became very much inflamed and very painful. I found that the dye from my stocking had got into it and poisoned it. The pain and inflammation got worse and the wound discharged freely. At this stage someone advised me to try Zam-Buk and I obtained a supply. This balm seemed to draw out the soreness at once, reduced the inflammation and soothed the wound. I naturally persevered with Zam-Buk and within a few weeks the wound was quite healed."

Eczema Banished.

To be covered with sores which sometimes itch and burn and then, when rubbed, cause acute agony—sores which look repulsive as well as cause pain—sores which have defied all remedies that have been applied to them—what could be worse? Yet this is the lot of scores of people to-day who suffer from that terrible disease Eczema. To all such sufferers we will send trial box of Zam-Buk free! Write us, sending 1c stamp to pay return postage.

Mr. Wm. D ngerfield, 928 Lipton St., Winnipeg, says: "Last winter I suffered from Eczema. After trying lotions, salves and powders given me by the doctor, which failed to do me any good, I tried Zam-Buk. This proved equal to my case and cured me."

Use as a Household Balm.

Mrs. W. Blair, 91 St. Catharine St., Hamilton, speaks of the value of Zam-Buk as a household balm. She says:—"I one day slipped and fell against a Morris rocker, knocking my knee very badly. The knee turned black and blue and was very painful. I rubbed Zam-Buk well into the injured member and it was indeed surprising how quickly I found relief. The swelling was soon reduced and pain and discoloration banished. By perseverance with Zam-Buk my injured knee was well again in a couple of days.

"I have since proved it to be the handiest and best balm for household purposes. A few applications of Zam-Buk gave me ease from rheumatism also."

A REGAL HEAD

How often do we see or hear this expression used in describing a beautiful woman!

Denude that head of its hair and instead of a queenly royal bearing we have a fright. The hair makes all the difference. To have that glorious abundance of radiant hair which always crowns a "regal head" one should use Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide represents the last word in scientific hair culture. It destroys the dandruff germ, checks falling hair and corrects generally, diseases of the hair and scalp.

The positive results and its delicate but refreshing odor recommends Newbro's Herpicide to ladies of refinement everywhere.

Send 10c. in postage for sample bottle of Herpicide and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

THE TURKISH BATH

A Victim's Story of the Real Thing In Its Native Land.

WELL MAULED AND SCRAPED.

He Was Kneaded, Plucked, Turned Over and Walked Upon and Then Scrubbed as Though He Were a Kitchen Floor.

The tourist who wanders about Stamboul will from time to time come on domed buildings of all sizes which might be taken for mosques but that they seem to have no fountains and no minarets. From some place, such as the terrace of the mosque of Sultan Sulayman, where their roofs may be overlooked, it will be seen that the low domes are often of a peculiar salmon pink color and always covered with glass bullseyes. These are the real Turkish baths.

Quite apart from the ceremonial wash before prayer, Islam, which considers cleanliness not so much next to godliness as a part of godliness itself, ordains a periodical scrub all over. And the Turk, unlike the sodden west, never sits in hot water, but prefers a hot room, a tap and a basin as a minimum and a shampooer and a flesh glove if he can afford such luxuries.

One enters, as in the west, into the cooling room, generally a high domed room with many galleries around, a marble floor and a fountain, and before going to a private room or, if the bath is to be done on the cheap, to a place on the big common sofas one exchanges dirty boots for slipshod heelless slippers. Watch and valuables may be left under the care of the cooling room attendant, who superintends the process of undressing, winds a loin cloth around one and throws a primrose towel over one's shoulders. Before crossing the floor of the cooling room the slippers are again exchanged for wooden clogs, wherein the novice walks like Agag, delicately, in fear of a fall, till he learns to imitate the speed of the bath men by abandoning all attempts to walk and executing a fast shuffle.

The outer hot room, at about the temperature of an English shampooing room, is a very secondary affair. One stays there for a little, still clothed in the primrose towel, reclining on a distant imitation of a bed, drinking coffee and smoking a cigarette, perhaps watching a couple of shampooers amusing themselves by a wrestling bout. The customer and the shampooer wear the same type of loin cloth, an elaborate check of red and yellow that may be seen any day in the streets on an apron worn by the Albanian sellers of chestnuts or sweetmeats.

If that cigarette is finished come into the inner room, heavy with damp heat, the real bath. The attendant pulls off the shoulder towel and opens the door, a heavy wooden affair, kept shut by a counterweight, whose banging is not the least characteristic noise in the bath. Inside is a large square domed room. Innumerable bullseyes in the dome admit the light, which the whitewashed walls reflect, making a light and airy effect. On the great square slab in the middle they have placed a towel and a pillow, and here one lies, leaving the clogs on the floor.

Round the room, screened from one another by dwarf walls, are a row of marble basins, and here may be seen all classes—such is the democracy of Islam—from the army officer to the day laborer, whose shaved head oddly suggests a tonsure. The poorer classes do not indulge in the luxury of massage. They come for a wash only and often bring their own soap for economy's sake. It is not uncommon to see two of them scrubbing one another by turns.

Presently, unbidden, the shampooer mounts the slab and squats beside his victim. Most of his work consists in kneading the flesh rather than the long, heavy strokes of an English masseur. But when the customer is turned on his face the masseur becomes more energetic. He plucks the skin on each side of the spine, walks up and down on the back and strenuously gathers up arms and legs into curious bone breaking knots regardless of the grunts of the stiff jointed west. A final super-Gordian knot and the clapping of his hands show that it is over.

The customer, as soon as he can collect limbs which seem to have been pulled clean off him, adjourns to one of the basins and is rubbed with a rough glove to take off the old skin. Then the man brings a battered metal bowl ("old bowl, old bath," is the Turkish proverb for "the old, old story") with soap and a lather wisp of "lyf" (Mecca palm fiber, and scrubs conscientiously for some ten minutes, working with the abandon of a zealous housemaid on a floor, forgetful apparently that the object he is scrubbing is flesh and blood.

Finally he pours warm water from the bowl to wash away the last of the soapsuds and, if the bath is a large and up to date one, conducts his well scrubbed victim to a cold douche.

Drying takes place in the outer hot room, sundry loin cloths and towels are wrapped about the body, a small towel makes a turban for the head and clean clogs are produced for the feet, which have been dried with great—sometimes inconveniently great—care. A loud clapping of hands announces that the process is over, and the three or four Turks who seem always to be doing nothing zealously in the room crowd round to wish one good health.—London Globe.

Force of Habit.

In the furniture department of a big store chiffoniers with a patent drawer that could be opened without pulling it out were on exhibition. All day long the clerk packed and unpacked the drawers of that chiffonier, showing how easy it was to stow away gloves, veils, blouses and men's shirts and collars. During one of the demonstrations the manager of the department stopped to watch him.

"Why don't you distribute things a little more evenly?" he asked. "Why do you devote the four top drawers to women's apparel and chuck everything belonging to men in the bottom drawer?"

"I guess," said the clerk, "I did it from force of habit. You see, I have been married for fifteen years, and I forgot there was any place except the bottom drawer for a man to put his clothes."

Opals.

Opals are so sensitive that their beauty is frequently destroyed by their wearer's proximity to an open fire. The lustre of this stone is caused by the presence of myriads of little fissures, which deflect the light into the characteristic prismatic color of the gem. The tiniest of these fissures is likely at any moment to destroy the stone.

Asiatic Turkey.

Asiatic Turkey had a civilization thousands of years ago. The interior of that country is populated to-day by farmers to whom modern knives and works are unknown; the spoons they use are of wood, and each family makes its own.

Farm and Garden

RICE IN ARKANSAS.

Coming to Be One of the Most Important of Southern Cereals.

Of all the records of wonderful progress made in the south in the last two decades, says a writer in Kimball's Dairy Farmer, none is more interesting or more indicative of growth along right lines than that of successful development in the ricefields of eastern Arkansas.

Along the cotton belt route in the Grand prairie and lesser contiguous prairies of Arkansas today are the visible evidences of a new prosperity more marvelous and more substantial than any one who knew conditions there six years ago could have dreamed of as being possible. This has been achieved neither by miracle nor mere chance. It has been brought about by the intelligent use and employment of the ordinary means at hand. No one has ever charged that in the distribution of so called natural advantages Arkansas was accorded more than her share. Many have voiced the belief that in the general allotment Arkansas was forgotten. In the light of recent developments in that state, as elsewhere, it may not be too early to predict that the time is coming when men will realize that in their estimate of physical or natural assets they have often made their inventories on a false hypothesis.

Rice, as is well known, cannot be grown without an abundant water supply. Farmers who have attempted to raise it have started out with this knowledge and in facing the problem squarely have solved it. A rice farm equipped with wells with a sufficient flow to flood the ricefields becomes immediately a high class corn, truck, fruit and stock farm. Think what it means to have under absolute control an unceasing supply of pure water. Trenches carry it by gravitation to any portion of the land. With it a corn crop is helped over a temporary drought. An occasional wetting insures a splendid return from the truck patch, and with water always at hand cows almost double the quantity and more than double the quality of milk produced.

THRASHING RICE.

But all these are really secondary considerations with the Arkansas rice farmer. He has his eye on the main chance. It is to raise rice, which is coming to be one of the most important of southern cereals.

Save the Chunks.

You can find many chunks of wood about the farm. Save them all for the stove. Big knots can be used in the "chunk" stove, and how they will make it laugh on a cold, stormy day next winter! Even pieces that are a little decayed will burn nicely if they are well dried. Save them all.

> The use of fine stock on the average farm is only the exercise of good judgment.

The Hum of the Hive.

Don't keep bees unless you mean to give them the proper care and attention.

Never at any time should honey be left open around the apiary, for it always leads to robbing.

Bees cannot carry on their wonderful work without water. If they have not access to natural sources in the vicinity of the apiary, water should be given to them.

A thousand colonies of bees are used annually in the cucumber greenhouses of Massachusetts to carry fertilizing pollen. There are 2,100 persons in the state who keep bees.

Taking off honey is easy and simple with the right equipment, which includes inexpensive tools—a bee smoker, bee veil, chisel or knife for a hive tool or pry and perhaps bee gloves or wristlets.

Bees like to work better, probably, than any other living thing. They are perfectly willing to work for nothing, board themselves and pay handsomely for the privilege of occupying an old box. There is room for a few hives of bees on every farm. Fruit, poultry and bees make a splendid combination when properly mixed.—Farm Press.

LEFT-HANDED BARBERS.

There Are Some, Just as There Are Left-Handed Men In All Trades.

"Are there any left handed barbers? Why, certainly," said the boss. "Aren't some of the greatest baseball pitchers left-handed? I have personally known two, and they were both excellent workmen.

"One of these men always stropped a razor with his left hand, but he shaved with his right, and then cut hair with his left. The other man used his left hand throughout, in stropping, shaving and hair cutting.

"You might think that being left-handed would be an inconvenience to a barber because it would make him work differently from other barbers who are right-handed. You see the right-handed barber always begins to shave a man on the right side of his face. I suppose there are scientific men who could tell us why he does this. I don't know the explanation myself, but I do know that the right-handed barber begins work naturally on the right side of the face, while the left-handed barber naturally begins on the left side.

"You might think that this would make a difference to the left-handed barber for the reason that it would make him get in the way of the barber on the next chair, or make that barber get in his way, but really it makes no difference whatever.

"If all the chairs in a shop were occupied by a line of men who had sat down at precisely the same time, all wanting to be shaved, and who might therefore be all in the same stage of shaving at the same time, why, then it might make a difference; then the left-handed barber might find himself in the way of the barber on the next who shaved right-handed, but this is very unlikely to happen.

"In the first place customers don't come in that way, filling all the chairs at the same moment and all for the same job; they string along in and they have different things done; and then some barbers are quicker then others, and the work would never progress exactly the same in all the chairs; and then the chairs themselves are adjustable for that matter, and the barber himself can suit his work to the circumstances. So the fact is that the left-handed barber doesn't get in anybody else's way and nobody gets in his; but he just goes ahead about his work, and his being left-handed is no more of a handicap to him than it would be to any other man in any employment if he was a good workman."

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

FISHERIES CONFERENCE.

First Session of the Conclave Lasts Two Hours.

Washington, Jan. 10.—The first fisheries conference lasted about two hours, and was only sufficient to open up for detailed consideration the complex subjects covered by the Newfoundland regulations. As Chandler Anderson, counsellor for the State Department, who heads the American delegation in the fisheries conference, is also one of the United States commissioners in the pending reciprocity negotiations, it has been found necessary to alternate the hours of meeting, and consequently a second session of the fishery was held in the State Department at a late hour yesterday.

It is apparent that a number of sessions will be required to reach an agreement on the issues presented. The fact that the people of Newfoundland are reluctant to permit the special board of experts, created under The Hague award in the fisheries cases, to pass upon the legality of the acts of the Newfoundland Legislature, is, howver, basis for the expectation that they are prepared to recognize a very liberal construction of the existing laws concerning American fishing rights in Canadian waters.

One question to be settled at the outset is the application of the Foreign Fishing Vessels Act of 1906, which imposes on American fishing vessels certain restrictions in addition to those that were imposed by the old act of 1905. There is also a question of the right of the Newfoundlanders to board American vessels and bring them into port under certain conditions.

The Newfoundland law prohibits the shipment of Newfoundlanders as members of the crews of American fishing vessels plying their vocation in Newfoundland waters. It also prohibits Sunday fishing and the use of purse seines. All of these prohibitions are obnoxious to the Gloucester fishermen, with the possible exception of the Sunday law, and, indeed, they are not now in effect, that operation having been suspended by the modus vivendi, which was reached last year between the British Foreign Office and Ambassador Reid, as a preliminary to adjustment of the fisheries dispute by The Hague tribunal. But, as the decision of that tribunal has now been rendered, the modus vivendi has served its purpose, and the old fishing regulations would apply in full force, unless something is done by this conference to reach a better understanding.

Refused Concession.

St. John's, Nfld., Jan. 10.—The Newfoundland Colonial Government last night refused American fishing interests the first concession asked of it since the recent award of The Hague tribunal.

The poor results of the season's fisheries on the west coast left the American dealers at a loss to supply contracted orders of frozen herring, and a large Gloucester concern yesterday petitioned the Colonial Government for permission to purchase several cargoes of herring from Newfoundland natives in Placentia Bay, on the southeast coast. Under the recent Hague award, the American fishermen were given no right to fish in Placentia Bay, and are forbidden also from entering its waters.

The application yesterday of the agent for the Gloucester company was placed before the Colonial Cabinet at a meeting held here last night. Their decision was that it was not advisable to grant the Americans rights beyond those accorded them under the provisions of the recent award, and the Cabinet declined to consider the request. There is no appeal from this decision.

I.C.R. Men Get a Raise.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—Engineers and firemen on the Intercolonial Railway are to get a raise in wages of 7 1-2 per cent. Mr. Campbell, chairman, has returned from a meeting of the board of management at Moncton, where this was decided upon. The increase will amount to $50,000 a year. At the next meeting an answer will be given to similar requests made by the conductors, trainmen and other employes.

The board of conciliation in regard to the wages of despatchers and telegraphers on the Intercolonial Railway consists of Judge Barron, Stratford, president; J. G. O'Donoghue, Toronto, for the men; J. H. Gilmour, Brockville, for the board of management.

Barn Door Thrown on Her.

Chatham, Ont., Jan. 10.—During a heavy gale Sunday night Mrs. Henry Jewell of Northwood met with a serious accident. The wind lifted a heavy barn door, and threw it against her with great force. She suffered a severe scalp wound, and her neck and shoulders were badly bruised.

Word has been received in this city of the death in New Orleans of Mrs. S. J. Sutherland, wife of the senior member of the firm of Sutherland-Innes, cooperage stock manufacturers.

Stoney Plain Fire Swept.

Stoney Plain, Alta., Jan. 10.—Stoney Plain suffered its first serious conflagration yesterday when one section of the town, comprising the main street, Railway avenue to Second avenue, was entirely wiped out, with the exception of the Bismarck Hotel and Miller Bros.' grocery. The fire started in the Royal Hotel at two o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was caused by a defective furnace, and had made considerable headway before being discovered.

A Political Family.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Davis Elkins was sworn in yesterday as Senator of the United States from Virginia. The eldest son of the late Senator Stephen B. Elkins is the third generation of the family to represent his state in the upper branch of Congress.

Transferord to Vancouver.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—F. H. Cunningham of the Department of Marine and Fisheries here, is to be transferred to Vancouver, where he will become chief inspector of fisheries for British Columbia, with supervision over all local inspectors.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Col. Higinbotham, ex-M.P. for North Wellington, died at Guelph.

A battle royal is in progress at Washington over the Long Sault Rapids project.

The storm of yesterday and the day before in the west is said to have been the most severe in years.

In fining fourteen gamblers yesterday, Magistrate Daly of Winnipeg, said that the next offenders would be given jail terms without the option of a fine.

An increase of 9,875,407 tons in traffic through the Canadian canals up to Dec. 1, when nearly all of them closed, is shown by returns to the Department.

A fox terrier was burned to death in a house in Toronto Sunday night, and three persons were forced to jump from windows to escape, while thirteen were driven to the street by the flames.

Col. W. C. Moscrip, clerk of the County Court of Perth, and deputy registrar of the High Court, died on Saturday afternoon after a short illness of pneumonia. He was formerly commander of the 28th Perth Regiment.

Robert Leach, who proposes to go over Niagara Falls in the Mitchell lifeboat next June, said last night that he had a letter from the inventor of the boat, in which he says he believes the Government will adopt the invention for ocean steamships.

Charter Before Congress.

Washington, Jan. 10.—The Montreal Board of Trade and a host of other Canadian business institutions, were arrayed against the Long Sault Development Co., a New York corporation, subsidiary to the Aluminum Co. of America, at a hearing to-day before the House committee on rivers and harbors on the Malby bill to authorize damage, locks, canals, etc., in the St. Lawrence River. The Canadian interests were represented by former Representative Littlefield of Maine, and Representative Malby of New York spoke for the corporation, whose structures are intended to be built near Sault Island, New York.

Mr. Malby contended that the Sault company is already the absolute possessor of the water power rights there under a New York perpetual charter, while Mr. Littlefield argues that the act of the New York Legislature was contingent upon the approval of Congress and the Canadian Government. Mr. Malby added that it was the first time in the history of New York that a manufacturing corporation had been compelled to pay the state a single penny for the development of water power, that there was not a single water power that has been developed in New York State that has paid its promoters, and that, in its unprecedented taxation of his company, the state made a better bargain than other states in the Union for similar purposes.

Mr. Littlefield argued that the proposed constructions were a vital obstruction to navigation on the St. Lawrence River.

Operation Under Difficulties.

Halifax, Jan. 10.—Eleven days from Rotterdam, the steamer Uranium, Capt. Agassie, arrived yesterday morning. One day out from Rotterdam, an operation for appendicitis was successfully performed on Gertra Geberich, 30 years of age, of New York, by the ship's physician, Dr. J. B. Connolly. The operation was performed under great difficulties, as the physician was not equipped with the proper appliances. So successfully was the operation performed that the patient will not need to be treated at the hospital here, but will be able to proceed on the steamer to New York. This is perhaps the first time that an operation for appendicitis has been performed on the Atlantic without the ship being stopped.

Poison In the Lunch.

Pittsburg, Jan. 10.—Mrs. G. M. Strobaker, wife of a grain elevator's superintendent, who was poisoned with strychnine under peculiar circumstances on Saturday, is a patient in the same hospital, and, according to physicians, is suffering from the same poison.

Strobaker had for his lunch Saturday some jelly spread between slices of bread, and after he had taken a bite he laid the bread aside to talk with someone.

This action probably saved his life, as he took but one swallow of the bread and then grew sick, and a few minutes later was in convulsions. The lunch was taken to a chemist, who found strychnine in quantities sufficient to kill 25 men.

No Need to Cuss Now.

New York, Jan. 10.—Believing it almost impossible for a man troubled with bad teeth to lead a consistent life, the Salvation Army has opened a department of dentistry at No. 205 West 13th street, under Dr. Craighton. "Many a man has fallen from grace when attacked with a bad toothache and unable to pay the high prices of the average dentist," an officer of the army said. "In such a condition more than one man has given vent to his feelings in a flow of profanity or tried to 'drown' the pain with whiskey, and of course such acts would end his 'Christian experience.' For those, however, who can afford to pay, the exact cost of the work done will be charged, without profit of any kind."

Surveyed Last Section.

Brockville, Jan. 10.—A party of Canadian Northern Railway surveyors arrived here yesterday from Caffey's Locks, after having completed the survey of the last stretch of the line from Toronto to Ottawa, via Smith's Falls. From here they proceed to Quebec City, to be engaged the next five months on the proposed 500-mile main line east of the ancient capital.

Commission Meets In Ottawa.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—The Technical Commission will meet in Ottawa today. The commission will sit here and in Hull till Friday, at Toronto on the 20th, and Sault Ste. Marie on the 23rd. A final sitting will be held in Montreal on Feb. 11.

TO GIVE THEIR STORY

Manufacturers Will Send a Deputation to Ottawa.

With a View to Counterbalancing the Effect at the Capital of the Recent Delegation of Farmers, Western Manufacturers Will Send Eight Delegates—Asked to Keep Representation Down.

Winnipeg, Jan. 10.—To counterbalance the impression left at the capital by the great delegation of farmers who presented their views on free trade and protection to the Dominion Government recently, there will leave Winnipeg within two days eight representatives of western industry, who will state the other side of the case. Included in the deputation will be Mayor Evans, who goes, not as an advocate of any policy, but simply to state what Winnipeg is doing to encourage manufactures, letting the auditors determine what effect the change in the tariff will be. Within less than a week this motion has been decided on by western manufacturers, and W. J. Bullman, secretary of the organization, stated that eight representatives would go east to present the other side of the story.

"We think it only right," said Mr. Bullman, "that the Government should hear both sides. Naturally our story will be slightly different from that of the farmers. We have an appointment with Sir Wilfrid Laurier at ten o'clock next Friday morning. We have been asked to hold our numbers down, as it will be believed that a few could present the case just as well as a great number."

A New Printing Bureau.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—It is semi-officially announced that plans will be made at an early date to demolish the present Printing Bureau and to erect a more modern and less unsightly structure in another part of the capital. The present site, which is near Nepean Point, will be converted into a park by the Improvement Commission.

Supt. Boardman of the Printing Bureau, who, with a party of officials, has returned from a trip to Washington and New York to study American methods of running similar establishments, said yesterday that the trip was taken largely with a view of getting new ideas for buildings and machinery suitable to the requirements of the Dominion Government printing establishment.

Expect Row Over Report.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—A lively row is anticipated when Parliament reassembles because of the fact that in the official resume of the general election and the bye-elections since 1908, which has just been published, the record of the Drummond-Arthabaska bye-election is as follows: Liberal votes, 3,244; Conservative votes, 3,451. Majority for Conservatives, 207.

It is pointed out by the Conservative members in the city that Mr. Gilbert, who won the bye-election, ran as a Liberal-Nationalist and had no affiliation with the Conservatives.

A Business-Like Meeting.

Brantford, Jan. 10.—The inaugural meeting of the City Council here yesterday broke all precedents for business despatch. The chairmenships were distributed as follows: Finance, Ald. Lyle; board of works, Ald. Hartman; buildings and grounds, Ald. Minshall; fire and light, Ald. Pearce; railways, Ald. Harris; manufacturers, Ald. Ryerson. Mayor Rastall, in his inaugural address, urged a greater Brantford movement, and the formation of an industrial syndicate by the Board of Trade, for the securing of new industries.

Lindsay's Oldest Citizen Dead.

Lindsay, Jan. 10.—Lindsay's oldest citizen, Thomas Cuff, died on Saturday from injuries received from an enraged cow on Wednesday. Mr. Cuff, who was over 85 years old, had resided in this vicinity all his life, coming from Ireland to Canada in 1831, and was one of Lindsay's most respected and honored citizens. Two of his daughters reside in Toronto, Mrs. Herlihy and Mrs. D. Fitzgerald.

A Munificient Gift.

Brockville, Jan. 10.—The board of governors of the Brockville General Hospital have accepted the offer of Charles W. McLean, who recently inherited some of the millions of the late Senator Fulford, to bear the entire cost of raising and equipping the southern wing of the building, and converting it into a maternity ward, as a memorial to his wife, who died just one year ago yesterday.

Held Up Saloon.

New York, Jan. 10.—Five masked men held up the saloon of Charles Napoli, Williamburg, yesterday in an attempt to get $5,000 which was deposited there. One of the bandits, later identified as Harry Smith, was shot in the back and seriously wounded by Francesco Cucarese, the saloon porter, after he and Bartender Schmidt had beaten off the invaders. The four men escaped.

Want More Police.

Brockville, Jan. 10.—According to the annual report of Chief of Police Burke, presented at last night's meeting of the Town Council, 411 cases were brought into court the past year, and over $1,000 collected in fines. A plea was made for an increase in the permanent force.

Medal for Young Hero.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—Hon. Chas. Murphy, presented last night at Russell, Ont., a medal of the Royal Canadian Humane Society to Master Thomas Barrington, for bravery in saving Norman Carscadden from drowning in the millrace in the Castor River last March.

ENERGY—THE HUMAN POWER-HOUSE.

Mind, the master architect, engages energy to do various kinds of work. It must always have workmen or its plans cannot be executed.

The brain of man is a power-house in which there are many dynamos. Wires lead out from these dynamos to all parts and every organ of the body. The various parts or organs of the body are motors or engines that keep up their action by the energy they receive over the dynamos in the brain. The food we consume is the fuel which contains latent energy. Digestion prepares this fuel for admission into the blood. The blood sarries it to the nerve centres, or dynamos, where much of it is finally burnt up, consumed, and the latent energy, which held the food together in its fuel form, istransformed into nerve en-

ICE WAS KEEN, PLAY WAS FAST: LOCALS LOST HARD GAME

At the Arena last night a large crowd of Bellevillians gathered to witness a hockey match between the Belleville and Trenton Intermediate teams, and, as is often the case, the unexpected happened. In the first half of the game the play was nearly all in Trenton's territory and when the bell sounded for intermission seven goals had been scored, five of which were to the credit of the local team. With a lead of three goals at the commencement of the second half it was confidently expected that Belleville would win, but such was not the case. Trenton not only tied the score after about 15 minutes' play, but were in the lead by one goal. This advantage they secured by scoring in quick succession four goals. By this time the Trenton rooters were naturally much elated, while Belleville's supporters were somewhat chagrined. There was considerable enthusiasm displayed when the locals again found Trenton's net after fine aggressive work and tied the score. At this time there were but a few minutes left to play, and the general impression was that if the Belleville players could prevent the visitors from scoring they would eventually win the game. These hopes were, however, dashed to the ground, as Trenton secured another goal and won the game by a score of 7 to 6 goals. The game throughout was a fair exhibition of hockey. At times Gilbert, as usual, made some excellent rushes, and Bedboro, Symons, Whalen and Bowen did excellent work. Whalen, while by no means in a fit condition to play hockey, certainly did well. Trenton forward bunch also played well.

The referee was Mr. F. H. Sproule, of Toronto, and while he noticed many offsides, there were some he did not notice, and it is alleged by many spectators that at least two goals secured by Trenton were the result of off-side plays. During the progress of the game penalties were handed out quite frequently, nine to Belleville and eight to Trenton.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:—

Belleville—		Trenton—
Dolan	Goal	McGiffen
Gilbert	Point	Croft
Brown	Cover point	McGaw
Symons	Centre	Fletcher
Bedboro	Rover	Cummings
Bowen	Right wing	Powers
Whalen	left wing	Armstrong

The officials in the game were: J. Connolly, goal umpire for Belleville; A. Tierney for Trenton. Timekeepers, B. Haines and S. Bongard; penalty timekeepers, W. Allen and H. F. Whittier.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

Belleville scored a goal while two of their men were off the ice.

The work of Referee Sproule was severely criticized by many of the local fans.

Trenton certainly played the best combination, as was to be expected, their team having been together all the season.

Belleville lost the game by bad generalship. Had they played a strictly defensive game in the second half, putting two men into goal, they could hardly have been beaten.

HOCKEY NOTES.

The local professionals will play in Port Hope to-night.

* *

This evening the Belleville junior O.H.A. team will try conclusions with the Picton juniors at Picton.

On Thursday night the Trenton and local professional teams will play here.

The Dippers were chiefly made up of the Frontenac Juniors, as the following line-up will show: Goal, Marchand; point, McCammon; cover, John Gratton; forwards, Brouse, Hunt, Millan and Duncan.

GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE.....

A clever bill was presented to a large audience at Griffin's popular theatre last night. Clifford & Hall have a good singing and talking act which received hearty applause. Van Cello, foot balancer, and equilibrist, presented a new and novel act in the way of juggling, and was a distinct hit. 5 reels of good pictures were shown which comprised comedies, dramas, and a scenic picture, making in all a most excellent program.

JANUARY ROD AND GUN.

Variety, and plenty of it, is the keynote of the January issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, of Woodstock, Ontario. The opening article deals with the outfit required for the backwoods and though sportsmen may differ on many of the trimmings, there will be a general agreement as to the essentials. This is followed by a number of personal experiences in hunting, fishing, canoeing and mountaineering throughout Canada, while a paper on the birds of Manitoba and some light verses add materially to the interest of the number and recommend it as one in which sportsmen of all tastes may find something which cannot fail to prove both pleasurable and profitable to themselves. There are a number of items recording occurrences out of the common, showing how vastly experiences in the woods may differ and others reminding sportsmen of similar events on their own trips. The whole is redolent of the outdoors and must act like a tonic in the wintry weather, reminding sportsmen of the joys they have had and those which they are anticipating with the keenest of pleasures in the not far distant future.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."—Mrs. W. S. FORD, 1938 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

SHE LOVED SNUFF.

Remarkable Will and Funeral of a Queer Englishwoman.

The will of Mrs. Margaret Thompson, which is preserved as a curiosity at Somerset House, England, is a tribute to the delights and consolations of snuff. The testatrix directed that in her coffin should be buried with her all her handkerchiefs and sufficient of the best Scotch snuff to cover her body. This she preferred to flowers, as "nothing could be more fragrant and so refreshing to me as that precious powder." Further, the six greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster, were to be her bearers. Six old maids, each bearing in her hand a box filled with the best Scotch snuff to take for their refreshment as they walked, were to bear the pall. Before the corpse the minister was to walk, carrying and partaking of a pound of snuff. At every twenty yards a handful of snuff was to be delivered to the bystanders, and at the door of the testatrix's house were to be placed two bushels of the same quality of snuff for gratuitous distribution. In order to insure the carrying out of her wishes the testatrix made the legacies given by the will dependent upon an exact and literal fulfillment of the conditions above named. In closing she bade all concerned to regard snuff as the grand cordial of nature.

Toned It Down.

"King Edward," said an English visitor in New York, "hated snobbishness. To show how ridiculous snobbishness was he used often to tell about an alphabet book of his childhood.

"This book had alliterative sentences arranged under each letter, thus:

" 'Callous Caroline caned a cur cruelly.'

" 'Henry hated the heat of heavy hats.'

"Under the letter V came the facetious sentence:

" 'Villiam Vilkins viped his veskit.'

"But the young prince's snobbish tutors thought this sentence too vulgar and low for their charge and accordingly they substituted for it the more refined and genteel line:

" 'Vincent Vining viewed a vacant villa.' "

Genius and Mediocrity.

Corneille did not speak correctly the language of which he was such a master. Descartes was silent in mixed society. Themistocles, when asked to play on a lute, said, "I cannot fiddle, but I can make a little village into a great city." Addison was unable to converse in company. Virgil was heavy colloquially. La Fontaine was coarse and stupid when surrounded by men. The Countess of Pembroke had been often heard to say of Chaucer that his silence was more agreeable to her than his conversation. Socrates, celebrated for his written orations, was so timid that he never ventured to speak in public. Dryden said that he was unfit for company. Hence it has been remarked, "Mediocrity can talk; it is for genius to observe."

Keeping his nose continually down to the grindstone is apt to give any man sharp features.

Some men look upon a high ball as an antidote for low spirits.

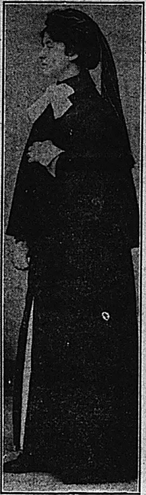
NURSEMAID IN UNIFORM.

A Smart Cape and Cap Supersede Old Time White Apron.



THE SWAGGER NURSEMAID'S COSTUME.

The white apron is no longer a sufficient uniform for the smart nursemaid who follows her charges about the streets. The up to date maid now wears in the house a snow white frock of duck or linen, and in the street this is covered by a dark blue or gray cape coat like the one pictured.

Her little bonnet has a dignified veil to match, and the white mull bow at her throat is dignified and respectability epitomized.

The Pajama Girl.

When cold winter nights come the small girl and her small brother, too, will be anxious to change their lingerie underwear for pajama suits of warm flannel.

Pajamas for girls are cut exactly like those the boys wear, but the materials are daintier in coloring and often in weave. The pretty suit seen in the cut is made from duckling fleece, a kind of flowered flannel which is very attractive and washes splendidly. The fleece is patterned with Mother Goose figures, and the groundwork is a fascinating shade of pink.

PAJAMAS OF PINK FLANNEL.

Mothers who approve of silk underwear and can afford such luxuries for their children as silken pajamas have a lovely selection of suits from which to choose. Many of these models are of quilted silk embroidered in oriental designs.

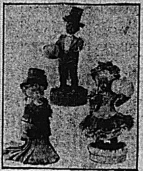
The Wail of the Victim.

"You can't get something for nothing," said the man who affects proverbs.

"No," answered the easy man; "I can't. But the people with whom I do business seem to manage it every now and then."

THANKSGIVING GOODIES.

"Pompin Pye" the Pilgrim Mothers Used to Make.



THANKSGIVING FAVORS.

The pumpkin pie of today differs from the "pompin pye" the pilgrim mothers used to make. The following is the recipe they followed:

"Take about halfe pound of pumpin and slice it, a handful of thyme, a little rosemary, parsley, sweet marjoram slipped off the stalks; chop them small; then take cinnamon, nutmeg, pepper and six cloves and beat them; take ten eggs and beat them; then mix and beat them all together and put as much sugar as you think fit; then fry them to a froiz; after it is fried let it stand till it be cold; then fil your pye: take sliced apples thinne roundwayes and lay a row of froiz and a layer of apples with currans betwixt the layer while your pye is fitted and put a good deal of sweet butter before you close it, and when the pye is baked take six yelk eggs, some white wine and make a caudle of this, but not too thick; cut up the lid and put it in; stir them well together whilst the eggs and pumpin be not preceived as so serve it up."

To make a chestnut pudding, boil one quart large chestnuts, in salted water for half an hour, then remove shells and all brown skin; put kernels through a meat mincer. Cook one-fourth cupful of rice in one and a half cupfuls of milk until very tender; make a boiled custard of one-half cupful of milk, yolks of three eggs, one-half cupful of sugar; add the chestnuts and rice and put all through a sieve; add one-half teaspoonful vanilla and one-half teaspoonful lemon extract; freeze as for ice cream; then pack in mold and bury for three hours in ice and salt. When ready to serve let stand a few minutes in a warm room and the cream will slip out unbroken. Garnish top with maraschino cherries and citron leaves and wreath base with whipped cream and the cherries.

Nothing makes a bigger "hit" for Thanksgiving dinner than novel favors, but often the hostess is at a loss to find something new. The novelties illustrated, made from crape paper, may furnish a suggestion. Each doll is dressed in orange or any color suitable and mounted on a pumpkin.

Her Christmas Pudding

It Opened the Way to an Unexpected Pleasure

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Tied snugly in a round bag, the Christmas pudding bubbled merrily in the big pot on the gas range. Young Mrs. Bell tripped lightly to and fro about the tiny kitchen, her heart full of Yuletide cheer and gentle graciousness. It was her first Christmas as a housewife, and the little flat was spick and span with cleanliness.

Laura Bell lifted the pot lid and peered at the fragrant pudding.

"My, but that does smell Christmasy!" sighed Laura as she replaced the lid and proceeded to wash the mountainous array of dishes in the sink. "I never believed I could anticipate an enjoyable Christmas away from Lakeville and the home folks, but I begin to thing we two are going to have a lovely time, even if we are all alone in this big, strange city."

That night at dinner Timothy Bell leaned back in his chair and surveyed the remains of his excellent meal with manifest approval.

"So the pudding was a success, dear?" he inquired.

"Light as a feather, and so spicy!" said his wife proudly. "I'd show it to you, Tim, only I've tied it up again and put it out on the fire escape to keep cold. I shall boil it for an hour tomorrow, just before dinner, so it will be piping hot."

"Now this is Christmas eve. Do you want to go out tonight?"

"I'd like to go out and mingle with the crowds, although my own shopping was finished a week ago. It seemed strange to prepare my gifts so early and send them through the mail instead of running around with them the way I've always done in Lakeville. I rather miss the excitement and fun of it all. Now, Timothy, dear, don't look so solemn. Really I'd rather be here in New York with you today than away out in Minnesota with everybody else if you were not there.

"I've a mind to try it on every man, woman and child I meet in the corridors tomorrow," said Laura daringly as she cleared away the meal. "What do you suppose they would say?"

"Probably complain to the janitor," grinned Timothy, gathering a pile of dishes and whisking them into the kitchen. "Hurry up, sweetheart. Let the dishes wait till we come home. Get on your things and let's join the crowd. If we can't have a Lakeville Christmas we'll have the New York kind, eh?"

"Of course we will," agreed his wife.

The Bells enjoyed their excursion into the shopping districts. The broad avenues were ablaze with light and color, and the moving multitudes of Christmas purchasers formed constantly changing pictures that delighted the country bred eyes of Timothy and his wife. More than once Timothy's hand went down into his pocket to add a mite to some Salvation Army kettle on a corner or to dispense holiday comfort to some one whose need of food or warmth was apparent to his observing glance. Once he and Laura conveyed a party of four ragged urchins into a little toyshop and made four children radiantly happy with simple gifts.

When they reached home again the clocks were striking 11 and Laura's eyes were sparkling with happiness, while Timothy felt a quiet satisfaction in the pleasure the evening had brought them. As they waited for the elevator a young man and a girl entered the building and stood near them.

Timothy's keen glance noted that the man was well dressed, but rather thinly clad for the season. His face was thin and pale, as if he had recently been ill, while his dark eyes wore a brooding, discouraged expression that was out of keeping with the spirit of the approaching festival. The girl, who wore a wedding ring on one slender ungloved hand, watched him with a pretty air of motherly anxiety. She was a brown little thing, with hair and eyes of a warm russet hue and a charming face that attracted Laura Bell's attention.

As they glided up in the elevator Laura found herself watching the girl with interest. There was a sad look when the young man's glance was turned away from her uplifted face, and Laura noted little tense lines about the mobile lips. The elevator stopped at the Bells' floor, and as they left the car Mrs. Bell turned with a sudden impulse and nodded in the friendliest manner at the little brown girl.

"Merry Christmas!" she called.

The door slammed as the car mounted up, but the brown girl leaned forward and called back in a low, sweet voice, "Merry Christmas to you!"

"I did it, Timothy," sang Laura as they entered their own cozy flat. "I knew some of these flat dwellers were human—even if you doubted it."

"Wrong again and glad of it—this time," admitted Timothy as he turned up the gas in the parlor. "Now, Laura, how about those dishes?"

"They must be done tonight," declared Mrs. Bell, tying a large apron about her slender form. "There won't be a thing to do tomorrow except to roast the chicken, heat up the pudding and cook some vegetables."

Laura went to the window that opened on a fire escape and raised it. Then she uttered a faint shriek of dismay and turned to her husband.

"It's gone!" she cried dramatically.

"What—the pudding?" Timothy approached the window and made a careful examination of the impromptu refrigerator. "Nothing here; not a blamed pudding of any kind," he reported. "Sure you didn't bring it inside and forget about it?"

Laura opened the pantry door and revealed its cupboard-like interior. There were the plump chicken and the delicately tinted celery and the crimson cranberry sauce and bowl of fruit, but there was no sign of that snugly bagged plum pudding that was to be the chef d'oeuvre of the Christmas feast.

The hour that followed was an exciting one for the Bells. They searched high and low, in the most impossible places, for the delectable pudding that Laura had made, but in vain. At last Timothy went down to the basement and consulted the genial janitor, who listened with interest to his tale of woe, but offered no solace.

It was after 7 o'clock on Christmas morning when Laura was awakened by a ringing of the hall bell. Throwing on a warm wrapper and thrusting her feet into furry slippers, she hastened into the narrow hall, careful not to disturb her sleeping husband.

Laura opened the door the merest crack and peered inquisitively through. What she saw caused her to throw the door open with cordial hospitality.

"Merry Christmas! Come in, do!" she said to the little brown girl who stood there, looking rather pale and frightened.

"For just a moment. There is something I must explain." She slipped inside and sank into the chair that Laura offered. "I know you will think it strange that I have come, a perfect stranger, but the janitor said you had lost a pudding."

"I have. Did you find it?" cried Laura eagerly. "It's the greatest mystery what has become of it."

The girl smiled sadly, and a flush reddened her cheek for a brief instant and was gone. "I shall have to tell you about ourselves," she said, with dignity, "so that you will understand why we have eaten half of your pudding. We're all alone, both of us, and we've had bad luck ever since we were married. In September Paul was taken down with typhoid fever and lost his position as bookkeeper. He's just able to get around now and look for work, and he hasn't been at all successful. Things have been going from bad to worse, and we're going to move out the first of the year. We've been running low for a long time, and for the last two days we haven't had much to eat, so there—just milk or something like that. Tonight before we went out the dumb waiter whistle sounded, and when I opened the slide there was our bottle of milk, with a plum pudding in a bag.

"I thought—honestly I did—that somebody had sent it up to us, though we're not acquainted with a soul here, and so I heated it up, and we ate half of it. It was lovely. A little while ago the janitor came and inquired if we'd seen a plum pudding, so I came right down to tell you, as Paul is asleep. I don't know what to say to you."

"Don't you dare say another word about that pudding," commanded Laura. "If you only knew how lonesome we are today you and your husband would come down and spend the day with us. We were wishing we knew somebody in the house here to ask. I'm so thankful about that pudding. Why, if I hadn't put it in the dumb waiter instead of the fire escape (I'm very absentminded when I'm busy) you would never have received it, and we might never have been acquainted. Isn't it a blessed old pudding?"

These two lonely young women hugged each other delightedly, and afterward Laura went to arouse Timothy that he might accompany her to the floor above, where the Robinsons lived, and add his persuasions to bear against the pride of Mr. Paul Robinson.

"You might find a position for him in the office, Timothy," suggested his wife hopefully.

"I think that will be easy," promised Mr. Bell.

It was a merry little gathering that did justice to Laura's Christmas dinner. The tragedy that was beneath the eating of half the pudding was quite forgotten in the joy of the present and the hopeful outlook for the future. When the day was over and the Robinsons had returned to their rooms, cheered in mind and purse by Timothy's delicately proffered generosity, Laura slipped her hand in her husband's arm and leaned her head against him, saying:

"It's been different from any Christmas I ever spent, Timothy, and I've been wondering what might have happened to them if that blessed pudding hadn't opened the way."

Relations between Japan and China are said to be strained. As the news comes through the cable correspondent's sieve, it doesnt bother me much.

FIREMEN ARE MISSING

They May Have Lost Their Lives In Fire In Cincinnati.

Million-Dollar Conflagration Breaks Out In Chamber of Commerce Building and a Dozen Firemen Are Injured In Collapse of Roof — Second Bad Blaze Within Three Weeks—Crowds In Mad Rush.

Cincinnati, Jan. 11.—Entailing a loss of more than one million dollars, this city suffered it's second great fire within three weeks, when the Chamber of Commerce Building at Fourth and Vine streets was destroyed last night, adjacent property damaged, a dozen firemen injured, and possibly lives lost.

While several firemen still are unaccounted for up to a late hour, reports of fatalities among firemen and spectators who were caught in the wreckage of the collapsed roof have not been confirmed. It is known that there were a large number of employes at work when the fire started.

The Cincinnati Stock Exchange and the Louisville & Nashville Railway offices, both of which contained records almost invaluable, were consumed in the conflagration.

Only the bare walls of what was Cincinnati's most magnificent architectural building remain. The building had a valuation of $1,000,000, while the fixtures in the various offices were valued at $50,000.

The stocks of several business houses in the block were damaged, but the fire was confined to the Chamber of Commerce Building.

Full 5,000 persons were crowded directly outside the fire lines when the roof collapsed. Smoke and flying sparks filled the streets for two squares, and a panic followed. Men and women fought to escape, and many were trampled in the rush. Many sustained bruises and cuts, but no one was reported seriously injured.

Owing to the density of the smoke, the police were powerless to cope with the situation for fully ten minutes, and nearby office buildings were turned into hospitals for the injured and shelter places for the panic stricken.

CRIPPEN'S CABIN HELD AS HOODOO

Nobody Would Occupy it, So Captain is Turning It Into Storeroom is the Report

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The late Dr. Crippen's name has proven such a hoodoo to stateroom 52 on the White Star Liner Megantic that the cabin is being converted into a store room. Although it is situated on the shelter deck and provides excellent accommodation for ocean travellers, no one will occupy it now, as its last occupant was the man who was hanged in England for killing Belle Elmore.

Ethel Le Neve occupied the cabin immediately opposite Crippen's. Both cabins are looked upon as hoodoos, and when ever they have been offered to travellers the question has been asked: "Is that the cabin Dr. Crippen had?" During the voyage just completed the passengers looked upon both cabins as chambers of horror.

WORLD'S DEBT TO BRITAIN

Bishop Fallon's Fine and Eloquent Tribute To the Mother Country

Bishop Fallon, who spoke at the Canadian Club banquet at London, England, was given the reception of the evening. In the course of his speech he said:

"I am an Imperialist on principle and by conviction, because, as I read history, I have seen that one nation is always dominant, and I see no nation ready to take the place of Great Britain as the dominant race of the present era.

"I have the belief deep down in my heart that it is the deliberate intention of Germany to take to herself, if possible, the dominant place now held by Great Britain. I do not think that would be a good day for the world.

"How great, in money alone, is the world's debt to Great Britain. There is not a nation being developed today in which British money is not interested. She has invested more than two billions in each of her great colonies, and billions here and billions there all over the world, and it is just as great a necessity for international peace that that great investment should be protected as it is that the navy should not be cut down and weakened."

KING MANUEL TO VISIT AMERICA ON HIS TOUR

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Although King Manuel has withdrawn himself from the public gaze for the time being and is content to live within the charming precincts of Wood Norton, it must not be imagined for a moment that he is faltering in his intention to be true to his great destiny—the sovereignship of Portugal.

That his country will call for him to take his seat once more on the royal throne of his fathers, his majesty is convinced, and, in the manner of an enlightened monarch, King Manuel has decided that when the time comes he shall be in fit training and experience to accept the call and worthily uphold the best traditions of his race.

It must not be imagined that the youthful, exiled monarch is spending all his time at Evesham in giving way to melancholy, or even shooting birds or entertaining sympathetic friends. King Manuel is planning out his future, making arrangements for his immediate present and scheming schemes for the resumption of his royal throne. We are informed that the Portugese King will employ his time in training himself in scholarship and diplomacy and all the arts of statecraft.

At the end of this month King Manuel will quit the good Wood Norton and settle in his own house at Richmond, which has just been vacated by Kaid Sir Harry Maclean. From Richmond his majesty, expecting no privileges, will attend lectures at Oxford Univehsity and other centres of learning.

He will not attempt to obtain a degree, but since the young King's tastes and inclinations are strongly his regular attendance at academic lectures may be counted upon with certainty.

His majesty will to a certain extent enter into the life of the university and will not be behind hand in taking the keenest interest in the sporting side of varsity life.

When he ceases to attend lectures at various universities King Manuel will make a tour of the world and make a special study of British colonial methods. He will visit Australia, Africa, Canada, America and the far East. During this time he will travel as a private individual, with the object of personally inquiring into the different systems of government obtaining among over-seats colonies of the various European powers and of seeing something of the marvellous regeneration of the far east. His interest in the UnitedStates will also be purely that of a student of affairs of government.

It is not his desire to be feted or entertained; he does not desire that any fuss should be made of him. He will travel from country to country in ordinary ocean liners and from place to place in ordinary trains.

When t hotuisirs etao shrdl mfwy

When this tour is over King Manuel will retunr to England and there decide upon his future movements.

IS BURIED ALIVE AS AN EXPERIMENT

LONDON, Jan. 10.—How does it feel to be buried alive Nordini can tell us for he was buried with a foot of sand over his head, at the Cecil Hotel yesterday afternoon for nine minutes and 20 seconds.

Nordini is an Austrian Pole with an extraordinary muscular development. He has always lived the simple life, and has never touched alcohol nor smoked. He has devoted his life to the study of physical culture until he is a model of well-knit strength.

The most interesting part of his achievement lies in the way in which he can relax and tighten his muscles at will. He even says that by muscular action he can stop his heart from beating for a period of 20 seconds. To test him a number of doctors were invited to meet him yesterday at the Hotel Cecil and examine him. He tried to stop his heart, but, according to Dr. Ewart and Dr. Smith, of 'Bart's' the action of the heart, although lessened, was not stopped. It is only fair to say that Dr. Quinton Chalmers, who was present, told the audience that he had seen Nordini in company with Dr. F. W. Price, and that on that occasion his heart had stopped.

But the extraordinary strength of Nordini's chest muscles enables him to do something which is almost as wonderful. A wooden shest was brought in, and in it Nordini lay. His ears, nose and mouth were stopped with cotton wool. Then he was covered with dry sand to the depth of over a foot, and so he remained for nearly ten minutes, which were counted off by Dr. Ewart.

When he got up he showed no signs of suffocation, and his pulse and breathing were quite normal. He claims to be able to do this feat by means of his ability to expand his chest in spite of the weight resting upon it, and it is said that he has remaind buried alive in this way for nearly twenty minutes.

He is also able to do some curious things with the muscles of his neck and arms. When his chest is fully expanded it measures eight inches more than in its normal state. He can shift his diaphragm in a most singular way, so that his stomach at one time seems to have disappeared, and at another to protrude. And he can do this against the pressure of the fist of a strong man. Altogether he offers some curious and interesting problems to the students of physiology.

PRINTING SCANDAL UNDER NEW LIGHT

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—The report of the Secretary of State upon the investigation into the Printing Bureau scandals has been issued in blue book form. The result of the enquiry, as set forth in the recommendations of the Secretary of State, as well as the findings, was published shortly after the conclusion of the investigation, so that there is only the evidence, which, by the way, occupies a considerable proportion of the 486 pages of the blue book, to be considered as new matter. But a perusal of that evidence will serve to indicate the line upon which the further enquiry by the Public Accounts Committee may profitably proceed.

Some interesting sidelights are thrown upon the working of the patronage system as applied to the Government printing done outside the bureau. A case in point is the evidence given as to the printing of 100,000 copies of the pamphlet entitled: "Prosperity Follows Settlement." tI appears that the contract was given to the Gananoque Reporter, because the publisher, as the King's Printer was given to understand, was Mr. Britton, and that "Charley Britton had been our candidate down there and was having a hard struggle to publish a Liberal paper and would like the job." Therein, however, was the King's Printer misled by his overzealous officer; it was not "our Charley" who ran the Gananoque Reporter, but another Britton. And, moreover, he didn't do the work after getting the contract, either, but farmed it out to the Ottawa Free Press.

Mr. Cook, the official of the bureau in question, admitted in evidence that when the proofs came in he saw they were from the Free Press, but did not report the matter to the King's Printer, for, he said, "I did not want to incur the displeasure of the Free Press." The Gananoque Reporter sent in the account and got its price, which, as Mr. Murphy observed at the enquiry, "was not so close that the Free Press was not able to shave it off a couple of hundred dollars."

In regard to the tremendous overstocking with carbon paper, a witness testified that the late Mr. Gouldthrite told him he was "taken by the throat" by a Minister and had to buy the paper. There will doubtless be a fuller enquiry by the committee also into the curious transaction disclosed in connection with the placing of a contract with a Toronto lithographing concern, amounting to over $5,000. Long after the contract had been let and the work finished, in fact, after the investigation had started, the Mortimer Company were asked to write out a tender, dated months back, to indicate that they had tendered for the job at a slightly higher price than the Toronto firm, which they had not. The Ottawa company did as requested, it would appear, on the representation that such a document was required to "complete the file."

TO GET HOME MARKET

Ontario Pulp Concessions Will Be Disposed Of.

On Conditon That the Purchases Will Erect Paper Mills and Insure an Output of 100 Tons Per Day, the Ontario Government Will Sell Huge Areas of Lands In Rainy River and Abitibi.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—With a view to supplying the settlers in an extensive area of Northern Ontario with what they have most desired since the country was opened up—a convenient market for their pulpwood — the Provincial Government has decided to offer for sale two important pulpwood concessions, one in the Abitibi, and the other in the Rainy River District. Orders in Council were passed by the Government yesterday authorizing the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines to ask for tenders. A bonus in addition to the regular dues will be asked for the tenders.

The right to cut pulpwood over the area of 2,360 square miles contained in the Abitibi and Rainy River concessions carries with it an obligation to erect pulp and paper mills capable of handling the output of spruce, not only from the concessions, but from the surrounding country as well.

When Hon. Frank Cochrane visited the north country in September last he was requested by the settlers to try to secure for them a better market for their pulpwood. The land in the districts named is heavily wooded with spruce, which goes to the settler when he completes his settlement duties.

In the Temiskaming district farther south, and within reasonable distance of a market, the pulpwood upon a settler's section is an important factor in maintaining him and his family until he gets his land cleared and under cultivation. Further north in the district around Cochrane settlers are going in upon the land, but the long haul necessitated and the consequent heavy freight charges make the pulpwood of little immediate value to them and the district has been seriously handicapped for that reason. Hon. Mr. Cochrane promised the settlers that their request would be considered, and the present action is an endeavor to meet their wishes.

The Abitibi Lake concession, which is the largest, contains an approximate area of 1,560 square miles, and when the pulp and paper mill is established and in operation an excellent home market will be afforded for the pulp products of the settlers along the line of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific in the neighborhood of the junction at Cochrane.

CURRENT EVENTS.

"Make the hens comfotable," says an exchange. Certainly, their owners ought to, with the hope of getting eggs at 45 cts. per dozen as an inducement.

During November, 1910, 140 industrial fatalities were reported, and 267 persons were accidentally injured, according to Canadian Labor Department reports.

An inspector of the New York Board of Health has been suspended on a charge of selling to the poor condemned vegetables, such as rotten potatoes, which he had been ordered to destroy. This is about as mean a form of graft as has recently been reported.

In Foster Ward, where Alderman Ab. Thompson was exercising his powerful influence in support of Mayor Marsh's candidate for Mayor, he forgot himself so far as to threaten the dismissal of an elector who held a petty position, the appointment of which was with the City Council, if he did not desist from working for Mr. Ackerman. The reply the doughty Alderman received to his threat was much more forcible than polite. The act shows, if nothing else more, that all tyrants are not yet dead.

Hon. Clifford Sifton is not the only prominent Liberal who is opposed to a trade treaty with the United States as calculated to be highly injurious to the interests of Canada. Sir George W. Ross and others are of the same opinion, and the Laurier Government and their representatives who are at present in Washington discussing the subject with the U. S. commissioners will do well to govern themselves accordingly. Commercially the United States is the most selfish country on the face of the earth and has ever sought to escape its treaty obligations by means of technicalities, and it would not now be seeking freer trade with Canada did it not expect to get the best of the bargain "by hook or by crook."

EX MAYOR MARSH'S SENSE OF FAIRNESS

Belleville, Jan. 11, 1911.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—Now that His Worship Mayor Ackerman has written both newspapers, publicly declaring the fact that he did give his signature approving of the sale of certain of the celebrated lots, thereby demonstrating the fact that he wishes to be fair, would it not also be fair now on your part and for Messrs. Corby and Johnson also to make a public declaration that they were mistaken as to the facts and show that they wish to do what is right anyway.

Yours respectfully,
L. W. MARSH.

Editor's Note.—Before asking for fairness on the part of his critics, Mr. Marsh ought to have shown them an example of fair play. Mr. Marsh puts himself outside the pale of honest controversy by omitting to state the fact that Mr. Ackerman, in his communication to the press, gave the following explanation: "I can quite understand how the transaction had gone entirely from my memory, as my physician's record shows I was delirious on Sept. 12th, continuing in this condition for several weeks."

FOR A BETTER AND CLEANER BELLEVILLE

Y.W.C.T.U. Had An Interesting Debate--Suggestive Paper on Bible Reading by Mrs. Dr. Bishop—Reports From the Various Departments Rev. Mr. Kerr Spoke on Belleville and Local Option--A Pleasing and Diversified Programme

"A better and a cleaner Belleville" wuld sum up the message of the various speakers at the Parlor Meeting of the Young Women's Christan Temperance Temperance Union last evening at the home of Mr. H. L. Ketcheson, Albert street. It was the first time the writer had attended one of these "Y" meetings and he has come to the conclusion that he has missed some good things in the past if the programs are always as strong as that of last evening.

Some fifty or sixty were in attendance, made up of the young ladies and their invited guests, not all of whom were female.

Mrs. John Williams, the President of the "Ys", occupied the chair, and after an opening prayer by Rev. Mr. Smith, and a very thoughtful and suggestive Bible reading by Mrs. Dr. Bishop, called for reports from the varoius departments, the following responding:

Miss Edna Farley, General Secretary,
Miss Maud Reeves, Recording Secretary,
Miss Queenie Smith, Treasurer.

These reports showed the Union to be in a healthy condition as regards membership, finances and general work. Miss Ethel Ketcheson told of the flowers, fruit and sweetmeats that had been distributed. Miss Ina Lazier told of the work among the lumber camps, and called for contributions of money, reading matter and useful articles to be used in that work. Arthur Marsh reported progress in the Medal Contest work.

Interspersed among these reports were a vocal solo by Miss Queenie Smith and a reading by Mrs. J. L. Hess, both of which were splendidly rendered.

Rev. Mr. Kerr then gave an address on "Belleville and Local Option"—a strong practical address worthy of printing entire, but space, or lack of space, forbids. After commenting somewhat on the "Rip Van Winkle like" attitude of Belleville for some years past towards the liquor traffic, and that there were now signs of an awakening from this sleep, he went on to discuss Local Option—what it is, and why Belleville should have it.

First, it was moral in its tendency, and therefore good, and worthy of support. License reduction, on the contrary, could not be supported on this basis: As Christian people we cannot or should not have any part in the license system. If we give our vote for license reduction, or for the retention of the license system in any way or form, we are endorsing the system. We are therefore face to face with the doing away of the system altogether, and on moral grounds we should go in strongly for the absolute barring of the bar in Belleville.

Also on economic grounds we should work for Local Option. It is an economic waste for any community to maintain open bars, as money spent for intoxicants is wasted, and diverted from more laudable uses. We want a bigger and a better Belleville, and the way for Belleville to awaken from her long slumber is to give herself to the solution of this question. It would infuse new life into all industries, and if we would have business booming in Belleville let us close the bar and the banishing of the bar in Belleville would do more for the lowering of taxation in Belleville than anything else. Therefore, from an economic standpoint we should work for Local Option, and secure a bigger and better Belleville.

But does Local Option pay? Has it paid in other places? Facts and figures were given from many communities in Ontario showing conclusively that it does pay, and that it paid so well that very few places in Ontario ever repealed the law. There have been complaints in some quarters, of course, but don't blame the law—rather blame the manner of enforcing the law.

We need to be more enthusiastic in this work. We need to be fanatica even, and to dare to be called fanatical if necessary, to accomplish the desired result, but let us have a sober Belleville, and faith and persistence to secure it. We need the spirit of Wolfe before the capture of Quebec when he said, "I'll do it or die." That is the spirit needed to win the fight for Local Option in Belleville.

Miss Emily Guest, of the High School teaching staff, gave a lengthy and illuminating address on "Woman's Work," showing that the woman's work in life is motherhood and the making and taking care of the home, and that this work includes the warring against all evils, mental, moral and physical that threaten the home, and also the advocacy of all good things for the upbuilding of the home. To do this most effectively all women should have a voice in Parliament.

DEATH LIST FOR A DAY

A Venerable and Respected Lady Dead In The City--Death At Colborne

We regret to annouce the decease this morning of one of our most estimable citizens, Mrs. Catherine Janet McCuaig Glass, widow of the late James McNab Glass, and daughter of the late John McCuaig, of Picton and Kingston, in her eighty-fourth year. Mrs. Glass, who was residing with her daughter, Mrs. R. J. Bell, had enjoyed her usual good health until Tuesday last, when she complained of having a little cold, which quickly developed, notwithstanding the greatest care and attention and all that medical aid could do, into pneumonia, which was the cause of her decease. The daughters surviving are Charlotte E. Bell, widow of the late R. J. Bell; Janet Anderson, wife of the Right Rev. Chas. P. Anderson, Bishop of the Diocese of Chicago; Richard Glass, of Spokane; Miss Marion Glass and Mr. Fred Glass.

MRS. ANN TURNEY.

Word has been received of the death of Mrs. Ann Turney, which occurred at Colborne yesterday. Deceased was in her 78th year and was born in Ireland. Mrs. Turney, whose maiden name was Miss Ann Frizzell, was for some years a resident of the village of Canifton, where her brother, Mr. Wm. Frizzell, resides. Deceased had been for many years a member of the Methodist church and a lady who was esteemed by all who knew her. Her husband preceded her to the tomb some years ago. Two children, one son, James W., of Rochester, and one daughter, Miss Mabel, at home, survive. Mrs. J. W. Warham, of this city, is a sister of the deceased.

PLEASING FUNCTION

Under the auspices of the T.A.S. of this city a successful and pleasing assembly was last evening held in the Academy. Upwards of 200 couples were present and indulged in dancing until an early hour this morning. Appropriate music was furnished by the Denmark Orchestra. At midnight a toothsome lunch was provided by the ladies.

FIRE LOSSES OF 1910 SMALL IN CITY

Brief Summary of Fire-Chief Campbell's Report for the Past Year

From the annual report of Chief Campbell of the Fire Department, it is ascertained that during the year 1910 twenty-nine alarms for fire were responded to by the brigade. Of this number three were false alarms, and in ten cases the damages sustained was trifling. The total losses for the year as submitted by the chief were $23,013, and of this amount $16,800 was caused by two fires, namely, the destruction of the Carlaw flour mill and the Graham barrel and cold storage premises on Station road. Had it not been for these two disastrous fires the loss would have been exceptionally light.

GOT IT.

Got Something Else Too.

"I liked my coffee strong, and I drank it strong," says a Penn. woman, telling a good story, "and although I had headaches nearly every day I just would not believe there was any connection between the two.

I had weak and heavy spells and palpitation of the heart, too, and although husband told me he thought it was coffee that made me so poorly, and did not drink it himself for he said it did not agree with him, yet I loved my coffee and thought I just couldn't do without it.

"One day a friend called at my home—that was a year ago. I spoke about how well she was looking and she said:

"Yes, and I fell well, too. It's because I'm drinking Postum in place of ordinary coffee.'

"I said, what is Postum?

"Then she told me how it was a food drink and how much better she felt since using it in place of coffee or tea, so I sent to the store and bought a package and when it was made according to directions it was so good that I have ever bought a pound of coffee since. I began to improve immediately.

"I cannot begin to tell you how much better I feel since using Postum and leaving coffee alone. My health is better than it has been for years and I cannot say enough in praise of this delicious food drink."

Take away the destroyer and put a builder to werk and Nature will do the rest. That's what you do when Postum takes coffee's place in your diet. "There's a Reason."

GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE TO-NIGHT

Ian Robertson's Visit in a Mystery Play.

Mr. Ian Robertson's visit to Canada, appearing at Griffin's Opera House to-night, awakens interest in one of the most able actors now before the public either at home or abroad.

On his present visit he rlies entirely on his latest success, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," by Jerome K. Jerome, in which he has already appeared 200 times in England, this popular play having enjoyed a run of over 500 consecutive performances in New York and London alone, its reception on the road being no less enthusiastic.

It is seldom that the personality of an actor is so remarkably in harmony with the role he is representing as is that of Ian Robertson in the mysterious and inspiring individuality of "the Stranger" in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back." Ian Robertson does not act the part as others might have done—he lives He is the Passer-by for the time being. It is that power of conviction in all that he does, added to the personal magnetism and gifts denied many other actor, which uplifts the play he appears in to the level of a classic.

Echoes Of The Mayoralty Campaign

—o—

The property owners of the city who organized themselves into an association to protect themselves against damage from floods which might result from the construction of too many piers by the Canadian Northern Railway in the Moira River, and to prevent, if possible, a policy of unfair taxation being adopted, led, after investigation, to a demand for an inquiry into the manner in which certain city property had been disposed of by the city officials This was at once seized upon by the parties affected as an attack upon them on account of their politics, though the members of the Association consisted of all parties and of all creeds.

The Mayor, while in Montreal, interviewed a Montreal Herald reporter and declared to him that because he, the Mayor, was the head of the Liberal party in Belleville, a cry was raised against him, in connection with the sale of city lots, to affect his future, that is, it is presumed, his ambition to represent the constituency of West Hastings in the Local Legislature. His vanity may have led him to that conclusion, but most people believe he raised the cry for the purpose of diverting the attention of the ratepayers from the true issue at the polls. Be that as it may, it is certain that it had its effect, for many leading Liberals voted in favor of Mayor Marsh's candidate, for no other reason, forgetting what they had promised. This was to be regretted, as no politics entered into the contest so far as Conservatives were concerned. Evidence of that fact is found in the support given by them to Liberals for Aldermanic honors.

If there ever was a municipal contest in Belleville in which party was completely ignored, so far as the Conservative party was concerned, it was in the last contest. If, however, Liberals in the future are determined to make party the watchword in municipal contests, we are inclined to the view that the Conservative party will not shirk the issue.

Those who took part in the formation of a Property Owners' Association did so from a conviction that it was necessary that such an organization should exist for their own protection in the management of civic affairs.

The demand for a full judicial inquiry into the manner of disposing of city property by city officials has led to rumors of past improper transactions by city officials sufficiently numerous to fill volumes, were an attempt made to record them all.

Among them there are insinuations that in the purchase and sale of the water works all was not as it should be, one official having stated that the parties interested pocketed some $40,000 or $50,000 profit in the transaction. If the official and the parties who are circulating these stories knew of such transactions, how much better are they than those officials of the city who permitted such a rake-off, in not exposing it at the time? Supposing it to be true, which we have every reason to believe it is not, does that justify the city officials at the present day in pursuing a similar course, or, in other words, does the commission of a wrong, if such were committed, some years ago, justify a repetition of it now, whenever an opportunity presents itself?

That there are those who advance such reasoning in order to shield members of a party proves the disreputable depths to which political partisanship has descended in this, the 20th century.

Another rumor that these same parties are circulating is that there was a rake-off in the selling of the property known as the Vinegar Works, and that some one profited by it to the extent of a city lot. Is there any foundation for that statement? We doubt that also, but if there is, let us know who the guilty parties are, so that they can be punished and made to disgorge if they used their positions as civic officials to so benefit themselves.

Let us have a judicial inquiry into all these charges of civic maladministration, and ascertain if they are true, no matter by whom committed. One thing is certain, if one half is based upon truth we have been living in a time when cheating and stealing in municipal affairs is looked upon as legitimate plunder and morally right.

Charges have been made of what is believed to be improper dealings in city property by city officials, and the citizens of Belleville will be recreant in duty to themselves and the city if they do not push the case to a final issue.

The Hudson Bay Railway

People of Canada, who, like the grain growers, are anxious to see the Hudson Bay Railway operated as well as owned by the Government of Canada, should ponder on the situation in which the Government finds itself.

The Dominion Government has no railway line of its own west of Montreal. Thus the proposal that it should build and operate the Hudson Bay Railway means this:—That it should operate a line which begins at the Pas Mission on the Saskatchewan, many miles away from any of the western centres of population, and runs to Hudson Bay through an uninhabited country with few resources of which we know, and that it should handle an exceedingly spasmodic traffic. For two or three months in the fall there will be a tremendous rush of grain, requiring a great deal of rolling stock; and for nine or ten months there will be very little traffic. Thus the Government will find itself obliged to operate a railway with no local traffic, and needing a great quantity of rolling stock which will stand idle for three-fourths of the year. A large railway system could draw these extra cars off into other parts of its lines during winter, spring and early summer; but a Government Hudson Bay Railway will not have this opportunity of economical operation. Thus the rates must be high or the line will yield enormous deficits.

Now, let us suppose that the Intercolonial, instead of stopping at Montreal, went straight on to Winnipeg. Suppose that it had the right to use the National Transcontinental from Quebec to Winnipeg. Then there would be a great system, over 3,000 miles long with abundance of rolling stock, running its trains into Winnipeg. See hod this would affect the Hudson Bay Railway scheme. The Government would own this great system and the Hudson Bay line as well. It would be a simple matter to obtain running rights over some of the railways between Winnipeg and the southern terminus of the Hudson Bay line; or to buy some such line; oro to build it. Then the Hudson Bay line would be part of a system some 3,000 miles long, from Port Churchill to Winnipeg, from Winnipeg to Quebec, from Quebec to Halifax and St. John. When the autumn rush to Hudson Bay came on cars could be run to this end of the line; when it was over they could be turned over to other parts of the system.

But the Government cannot do this. It has no right to run the Intercolonial over the National Transcontinental; though it is building that line. It cannot use Intercolonial rolling stock on the Hudson Bay line.

The Conservative party urged that the Government of the Dominion, instead of paying nine-tenths of the cost and owning nothing of the National Transcontinental, should pay the whole cost and own the whole line. Had its advice been taken the whistle of the I.C.R. locomotive would have been heard in Winnipeg. It was not, and now the Government can meet the reasonable demand of the west for Government operation of the Hudson Bay line only at ruinous expense.

Of course, the situation could be retrieved if the Government of Canada were strong enough to insist on a revision of the G.T.P. bargain granting this right to the I.C.R.

PUBLIC TRUSTEE HAS WIDE POWERS

Some Facts Respecting the Working of the New Department in England--Is Self Sustaining--Official Is Guaranteed By the State as Executor and Trustee

It is understood that the Ontario Government have in contemplation the establishment of a department known as the Public Trustee, similar to that which obtains in England, so ably administered by Mr. Charles John Stewart in Clement's Inn, London. In an interview with Mr. Stewart in a recent number of The Graphic, the duties of a Public Trustee are clearly set forth. In reply to the question, "What a Public Trustee really is?" Mr. Stewart answers:

"He is an official guaranteed by the State, and capable of undertaking all duties of executor and trustee whether under a will or settlement, and for all classes of the community, whether rich or poor."

The Public Trustee Act came into force in England on Jan. 1st, 1908, largely owing to the fact that the public conscience had been shocked in recent years by the frauds committed by persons who had trust

Continuing the interview Mr. Stewart goes on to say regarding the Act: "It is quite in keeping with the modern way of bringing up our young men and women with the knowledge of what citizenship means for them, and what they are responsible for to the State. I think it is evident that one of the most valuable things the State has lately given them is the Public Trustee, because in him they have secured an official, guaranteed by the State, and available to them for the protection of their property after death, one who will faithfully carry out their wishes as to the disposition of it. And more, provision is made for the protection of their property during life should they desire. They can make a settlement either on themselves or on others, appointing the Public Trustee either assured that the terms of the settlement will be carried out. Many have come to me—men and women—who desire to be not only assisted in the management of their property, but to be protected against the possibility of their being tempted to waste their capital—to be protected against themselves, in fact. And then, again in cases where the estate is under $5,000, say, and where the people are in poor circumstances, should a beneficiary be of the opinion that the estate is being maladministered by the trustees under the will, the Public Trustee has power to undertake the administration and compel those administering it to hand it over to him.

POWER OF INVESTMENT.

In respect to investments Mr. Stewart says that he has the full power that any private trustee has of investing according to the terms of the investment clause in the will or trust. A branch of the department is especially provided for dealing with the difficult and highly skilled work of investment.

The Act under which the Public Trustee is appointed provides that althought the department is to be self-supporting it is not to be profit-making, the intention being that trusts are to be administered at cost price. The fees are of two kinds, one on capital and one on income, the principle which underlies them being that the capital of the estate which is preserved intact by the Public Trustee for the benefit of all concerned may fairly be asked to pay some part of the fee, and that some contribution should also come from the person having the present benefit of enjoying the income produced from the property so safeguarded and protected.

Mr. Stewart started out in 1908 with a staff of five in four rooms, and he now finds a staff of 110 in twenty-seven rooms none too great. The value of the business transacted by the department is now over thirty millions sterling.

In the second annual report by the Public Trustee it is pointed out that after providing for all expenses, the receipts of the department for 1909 exceeded the expenditure by £244, as compared with a deficit in 1908 of £3,271.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

SOME people don't believe in taking chances. Although the chances are 1 in 10,000,000 that the earth will be struck by a comet, every time a new comet is hailed some persons have to send for the doctor.

It is a good thing that the census is taken only once in ten years. The disappointment, if suffered oftener, might prove too much for some weak hearts in thriving towns.

Trying to coax a balky automobile up a steep incline makes a man wish for the good old days of horseful carriages.

The boy who tells his father a tale of guilelessness and gets away with it thinks the old man must have been an awful mollycoddle when he was a kid.

A clear, cool day is most annoying to a woman whose only lightweight wrap is a raincoat.

There is more pleasure in pursuit than possession, especially if your butterfly turns out to be a hornet.

When the furnace balks, the electricity gets off the track and the hired girl leaves all in one evening a woman discovers that life is several strenuous things at once.

Practical.

"I am down to my last penny," said the street mendicant, addressing a man who looked as though he might have money and sympathy, "and I don't know what to do."

"Only have one penny left?"

"That is all."

"There is a box around the corner that you can drop it into and get a stick of gum."

Conscientious.

"Why don't you go to work?"

"What! Me?"

"Yes."

"I am maintaining a principle."

"What principle?"

"It will seem were I to go to work as if I were encouraging the lazy fellows in their idleness by doing work that they should do."

63 Years of Age— Younger Than at 40

Mrs. J. W. McPeek, of Herbert, Sask., Can., is more than pleased with the results obtained from the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, which has been of great benefit to her family. She says in her letter: "I have been using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for the past ten years. It is the best health giver I ever used. I am now 63 years of age, but I am looking and feeling younger than at 40. My friends all say, 'How young you look!'

"It has also proved just the thing for my daughter, who lives in Ohio. She had such weak nerves and heart that the slightest move would startle her. Your wonderful remedy has practically overcome this, and has done her more good than all other treatments."

Mr. McPeek writes about his remarkable experience: "I am 67 years of age, and for a number of years I haven't been strong. I have a weak heart and for some time was almost helpless. Lately I have been using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, and it has helped me wonderfully. I sincerely recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to every one."

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

He closed the journal and handed to Pyne a memorandum taken down letter by letter by a sailor as Brand read the signal:

"Mother sends her love to Enid."

"Did mother ever convey her love to Enid before?" asked Pyne.

"No."

"Then I call that neat. I take off my hat to Stanhope. He and mamma have had a heart-to-heart talk."

Brand leaned his head on his hands, with clenched fists covering his ears. There was a period of utter silence until the lighthouse-keeper rose to light the lamp.

Pyne watched him narrowly.

"I may be trespassing on delicate ground," he said at last. "If I am, you are not the sort of man to stand on ceremony. In the States, you know when the authorities want to preserve a park section they don't say: 'Please do not walk on the grass.' They put up a board which reads: 'Keep off. We never kick. We're used to it.'"

"My notice-board, if required, will be less curt, at any rate," replied Brand, and they faced each other. Though their words were light, no pleasant conceit lurked in their minds. There was a question to be asked and answered, and it held the issues o life and death.

"What did you mean just now by saying, 'if all goes well here?' Is ther any special reason why things shoul not go well?"

The young Philadelphian might have been hazarding an inquiry about a matter of trivial interest, so calm was he, so smooth his utterance. But Brand had made no mistake in estimating this youngster's force of character, nor did he seek to temporize.

He extended an arm towards the reef.

"You hear that?" he said.

"Yes."

"It may boil that way for weeks."

"So I have been told."

"By whom?"

"Mr. Emmett told me."

"Ah! He and I have discussed the matter already. Yet I imagine that neither he, nor any other man in the place save myself, grasps the true meaning of the fact."

"I've been theorizing," said Pyne "It occurred to me that this light isn' here for amusement."

He looked up at the lamp an smiled. The pillar, in those days must have been a haunt of illusions for Brand, like Constance and Pyn himself in the case of Mrs. Vansittart thought he caught an expression familiar to his eyes long before he had seen that clear-cut, splendidly intelligent face.

But there was no time for idle speculation. He glanced into the well of the stairs to make sure that no one was ascending.

Then he approached nearer to Pyn and said in an intense whisper:

"It is folly to waste words with you I have reasoned this thing out an now I will tell you what I have decided. I will take the watch fron eight until twelve. At twelve you wil relieve me, and I will go below to secure provisions and water sufficien to maintain the lives of my daughters you and myself, for a few hours longer than the others. By right, if I followed the rules I have promised to obey, I alone should live. That is impossible. A Spartan might do it, but I cannot abandon my girls and yet retain my senses. I trust you because I must have a confederate. If the weather does not break before tomorrow night we must barricade the stairs—and fight—if necessary."

His face was drawn and haggard his eyes blazing. He shook as one in the first throes of fever. He seemed to await his companion's verdict with an over-powering dread lest any attempt should be made to question the justice of his decree.

"Yes. I figured it out that way, too," said Pyne. "It's queer, isn't it, to be in such a fix when there's all sorts of help within call, so to speak. We might as well be in a mine closed up by an explosion. And, I'll tell you what—I'm real sorry for you."

Brand, collapsing under the strain, sank into a chair.

"It is an awful thing," he moaned, "to condemn so many men, women and children, to such a death."

A spasm of pain made Pyne's lips tremulous for an instant. He had forgotten Elsie and Mamie.

But his voice was fully under control when he spoke again.

"You can count on me in the deal in all but one thing," he said.

The older man looked up fiercely. What condition could be imposed in the fulfilment of a duty so terrible?

"I am here by chance," went on Pyne. "One of your daughters may have told you that Mrs. Vansittar came from New York to marry my uncle. Anyhow you would know sh was dear to him by his message today. She is sort of in my charge, and I can't desert her. It's hard luck, as don't care a cent for her. She's the kind of woman old men adore—fascinating, bird-like creatures—when the cage is gilded."

Brand sprang to his feet and faced up to the trimming-stage. When his hands were on the lamp he felt surer of himself. It gave him strength during the hurricane and it would strengthen him now.

"There can be no exceptions," he said harshly. Pyne waited until the lighthouse-keeper rejoined him.

"I ought to have put my proposition before you first and made a speech afterwards," he said. "Constance and Enid will join you here when you say the word, but I will be on the other side of the barricade."

"Nonsense!" cried Brand. "You have no right to thrust away the chance that is given you. You saved all these people once. Why should you die uselessly?"

"What! Suppose it pans out that way. Suppose we live a couple of weeks and escape. Am I to face the old man and tell him—the truth? No, sir. You don't mean it. You wouldn' do it yourself. What about that shark the girls told me of. I can guess just what happened. He wanted the light refreshment in the boat. Did you scoot back when you saw his fin? I'm a heap younger than you, Mr. Brand, but that bluff doesn't go."

"Thank Heaven, we have twenty-four hours yet!" murmured Brand.

"It will be all the same when we have only twenty-four seconds. Let us fix it that way right now. Don't you see, it will be easier to deceive the girls? And there's another reason. Barricade and shoot as you like it will be a hard thing to keep three score desperate men boxed up down below. When they begin to diet on colza there will be trouble. A few of us, ready to take chances, will be helpful. Some of them may have to die quick, you know."

Brand closed his eyes in sheer affright. In that way he tried to shut out a vision.

"Be it so," he gasped. "May the Lord help us."

It was the responsibility that mastered him. Judges on the bench often break down when they sentence a criminal to death, but what judge, humane, tender-hearted and God-fearing, ever pronounced the doom of seventy-eight people snatched from a merciful death to be steeped in horrors.

At last his iron will predominated. The knowledge that the path of duty lay straight before him cheered his tortured soul. No man could say he erred in trying to save his children. That was a trust as solemn as any conferred by the Elder Brethren of the Trinity.

He placed a hand on Pyne's shoulder, for this youngster had become dear to him.

"Had I a son," he said, "I should wish him to be like you. Let us strive to forget the evils that threaten us. Brooding is useless. If need be, you will take charge of the lower deck. There is starvation allowance for three more days at the worst. But I hate the thought of starting the new scale to-morrow."

"It may not be necessary."

"Candidly, I fear it will. I know the Cornish coast too well. When bad weather sets in from the south-west at this season it holds for a week at the lowest computation."

"Is there no other way? Can nothing be done out there?"

"Able men, the best of sailors, the most experienced of engineers have striven for half a century to devise some means of storm communication with a rock lighhouse placed as this is. They have failed. There is none."

"That's good," cried Pyne quite pleasantly. "Where is your pouch? I feel like a smoke. If I hadn't fired that question at you I should have wasted a lot of time in hard thinking."

Brand had to scheme that night to reach the store-room unobserved. The Falcon, steaming valiantly to her observation post near the buoy, aided him considerably. He permitted the night watch to gather in the service-room whilst he supplied the men with tobacco, and stationed the officer on the gallery to observe the trawler in case she showed any signal lights.

Since the attempt on the lock Constance gave the key to her father after each visit. For the rest, the inmates of the pillar were sunk in the lethargy of unsatisfied hunger. Constance and Enid, utterly worn out with fatigue, were sound asleep in the kitchen, and the tears coursed down the man's face as he acted the part of a thief in securing the measured allowance of flour and bacon for one meal. The diet of one hungry meal for eighty-one people gave twenty-seven hungry meals for three. He ought to have taken more, but he set his teeth and refused the ungrateful task.

It is oft-times easy for a man to decide upon a set course, but hard to follow it.

"A week!" he murmured. "Perhaps ten days! That is all. Pray Heaven I may not go mad before they die!"

Pyne, watching the light, knew that Brand had succeeded. The Falcon went; gradually the watch dispersed.

"Where is the hoard?" asked Pyne, making believe that they were playing some comedy.

"Hidden in the kitchen lockers. I could obtain only distilled water. You must persuade the girls in the morning that something went wrong with the apparatus."

As opportunity offered, Brand transferred the tins to the lockers of the service-room. Pyne, who missed nothing, shook his head when it became evident that the last consignment was safely stored away.

"Not much there," he commented.

"I will take no more!" was the fierce cry.

"You ought to."

"I refuse I tell you! Don't torture me further."

"Any chance of a row in the morning? The purser and Mr. Emmett mount guard when the store-room is opened."

"I acted my role well. I built up the vacancies with empty tins."

"My sakes!" cried Pyne pityingly, "you deserve to win through."

"I think my heart will break," muttered Brand. "But look! The lamp! It needs adjusting."

Indeed, a fresh gale seemed to be springing up. The wind-vane having gone, the index was useless. It was not until a burst of spray drenched the lantern that Brand knew of a change taking place. The wind was backing round towards the north.

The barometer fell slightly. It portended either more wind and dry weather, or less wind accompanied by rain. Who could tell what would happen? Fair or foul, hurricane or calm, all things seemed to be the ungovernable blundering of blind chance.

When the rock was left in peace after the fall of the tide, Pyne promised to keep the light in order if Brand would endeavor to sleep until day-break. Rest was essential to him. He would assuredly break down under the strain if the tension were too long maintained, and a time was coming when he would need all his strength, mental and physical.

"Here have I been snoozing in odd corners ever since I came aboard," urged the American, "and I have nothing to do but starve quietly. It's ridiculous. My funeral is dated; yours isn't. You can't be on deck all the time, you know. Now, just curl up and count sheep jumping over a wall or any old game of the sort until your eyes close of their own accord."

Brand yielded. He lay on the hard boards, with a chair cushion for pillow; all the rugs rescued by Constance were now needed in the hospital. In less than a minute he was sound asleep.

"That was a close call," mused Pyne. "In another hour he would have cracked up. He's a wonder, anyhow."

The lighthouse-keeper slept until long after daybreak. Pyne refused to allow anyone to disturb him.

Soon after seven o'clock the watch reported that two vessels were approaching from the Bay. One was the Falcon, and the sailors soon made out that the other was the Trinity tender from Plymouth.

When they were both nearing the buoy, Brand was aroused.

It was evident that the brief rest had cleared his brain and restored his self-confidence. Instantly he took up the thread of events, and his first words showed how pleased he was that someone of authority in the lighthouse service should be in active communication with him.

Through his glasses he distinguished Stanhope on board the Trinity steamer, standing by the side of the inspecting-officer of the South-Coast lights. Other officials were there but near Stanhope was a tall elderly man, unknown, and certainly a stranger in Penzance.

The Falcon was now chartered by press-men, so the civilian on the official boat was evidently a person of consequence. Indeed, Brand imagined long before Pyne was able to verify the impression, that the newcomer was Mr. Cyrus J. Traill, whom he had failed to notice in the poor light of the previous evening.

He knew quite well that the experienced chief of the lighthouse service would appreciate fully the disabilities under which he labored, with eighty-one mouths to feed from a stock already far below the three months' maximum.

The first telegraphed question betrayed the prevalent anxiety.

"Hope all is well?"

What was he to say? Was it not best to speak boldly and let the men know the truth, not alone as to their present desperate plight but revealing the measures he had devised for the protection of the light? He could not make up his mind to launch out into a full explanation that instant.

So he signalled:

"Everyone alive, but many cases of grave collapse."

Stanhope was again the signaler—evidently he had arranged matters with the Admiral at Portsmouth—so Brand expected the prompt reply:

"How are Constance and Enid?"

"Quite well and cheerful."

The tall man near Stanhope bent closer.

"Are Mrs. Vansittart and Pyne all right?"

Brand assumed that the lady was in no worse condition than others. Constance, telling him the state of the sick during a hasty visit, had not mentioned her name.

So he sent the needed assurance, and went on forlornly:

"Suppose no effort can be made to open communication?"

To his great surprise the answer came:

"We are constructing a raft. When the tide falls this afternoon we will try what can be done."

Welcome Words to Women

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

GREAT REVIVAL AT ELDORADO

Harvest of Souls Reaped and Financial Results are Most Satisfactory

The great revival which began at Eldorado last November has been most successful in its results. Not only has there been a large in-gathering of new members (about 60), but an adult Bible Class has been organized and has now a membership of about 30. There is also material for a splendid Epworth League. Another meeting has just closed at "Union" with a in-gathering of 35 new members. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Ross, is most heartily sustained by his officials and people in the great work which is n progress. No outside help has been solicited; the pastor has been the leader.

There has also been splendid success along financial lines. About $400 has been placed in the envelopes for the running expenses of the church during the past five months, the missionary meetings have been most successful and $460 has been paid on the pastor's salary in the half year. The churches on this field are full of people. From 150 to 200 people meet at the Eldorado church for fellowship each Sabbath, and people walk miles through the snow to attend the services.

Bearing Down Pain.

What woman does not at some time or other experience these dreadful bearing down pains. Mrs. E. Griffith, of Main street, Hepworth, Ont., says:

"A heavy bearing down pain had settled across my back and sides. I was often unable to stoop or straighten myself up. Many times each night I would have to leave my bed with the frequent and irregular secretion of the kidneys, and just as done on in the morning as have to let my housework stand Nothing I had tried would benefit me. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and concluded that I would try them, which I did, and soon found the long sought relief. My back strengthened and I began to feel stronger. I now enjoy a night's sleep without being disturbed and feel grateful to Booth's Kidney Pills for what they did for me."

Raising the Limit

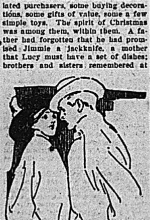
A Story of What Happened on Christmas Eve

By Jeanne Olive Loizeaux

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

It was Christmas eve in a city. The rich were preparing by the expenditure of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of dollars to enjoy the festivities, those in moderate circumstances piecing out what they did not have by working with their own hands, the poor—alas, the poor—going without the joys others were blessed with, except where the good Lord sent some benevolent person to hunt them up and bestow upon them a dinner or a few toys for the children—the children that it would seem Christmas is especially for.

The streets were crowded with belated purchasers, some buying decorations, some gifts of value, some a few simple toys. The spirit of Christmas was among them, within them. A father had forgotten that he had promised Jimmie a jackknife, a mother that Lucy must have a set of dishes; brothers and sisters remembered at the last moment some forgotten article and were hurrying hither and thither to supply the deficiency. There were lovers who had but lately plighted their troth carrying home gifts.



"WE'LL START SQUARE."

Big Jim could not escape the hurry, the laughter, the package laden throng. He hated the bedizened windows, the greetings, even the strings of turkeys and chickens in the market windows. He hated Christmas time. And, worst of all, he hated the word home. And it was being rubbed in. Why not let bygones be? For two years he had not even heard of his mother, and then she had written that Mariana had married John Foster. That was natural, of course. John had stayed by his job, and John was not dependent on cards mainly for a living.

Big Jim, with his hands in his pockets, fingered the roll of bills and the loose money, over $300. He had been lucky last night, but tonight, like as not, Shorty or some one would get it away from him. He turned down a side street and cursed beneath his breath as a little Italian with a basket on his shoulder proffered him a small plaster Christ. He thrust out his chin and passed Charley's place, for he had already reached his limit in drinks. That chin kept him from passing his set limit in anything. He was no weakling. He kept his word and was bad by choice, not through lack of will.

The very sleighbells jingled "home," and he hated to think of himself in that connection. He would have gone to his boarding house, but no one, save perhaps Shorty, who had deserted his wife, would be there—they all had wives or kids or mothers or some girl to make merry with, to be kind to, if only once a year. Then into the city clangor came the beat of a drum and a singing and strumming—the Salvation Army. In their march they stopped near him—he could catch the words of the high, coarse tenor:

"Come home! Come home!
Why don't you all come home?"

The song finished, he caught words of the harangue begun by a young girl with a clear voice.

"Yes, come home! Come back to your real selves! Quit your sin, your drinkin' an' gamblin' an' be decent, boys! It pays! It pays, girls! Go home to your mothers! Sin ain't pleasure, an' it costs dear in tears an' human misery! Come home!" He slunk away disgustedly. It seemed there was no escape.

It was too early to play poker. Well, he could go to the postoffice at least for his mail. But here, too, was Christmas—hurrying crowds, laughter. And escaping a bevy of young girls, he ran into and nearly knocked over a shabby old woman, sweet faced, wistful eyed, with trembling mittened hands. He put her on her feet again almost tenderly, apologizing, but she peered up into his face—a kind face with good eyes in spite of all.

"I was waitin' for my girl," she began with the volubility of lonely age. "I ain't heard from her in a year, my Molly. She would be sure to come for letters Christmas time, wouldn't she think? P'raps you know her, Mary Shane?" she asked eagerly, not minding his shake of the head. "She's pretty, is Molly, with big blue eyes an' curly yellow hair, an' little, like a doll. Do you s'pose somethin's happened her? She might—just forget to write mightn't she? They said she hadn't worked to the store for six months! Do you s'pose—she's—dead?" The cracked old voice was a mere whisper. The young man's heart softened.

"I'll tell you," he answered, "I expect she's all right—married and safe, likely, being so pretty—and good!" The mother snatched gratefully at the words. "Married an' safe, I reckon," she repeated. "An' so happy she's forgettin' to write—married an' safe! An' —good!"

"So you go home," he advised. "You will hear from her all right if you wait. You'll get sick here." He left her and at the door ran head-on into Shorty. He was glad to see even Shorty, although that worthy had "a grouch on." The two went down the street together and paused at an alley where newsboys, with an eye out for the police, were shooting craps.

"Their game's more fun than ours and quicker," growled Shorty, "and matching pennies is quicker yet and even more intelligent. I'm tired of being a fool. I've got $300 in the world in this roll. I'll match pennies, two out of three for it. Heads! What you got?"

"Two hundred dollars. I'll go you!"

They stooped to the pavement and matched. Big Jim's luck held. Silently the other handed over the roll. Jim laughed shortly.

"I'll raise the limit in this 'gentlemen's game.' Two out of three the winner—to quit this life and be decent!" Shorty nodded. "Settle down and earn a living an' get married tonight! An' go home an' behave!" Again Shorty nodded, but he amended: "The loser to end it all. He jerked his thumb in the direction of the river. Big Jim reached his hand, and the men shook hands. Just then a policeman sauntered past, importantly eying them. The newsboys scattered. Then the two stooped again in the electric light and matched pennies on the pavement. It was Jim's luck again. Shorty laughed, a little enviously.

"You're a square sport, Jim. You'll keep your word." Then he turned on his heel toward the river.

Jim stood thinking awhile till a policeman passing bade him "move on." Then he passed slowly back toward the main street. It had grown full evening, and the crowd had thickened—the last night before Christmas. He was pushed to the edge of the walk, where people had gathered thick as bees round a fleeing queen. The drum was beating—the Salvation Army again! A few men were laughing, all trying to see. Jim shouldered his way to the front. The soldiers had surrounded an overdressed young girl and knelt about her. Her cheeks were crimson with excitement. She had not yet got to rouge. Her curling yellow hair extravagantly dressed was blowing in the wind; tears rolled down her babyish face. She was very pretty and little, like a doll.

He knew the girl. It was Babe Shannon. He caught her eye, and she crimsoned a deeper hue.

"Come to yourself! Come home!" pleaded the soldiers. "Go back to your mother! Be good! Nothing else pays!" She nodded assent to them.

"I'll—go home—but let me out of here now." They yielded reluctantly, but the young man forced himself to her and took her arm. She shook off his touch like fire.

"It's you and your like have brought me here," she flamed. "I've promised to go home, and I can't. I ask you: Can I? What chance would I have? My mother"— But he seized her arm again and walked her rapidly away from the curious crowd down a side street, where it was quieter.

"Babe," he pleaded, "I'm not much, I ain't fit, but if you'll marry me we'll begin square. You give me a chance and I'll give you one." She faced him in astonishment and unbelief.

"My name ain't Babe; it's Molly. What do you mean, talking about—getting married? A year ago—just a year ago—if you'd said that it would have saved me. Now"—

"Now—it will save both of us. I mean it, Molly. You're a thousand times too good for me. But marry me and I'll take you home and I'll stick by you. You can tell your mother you've been married a year. You ought to have been, and we'll make it true." Her eyes searched his face, and he pushed back his hat to help her, to give her a chance at his eyes—kind, steady eyes, too old for so young a man, but still clear. The girl knew she could trust them. Suddenly she put her arm up before her face and began to cry, but she nodded through her tears.

"Marry me tonight," he said, "and tomorrow I'll take you home. I'll wake everybody and get a license, and I'll take care of you. We've got $200 to begin on. Come to the postoffice first." He drew her along with him. Once inside, she waited while he made out and sent an order for $300 and mailed it to Shorty's wife. Then with a smile he turned to the girl, who made shift to smile back at him. He took her hand and, holding her close to his side, again went out upon the street. But this time he was no slouching loiterer—he had a license to procure, a justice of the peace or a preacher to find. And then at the station they would buy tickets for home; there would be time to ask her where home might be.

As they swung past the corner the squat, velvet voiced Italian from the store in his basket offered the man a small plaster image of the Christ child. Big Jim tossed the man a dollar and put the little symbol of good will to men into Molly Shane's willing hand. Her lips murmured a silent prayer—a prayer that they might be good again, that she might be good. She made silent vows of immaculate wifehood. And she knew that, being good, they would find their happiness together.

A MODERN MIRACLE!

HE HAD ECZEMA FOR 25 YEARS AND DOCTORS SAID "NO CURE."

Yet Zam-Buk Has Worked Complete Cure.

This is the experience of a man of high reputation, widely known in Montreal, and whose case can readily be investigated. Mr. T. M. Marsh, the gentleman referred to, lives at 101 Delorimier Avenue, Montreal, and has lived there for years. For twenty-five years he had eczema on his hands and wrists. The disease first started in red blotches which itched, and when scratched became painful. Bad sores followed, which discharged, and the discharge spread the disease until his hands were one raw, painful mass of sores. Just think of this state continuing for twenty five years.

In that time four eminent medical men tried to cure him, and each gave up the case as hopeless in the end. Naturally Mr. Marsh tried remedies of all kinds, but he also, at last gave it up. For two years he had to wear gloves day and night so terrible was the pain and itching when the air got to the sores.

Then came Zam-Buk! He tried it, just as he had tried hundreds of remedies before. But he soon found out that Zam-Buk was different. Within a few weeks there were distinct signs of benefit, and a little perseverence with this great herbal balm resulted in what he had given up all hope of—a complete cure! And the cure was no temporary cure. It was permanent. He was cured nearly three years ago. Interviewed the other day Mr. Marsh said: "The cure which Zam-Buk worked has been absolutely permanent. From the day that I was cured to the present moment I have had no trace of eczema, and I feel sure it will never return. Having suffered for twenty-five years I naturally concluded that my case was incurable, and I regard my cure as a modern miracle."

If you suffer from any skin trouble, cut out this article, write across it the name of the paper, and mail it, with one cent stamp to pay return postage, to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. We will forward you by return a free trial box of Zam-Buk. All druggists and stores sell this famous remedy, 50c. a box, or three for $1.25. Refuse harmful substitutes.

Caused Business Depression.

Kingston, Jan. 11.—At Sharbot Lake the Farmers' Bank failure has caused depression in business, and many depositors and shareholders are wondering what the outcome will be.

Keeping his nose continually down to the grindstone is apt to give any man sharp features.

Some Resemblance.

Under the spreading chestnut tree
The village jokesmith sits
And makes, if he has any luck,
His living by his wits.
He does not swing the massive sledge
Like any blacksmith stout,
But still in working at his trade
He has his hammer out.

Catching Up.

"What a fool I am!" exclaimed the husband.

"Just discover it, dear?" said his wife sweetly.

"Discover what?"

"You always were a year or two behind the rest of us."

Evidence.

"Brown thinks his partner's wife has mighty poor judgment."

"That so?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Marrying Brown was optional with her."

Lingering Remnant.

"I didn't suppose you were superstitious."

"I'm not."

"Yet you confess to a belief in signs."

"Only dollar signs."

Just Wondered.

"By the way, did you know Julius Caesar?"

"Of course not. He has been dead for about 2,000 years."

"That's so, isn't it? Say, how long have you been dead?"

Doesn't Take Long.

"He tells all he knows."

"Is that so?"

"That's a fact."

"Then what does he do?"

Just a Lawyer.

"Is he a doctor of philosophy?"

"No; just of fee-law-so-fee."

Dissecting the Bluff.

When called by some one unafraid
A bluff will melt away,
Serenely from the landscape fade,
Nor for an encore stay.
Say "Boo!" and look it in the eye
And you will never fail,
When it has measured your deft,
To see the bluff turn pale.

Sit down and let it have its way,
Nor offer a protest,
And it will want you to obey
And work that it may rest,
And things will go from worse to worse
If you refuse to fight,
For it will fancy in your purse
It has a vested right.

But meet it with a frowning front,
Its pretentions scoff,
And show it in a manner blunt
The place where it gets off,
And it will meekly fold its tents,
Prepare at once to quit,
Take baggage, bag and bluster hence
And like an Arab flit.

On timid, unobtrusive souls
It feeds and asks for more,
And as its eye in frenzy rolls
It darkly hints at gore,
But penetrate its thin disguise,
Be merciless and rough,
And you will learn, to your surprise,
A bluff is just a bluff.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

CODIFICATION NEEDED.

Work of Rearranging Mining Laws Given to J. M. Clark.

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—There will be a federal codification of the mining laws of Canada. The work will begin at once. The Minister of Mines has placed in the hands of J. M. Clark, K.C., Toronto, the work of preparing the statute, which is to be drawn up on the basis that the disposition of mining lands will be vested in the Department of Mines.

This is the result of the agitation of the Canadian Mining Institute and particularly of the action of the special committee of the institute of which G. G. S. Lindsey was chairman.

The selection of J. M. Clark, K.C., to prepare a federal mining law to deal with all mining rights is a tribute to his capacity, and a recognition of his identification with notable mining litigation for the past decade.

In quite a number of constitutional cases, reaching through the Canadian courts to the Privy Council, Mr. Clark has figured and invariably with success. The same is true regarding large mining cases in which a long and extended experience has given him such mastery as few of his compeers possess.)

Quite recently the Ophir mining case, which he brought to a successful conclusion through a tedious and tortuous course of litigation, ending in the Privy Council, has excited the attention of the legal profession and of the public, both because it decided the question of the Indian title so far as Ontario is concerned, and because a similar situation is becoming acute in British Columbia.

Commissioner Called to Washington.

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—Mr. John McDougald, commissioner of customs, the Government's leading authority of tariff matters, left Monday for Washington, having been summoned presumably to render expert assistance to the Canadian Ministers in the reciprocity negotiations.

Hon. James McMullen, in the days when he was not a Senator, but a member of Parliament and a militant member of the Liberal Opposition, believed firmly in reciprocity with the United States as a panacea for Canada's trade infirmities. His opinions, like those of many of his old-time colleagues, have undergone a change. Senator McMullen, who has returned to Ottawa to resume his sessional duties, speaking of the negotiations now in progress at Washington, expressed the hope that no treaty of reciprocity would result. He quite endorses the stand taken by Hon. Clifford Sifton in his address on Conservation, namely, that this is no time to take down the bars.

Engine Falls Into Water.

Vancouver, Jan. 11.—While engaged in shunting in the Great Northern trestle over False Creek, in the heart of Vancouver, an engine dropped through an open draw span at 8.30 o'clock yesterday morning and plunged into twenty feet of water. Engineer Baker remained in the cab and was cut on the head. Fireman Varrell jumped into the water. Both men were rescued from their chilly bath.

The wreckage has cut off the approach to the Great Northern station, and passenger service is being conducted at a sub-station on the main line, south of the scene of the accident. The bridge span was opened to allow the passage of a tug. Engineer Baker failed to see the open span until too late to pull up his train of freight cars.

New President for U. S. Steel.

New York, Jan. 11.—James A. Farrell of Brooklyn, is the choice of the finance committee of the U. S. Steel Corporation to succeed Wm. Ellis Corey as president of the corporation. Wm. Farrell has been the president of the United States Products Co. ever since its organization in 1903, and has been connected with the manufacturing and commercial departments of iron and steel industry for more than twenty-five years.

It is understood that when elected to the presidency of the corporation on Jan. 24 he will confine his activities to the practical and technical sides of the vast organization.

May Sue For Breach of Trust.

Fingal, Ont., Jan. 11.—Yeomen of this neighborhood, who had $50,000 on deposit in the Farmers' Bank, will meet this week, to decide upon some plan to protect their interests. A deputation of shareholders will wait on the Attorney-General to ask for intervention, in case any move is made to sacrifice the substance of the bank, or undue haste to realize the assets. Civil action against the directors and officials for breach of trust is talked of.

Want to Get on "the Force."

St. Catharines, Jan. 11.—Chief Green has submitted his annual report to the police commission, showing $1,860 in fees and fines, being $587 more than in the previous twelve months; 126 doors of stores and banks were found unlocked at night. For two vacant positions on the force between forty and fifty applications were received. One man, Morris Hedden of Campden, was taken on. Last year three constables were discharged.

May Desert Queen's.

Kingston, Jan. 11.—Although the medical faculty of Queen's have no intimation with regard to the resignation of Dr. Fred. Etherington, senior professor of anatomy, it is persistently rumored about the college that the professor will quit Queen's at the conclusion of the present session. It is understood he intends to practice surgery in one of the large American cities.

A Storm Centre.

Woodstock, Jan. 11.—The G.T.R. Hotel, one of three places where licenses have been cut off within the last three years, is again a storm centre. Largely signed petitions will be presented to the commissioners both for and against the granting of a license.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Kaiser's speech at the opening of the Diet offended the Democrats and Liberals.

The presbyteries of Montreal, Ottawa and Orangeville voted in favor of church union.

Hon. Sydney Fisher and Mr. C. C. James addressed the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union meeting at Guelph.

A bull dog kept a dozen London policemen at bay when they tried to enter the room in which its master had committed suicide.

The question of church union was decided by the Ottawa presbytery at a meeting yesterday. The vote showed 36 in favor and 5 against union.

Restitution to the amount of $1,300,000 was made yesterday by men who were indicted in connection with the Pennsylvania state capitol frauds.

It is announced King George will open Parliament on Feb. 6. He will be accompanied by the Queen, and there will be a full state ceremony.

The lumber barge Isabella Sands disappeared from the dock at Owen Sound with her crew on board and it is supposed she was blown out into the bay.

Dr. Trembley of the Quebec Board of Health, left for Alluemette Island, on the Ottawa River, where some two dozen cases of smallpox are giving a great deal of trouble to the local authorities.

According to a report the Ontario Powder Co. has gone into a merger, with head office at Montreal. C. A. MacPherson, interviewed in regard to the matter, would neither confirm nor deny the report.

Boy Refused Admission.

London, Jan. 11.—Much astonishment and indignation were expressed by members of the Liverpool Cotton Exchange yesterday at the fact that the American immigration officers had refused to allow Charles Heape, the thirteen-year-old son of Frederick Heape, a prominent cotton broker and member of the Exchange, to land in America with his uncle, H. J. Munro. A cablegram from New York states that in spite of Mr. Munro's energetic protests, the lad was sent to Ellis Island to be dealt with by the Immigration Board. The Cunard Company, by whose line Mr. Munro and his nephew crossed the Atlantic, and Mr. Willmer, mayor of Birkenhead, who is Mr. Heape's partner in the firm of Wilmer, Stephens & Heape, have cabled a message of protest to the American Secretary of State.

Both Want C.N.R.

Brockville, Jan. 11.—Brockville was invaded yesterday by deputations from Newboro, Westport and North Crosby, en route to Ottawa, for the purpose of interviewing the Minister of Railways and Canals in reference to the location of the proposed route of the Canadian Northern Railway, which will touch that section of the country on the line that is being constructed from Toronto to Ottawa via Smith's Falls. There is great rivalry between Westport and Newboro for the station that will connect with the B., W. & N.W.R. The line, as at present surveyed, goes via Chaffey's Locks, crossing the B., W. & N.W.R. tracks between Crosby and Forfar, and does not touch either place. North Crosby is supporting Westport's claims.

Ticket of Leave System.

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—The Department of Justice has decided to put a stricter application on the ticket of leave system for criminals. Heretofore many criminals have left the country and gone over to the United States on being released on ticket of leave. This, the Department has decided, is not to be allowed to pass unpunished wherever possible in future. To that end, they are in communication with several cities on the American side where the Canadian ticket-of-leave men are known to reside, and will have them arrested and extradited to Canada, when they will be sent back to prison to complete their sentences.

Movement Against Mormons.

Liverpool, Jan. 11.—A strong movement, supported by the Bishop of Liverpool and prominent churchmen, has been started against Mormon activity here. At a meeting which was attended by many influential people, resolutions were adopted asking the Home Secretary, Winston Spencer Churchill, to take action against Mormon proselytising as already has been done in Germany.

Censured Sims.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—President Taft yesterday decided that Commander W. W. Sims, the U. S. naval officer, who at a recent dinner given in London by the mayor of that city, declared that if Great Britain ever were seriously threatened, she could depend on "every man, every dollar, every drop of blood" in this country, should be publicly reprimanded.

Pays Landlord's Grocery Bill.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—In the absence from Divisional Court yesterday of Edward E. McIntosh, who is badly wanted on a charge of stealing $25,000 in unsigned Traders' Bank notes, the man who is renting McIntosh's Galley avenue house, paid $26 of his rent to the court to cover bills for groceries for which C. A. Creedin and W. F. Blackburn were suing.

Storms Bother Trains.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—The recent storms in the Northwest have affected the passenger service between Winnipeg and Toronto, and C.P.R. train No. 94, from Winnipeg, due here at 3.30 yesterday afternoon, did not arrive at the Union Station until 10 o'clock last night. The same train was over four hours late on Monday.

Will Pay Off Church Debt.

Kingston, Jan. 11.—St. James' Church was left $5,000 by the late Miss Fowler, a former member of the congregation, who recently died in England. The amount is to be applied to any purposes necessary for the church, and is about sufficient to clear the debt off the church.

A Land of Liberty.

Quebec, Jan. 11.—The Quebec Legislature opened yesterday afternoon. In the absence of Sir Alphonse Pelletier, Lieutenant-Governor, who is ill at Old Point Comfort, Va., Sir L. A. Jette, Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, presided. The speech from the throne makes mention of the striking success of the International Eucharistic Congress held in Montreal. It says:

"This success affords you another proof that the Province of Quebec is not only a land of faith, but preeminently also the land of liberty. On that occasion the Protestant population of the metropolis displayed admirable kindness, for which we cannot too heartily thank them."

Chief of Police Dead.

Sarnia, Jan. 11.—Jack Crawford, chief of police of Sarnia, died yesterday of pneumonia, after a few day's illness. Crawford was 15 years ago prominent in pugilistic circles and was in line for a battle with Kid McCoy for the middleweight championship. Previously to this he was on the London football team when it won the intermediate championship of Canada. Dr. Walter Crawford and Rev. Edward Crawford, both missionaries to Africa, are brothers.

The Deadly Hat-Pin.

New York, Jan. 11.—Long hat-pins, a subject which has agitated other city councils, were discussed at a meeting of New York's board of aldermen yesterday. An ordinance providing a fine of not more than $50 for any woman whose hatpin, unless suitably guarded, protrudes more than half an inch from the crown or other portion of the hat, was referred to the committee on law and legislation.

Linking Up the Hydro.

London, Jan. 11.—Hon. Adam Beck said last night that it was probable that the St. Mary's station would be sufficiently advanced to-day to permit of the connection of the loop from London with that from Berlin and the east. This will do away with the breaks in the service occurring here and at Berlin.

Keeping Out Anarchists.

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—Anarchists driven from England will find difficulty in landing at Canadian ports from now on. Special instructions were issued yesterday to immigration officials at Halifax and St. John to keep a sharp watch for suspicious characters, and refuse them entry to the country.

Ask License Reduction.

Blenheim, Jan. 11.—At the inaugural meeting of the Town Council a strong deputation from the W.C.T.U., headed by Rev. A. J. Bowen and Rev. Mr. McAllister, asked for a reduction of licenses from three to two. They were asked to secure signatures to a petition.

Threaten General Strike.

Kingston, Jan. 11.—Another big strike in spring is freely talked among labor men. This will not be merely a strike among carpenters or masons, but will be a general one among all classes of labor.

Fear Another Ice Jam.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Jan. 11.—There are prospects of another big ice jam in the lower Niagara River. Word from Lewiston yesterday was to the effect that a force of ice at that point had caused the river to rise two feet, and that it was still climbing up the bank. Below the falls there is a big jam of ice, but as yet no apprehension is felt.

On April 9, 1909, the ice jam in the lower river reached its greatest height, the power house of the Ontario Power Co. below the falls was flooded out and the water and ice reached the verandahs of the hotels at Lewiston and Youngstown. The water and ice must raise some 60 or 70 feet to repeat that condition.

Against Reciprocity.

Victoria, Jan. 11.—The Central Farmers' Institute, in annual convention here yesterday, with 40 delegates from all parts of British Columbia, unanimously passed a resolution viewing with alarm the movement of the grain growers of the prairies for reciprocity in natural products with the United States, and asking, on the contrary, that the duties on fruit entering Canada be raised so as to make them equal to the duties now levied on fruit entering the United States.

Residents Eaten by Wolves.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 11.—Several residents of the west coast of Prince of Wales Island, southeastern Alaska, have been killed and eaten by wolves during the last year, according to Charles A. Sulzer, a brother of Congressman Sulzer of New York, who has just returned from the north.

Mr. Sulzer says that the wolves having killed off all the deer, have become desperate with hunger, and now come up to the doors of the miners' cabins.

A National Work.

Kingston, Jan. 11.—Dr. J. R. Shannon, B.A., Rev. Dr. Strachan, B.A., Andrew Hayden, M.A., E. R. Pecock, M.A., J. McDonald Mowat, B.A., and R. W. Brock, M.A., have issued an appeal to Queen's University graduates in regard to the advisability of changing the existing relations between Queen's and the Presbyterian Church. They claim that a university which is doing national work must be nationalized.

Germany's Dreadnoughts.

Berlin, Jan. 11.—Germany will establish a record in 1911 by launching six Dreadnoughts. The announcement is made in last night's Deutsche Tages Zeitung, which points out that the new year will not only witness an unprecedented expenditure on the German fleet (112,500,000 marks), but the floating of the greatest number of new vessels which has ever taken the water during a single twelvemonth.

PERSIA ASKS JUSTICE

The Shah's Domain Says It Only Wants Fair Play.

Appeals to the Powers to Be Protected Against England and Russia —Manifesto Claims That Great Britain Is Standing by and Allowing Russia to Pour In Soldiers—Cannot Pay Debt.

New York, Jan. 11.—Out of the tangled web of diplomacy, plot and counter plot that has wrapped it about for centuries, the Persian Government has raised its voice in appeal to the whole world, an appeal for which it styles justice against England and Russia. The first cry reached this country yesterday with a document of sixteen thousand words, bearing the seal of the empire and the full signature of Mostofe-El-Manalik, president of the council. It is addressed to the American people, through H. H. Topakyan, consul-general at New York.

In brief, the Persian Government states that, through a loan made to it by the Russian Government some years ago, and which it has found itself unable to repay, because England and Russia have thrown every obstacle in the way of repayment, it is almost helpless and unable to maintain order in certain provinces, where Russian troops have been quartered to enforce collection. England, it is charged, expressly agreed that no other than civil means would be used for collection, yet now stands idly by while Russia pours regiments over the borders.

The presence of these foreign troops has aroused Persians to fury. Three provinces have been thrown into revolt. Russia and England have demanded that the disorders be repressed, yet the Persian Government declares itself helpless while Russian troops are within its borders. The appeal declares that Persia stands ready to shed her blood to defend British subjects, and would defend them if allowed to act without the Russian troops.

All last year Persia was the storm centre of European international politics. In October it was reported from London that the British Government had addressed an ultimatum to the Persian Government, demanding that order be restored in the southern provinces within the British sphere of influence. Three months' grace was allowed, after which time Britain held herself at liberty to assume the work herself by occupation. Persian revenues, it was said, would be used to pay the cost, and Russia, it was added, contemplated similar measures. The declaration followed months of unrest in Teheran, and repeated outbreaks of hostilities between the insurgents and the Government troops. Turkey also threatened invasion, apparently jealous of the Russian and British movements, and Persia was threatened, and for that matter is still threatened, on three sides.

Woman Physician Collapses In Cell.

New York, Jan. 11.—Dr. Louise E. Robinovitch, sister of Jos. G. Robin, the sky rocket financier, collapsed in her cell in the Tombs yesterday after sending a frantic appeal to her other brother, Edward L. Robin, to get bail for her.

The woman physician passed a sleepless night. The shock of having to go to jail was too much for her. She had expected, it is understood, that she would be paroled until the time of her trial on a charge of perjury, or that friends would come to her aid by furnishing the necessary bonds.

She is in cell No. 7, which has housed many famous women prisoners, among them being Hannah Elias and Nan Patterson.

Fear for Safety of Barge.

Owen Sound, Jan. 11.—Fears are entertained for the safety of the captain and crew of the barge Isabella Sands, which came into the Carney Lumber Co.'s dock late Sunday evening with a load of lumber taken from the steamer Alaska, which was burned at Tobermory some time ago. The Sands tied up safely, but when morning broke she had disappeared, and has not since been seen or heard. It is thought that stress of weather caused the captain to seek to run across the bay to a less exposed position and that the wind forced him out into the bay.

Six-Year-Old Child Burned.

Lindsay, Jan. 11.—Arastus Anderson, the six-year-old son of J. J. Anderson of Harvey, six miles north of Bobcaygeon, was burned to death in his cot Monday night at nine o'clock. He was in bed with his little sister, whose life was saved by W. Laird, who noticed the fire. The flames were too fierce to allow him to return for the boy. The cause of the fire is unknown.

$20,000 for Church.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—A bequest of $20,000 from the late Mrs. John H. R. Molson, was the announcement made at the 69th annual meeting of the Church of the Messiah Monday night. Mr. John W. Loud was elected president of the church, and Messrs. Dakers, Cameron and E. G. O'Connor as secretary and treasurer respectively.

Will Command "A" Battery.

Kingston, Jan. 11.—Major D. I. V. Eaton will take command of A Battery R.C.H.A., in place of Major H. A. Panet, who goes to England, to be attached to the Royal Horse Battery at Aldershot, for a course. Capt. E. Panet of the R.C.H.A. will go to the staff college in England.

Re-elected Socialist President.

Paris, Jan. 11.—The Chamber of Deputies organized yesterday with the re-election of President Henri Brisson, Radical Socialist, who received 270 votes, against 197 for Paul Deschanel, Republican, and 50 for Jules Guesde, United Socialist.

STRANGE LEGISLATORS

BRITISH COMMONS HAS HAD SOME QUEER MEMBERS.

Among the Human Curiosities Who Have Penetrated to Westminster None Were More Remarkable Than James O'Kelly and J. F. X. O'Brien, Genetlemen of Fortune, and Many Times Near Death.

The British House of Commons has, at one time or another, numbered among its members some very remarkable men, whose presence there is almost as inexplicable as that of the fly in the amber, and two at least of whom would, if the law had had its way, have been numbered among the dead long years before they sat at Westminster.

One of this singular and romantic pair was Mr. James O'Kelly, member for Roscommon, the story of whose adventures before he became a legislator is more thrilling than fiction. To give but a few examples. When Mr. O'Kelly was a young man he was correspondent of a Cuban paper at a time when that country was in the throes of civil war. He was arrested as a spy, sentenced to death, and was actually facing the rifles of the firing party when the United States consul arrived on the scene for his rescue—a few seconds before the fatal command to fire would have been given.

He fought gallantly with the French against the Prussians, saved the life of the Empress of Brazil, had a hundred hairbreadth escapes from death in Canada, Mexico, and Algiers, and was lost for a whole year in the Soudan.

Mr. J. F. X. O'Brien, the second of this adventurous pair, was sentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered for the part he took in a Fenian rising; and it was only his gallantry during a fire, when at great risk to his life he rescued some women and children, that caused the death sentence to be commuted to one of penal servitude for life, which after years of durance was remitted.

Thrice at least the House of Commons has included men of color, of whom Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji was the most notable. Mr. John Stewart, who sat for the borough of Leamington in four successive Parliaments, was a full-blooded negro; and Mr. David Ochterlony Dyce-Sombre, who was elected for the Suffolk borough of Sudbury and afterwards lost his seat for bribery, was a grandson of the Begum of Sirdhana, from whom he inherited a fortune of $2,500,000.

Within recent years Parliament has had at least three blind members. One of them was, of course, Mr. Fawcett, who was Postmaster-General in Gladstone's second Administration; the second was knighted for his services on the Commission on the Blind, Deaf and Dumb; and the third, who for a time represented the Ossory division of Queen's County, had, in spite of his blindness, won high honors at Trinity College, Dublin.

But probably the most remarkable man who ever sat in the British Commons was Mr. Arthur Kavanagh, who, legless and armless, a mere trunk of a man, had to be carried into the House on the back of an attendant. Mr. Kavanagh was a hard worker and an excellent speaker, and made so light of his physical disqualifications that he was an ardent huntsman, a skilful shot and angler, and a daring explorer, who, among other wonderful feats, made his way, by Russia and Persia, to Bombay.

The House of Commons has had many men of great stature, but the tallest of them all was probably Sir Frederick Milner, of whom the following story is told. When he and Sir Frank Lockwood once met at a public dinner the baronet warned his hearers that Sir Frank was going to caricature him. "It is perfectly true," answered Lockwood, himself a man of six feet two inches, "that I contemplated issuing a portrait of my worthy friend, but, owing to his great length, it would have to come out in parts, and I had misgivings as to getting subscribers."

It seems almost an impossible thing for a man to be elected to Parliameint without having the slightest knowledge of the honor that was being done him, but this seemingly impossible thing has happened more than once. Captain Suter graduated as M.P. while fighting 6,000 miles away, in South Africa; Sir James Fergusson, while lying at death's door from wounds received in the Crimea; Sir E. F. Evans, while absent in America; and O'Donovan Rossa, while in prison for treason felony. Mr. John Daly was returned for Limerick while a resident in Portland Prison; and Mr. Michael Davitt was the elect of Meath in 1882, when he went back to prison to complete an unexpired sentence.

In 1882 Mr. Powell, the Tory member for Malmesbury, ascended in a balloon and vanished completely from human ken; and Mr. Douglas Pyne, member for West Waterford, made an equally mysterious and dramatic exit from the world. He was seen on one of the steamboats crossing from Dublin to Holyhead, but on its arrival no trace of him was visible beyond a handbag and a few letters.

Farmhouse Methods of Keeping Eggs Fresh

At a time when eggs are so expensive, it may not come amiss to know that even in old farmhouses methods were employed in the season when eggs were a-plenty to keep them against the time when chickens would lay one egg a day or maybe only two or three a week.

An old farmer says that one of the favorite methods of keeping eggs was that of coating the shell with gum. Ordinary gum arabic was used which was melted slowly over the fire and applied to the eggs with the help of a soft brush. When set they were packed in dry charcoal and stored in ordinary deal boxes.

To preserve newly laid eggs for three months the butter teatment is often employed in country places where a sudden influx of summer visitors puts a severe strain on the resources of a small village or seaside place.

Only fresh butter, however, may be used, and barely sufficient employed to coat the egg. Too much butter would probably taint the contents, and destroy the creaminess which is a characteristic of freshly laid eggs.

An old-fashioned method is that of smearing the eggs all over with glycerine, the idea in this case, as in the two former methods, being to exclude the air as much as possible and preserve them as efficiently as if they had been tinned.

The simplest method of all, and one employed by a city family, is to obtain as many eggs as are needed for winter use in late autumn, pack them on end in the packing cases which hold each egg separate, put them in a cool place in the cellar, and they will keep fresh till late spring.

ENERGY—THE HUMAN POWER-HOUSE.

Mind, the master architect, engages energy to do various kinds of work. It must always have workmen or its plans cannot be executed.

The brain of man is a power-house in which there are many dynamos. Wires lead out from these dynamos to all parts and every organ of the body. The various parts or organs of the body are motors or engines that keep up their action by the energy they receive over the dynamos in the brain. The food we consume is the fuel which contains latent energy. Digestion prepares this fuel for admission into the blood. The blood carries it to the nerve centres, or dynamos, where much of it is finally burnt up, consumed, and the latent energy, which held the food together in its fuel form, istransformed into nerve eu-

OUR HOCKEY TEAMS WON AND LOST

Juniors Beat Picton on Their Own Ice--Pros. Beaten at Port Hope

The Picton Junior hockey boys were very confident that they would beat the Ontarios of Belleville in last night's game—so confident, indeed, that they had the following announcement made in their bills: "We have walloped Belleville every game except one on their own ice in the last two years." How sadly they misreckoned is told in the following brief account of the game which was sent by telegraph:

PICTON, Jan. 10.—Belleville juniors won from Picton to-night in an O.H.A. game. Score, 5 to 4. Line-up:—

Belleville—Goal, Wardrope; point, Connolly; cover, Tuite; rover, Bowen, centre, Wallace; left wing, Pritchard; right wing, Moore.

Referee—Dec. Gilbert, of Belleville.

PT. HOPE 11, BELLEVILLE 1.

PORT HOPE, Jan. 10.—In the professional league series here tonight Port Hope deefated Belleville by a score of 11 to 1. Notwithstanding the high score of the home team the game was remarkably fast and clean throughout. At the end of the first period the score stood 3 to 0 in favor of the locals. In the second period the visitors scored their first and only goal, while Port Hope team piled up four more. Port Hope scored another four in the third and last period.

Port Hope—Mercer, Kyle, Nixon, Randall, Manson, McGregor, Rowden.

Belleville—Cross, Sanford, Crossett, McDonald, Cochrane, McLaughlin, Dusome.

Watson were compelled to play an extra end, as the score was a tie when twelve ends had been completed. Mr. Cook's rink finally won out by two shots to the good. The players and score were as follows:

ARE YOU READY FOR WINTER?

Able to Stand the Cold?

"Fruit-a-tives" Will Build Up the Whole System.

The reason why some people cannot stand our Canadian climate is because their bodily health is not good. Heavy clothing cannot take the place of animal heat, generated by the normal body. To be comfortable in winter, we must have sound digestion, and pure, rich blood. The time to get ready for winter is NOW, and the thing to take is "Fruit-a-tives."

These wonderful fruit juice tablets do more than regulate the bowels and kidneys. They keep the whole system at its best—make every vital organ do its proper work—and thus give health, strength and vitality. Those, subject to chronic Rheumatism and Sciatica, stubborn Constipation and Bilious Attacks, Pain in the Back, Headaches and Neuralgia, should make it a point to take "Fruit-a-tives," and cure themselves completely before the severe cold spells come on.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. or will be sent to any address on receipt of price. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The Grouch.

"Laugh and the world calls you foolish."

"In that case what do you recommend?"

"Kick."

"Kick?"

"Yes, for then it will get busy and either take you in or fire you out."

So Thoughtful.

"I feel so thankful to the owners of the Mayflower."

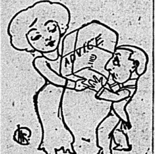
"Because they brought over the pilgrims?"

"No, not that so much."

"Why, then?"

"Because they didn't name it the June Bug?"

Better Still.



"He is an ideal husband."

"Gives all his money to his wife?"

"No; takes all her advice."

A Mystery.

"I can find water with a crooked stick," said the active little man.

"Can you indeed?" said the person with the large red nose.

"You bet I can!"

"What do you want to find water for?"

Never on Foot.

"We want men from every walk in life on the committee."

"Every walk?"

"That is what I said."

"Then you are going to leave out the autoists."

Get It Early.

"Do you believe we will ever have a universal language?"

"It is here now."

"Who talks it?"

"All the babies in the world."

Yearning.

I want to be a granger—
So ran an ancient ditty
By one who was a stranger
To aught except the city,
Who had a peck of notions
That farmers' ways consisted
In going through the motions
And coming home fat fisted.

He thought of gayly hoeing
Tomatoes tall and waving,
Of singing songs and mowing
The lawn that needed shaving,
Of getting bees in training
To fill his pail with honey
And from their efforts gaining
A load of easy money.

For him the plot would thicken
Until it was a winner
If he could raise a chicken
Already cooked for dinner
And pick his bread and butter
On little bushes cunning,
So visitors would mutter,
"My, isn't it just stunning?"

Then ho for scenes exciting.
Out where the grass is waving,
Where plenty comes a-kiting
And property behaving!
That was the way he put it
When by the thought enchanted,
But back he had to foot it
Before the crops were planted.

Flying Squirrels and Aeroplanes.

Modern inventors have been fairly successful with the aeroplane, but for a long time two little animals have used a similar principle in their successful flights. The flying squirrel and the flying fish sail through the air and rise and fall on an aeroplane of nature's invention.

Our common flying squirrel, with its thin, winglike membrane stretched tightly between the extended legs, is a typical aeroplane. Thoreau in speaking of such a squirrel says: "It sprang from a maple at a height of twenty-eight and one-half feet from the ground and landed easily and lightly on the ground at the foot of another tree fifty and one-half feet away. Its flight was not a regular descent. It varied from a straight line both horizontally and vertically. It skimmed much like a hawk, and part of its flight was nearly horizontal. There were six trees from six inches to a foot in diameter between the beginning and the ending of its flight, and these it skimmed partly round and passed through their thinner twigs. It did not, as I could perceive, touch a single twig." Other observers have seen crowds of these little creatures in similar sportive gambols which seem to have no other object than playfulness or the mere pleasure of flight.—St. Nicholas.

A Thanksgiving Game.

A good game to play Thanksgiving evening is called "the wand passes." One of the company is sent from the room. Another, who is in league with the first, promises that when he holds the wand, which may be a cane or umbrella, over some member of the company the exiled member will be able to tell over whom. The door must be left open. The confederates explain that this is in order not to interrupt the current of electricity between them.

The magic monger allows the company to chat a few minutes after his confederate has departed. Then he suddenly breaks in upon the conversation, waving the wand and saying in a sepulchral tone, "The wand passes." The exile answers from the next room very solemnly, "Let it pass." Again comes the announcement, "The wand passes," and again the answer, "Let it pass." The third time the possessor of the wand holds it over some head and inquires, "The wand rests over whom?"

Then is the exile promptly to answer, "Over So-and-so," naming the right person. The trick is accomplished by having it arranged that the confederate who remains in the room shall hold the wand over the person who spoke last before the announcement, "The wand passes." All the exile in the next room need be able to do is to distinguish the voices of the company.

Thanksgiving Day.

Over the river and through the wood
To grandfather's house we go.
The horse knows the way
To carry the sleigh
Through the white and drifted snow.

Over the river and through the wood—
Oh, how the wind does blow!
It stings the toes
And bites the nose
As over the ground we go.

Over the river and through the wood
To have a first rate play.
Hear the bells ring.
"Ting-a-ling-ding!"
Hurrah for Thanksgiving day!

Over the river and through the wood
Trot fast, my dapple gray.
Spring o'er the ground
Like a hunting hound,
For this is Thanksgiving day.

Over the river and through the wood
And straight through the barnyard gate.
We seem to go
Extremely slow—
It is so hard to wait!

Over the river and through the wood—
Now grandmother's cap I spy!
Hurrah for the fun!
Is the pudding done?
Hurrah for the pumpkin pie!

A Shipload of Toys.

Hundreds of tons of toys, dolls and railroad cars, jumping jacks and automobiles and flying machines came into Philadelphia the other day on the steamer Dortmund. The steamer came from Hamburg, Germany, and carried no freight except toys. This is the first of many such cargoes that will be brought across the ocean before Christmas for the boys and girls of America.

Chum With Your Opposite.

It is a fine idea for the business girl to chum with her opposite. If you are inordinately inclined to gayety or laziness a serious, intellectual friend will tone you up.

If you need toning down in the way of nerves and a too strenuous ambition find a friend who loves physical exercise, jokes, dressmaking and housekeeping.

If you are a natural born anchorite try to hobnob with the girl who gives fudge parties and sees the world from another angle.

That's the sensible way to low average, don't you think so?

The Smallest Island.

The smallest inhabited island in the world is the rock on which stands the Eddystone lighthouse.

A Rug Coat For Steamer Wear.

Very smart steamer and motor wraps are being made from the big rugs or shawls which are intended for steamer use which have a reverse side in bold plaided or checked design. The plaid side goes underneath, but sections of the pattern show, as indicated, in revers, cuffs and pocket flaps. Some of these wraps are in loose, capelike style; others, like the one pictured have the lines of the smartly tailored topcoat.

THE RUG COAT.

"I rather admire foolish people."

"You do?"

"Yes."

"But don't you hate to lay yourself open to the charge of gross egotism?"

Strenuous.

"I never worry over spilt milk."

"You don't?"

"I don't."

"What do you do about it?"

"Go after the fellow who spilt it."

Curious.

"He says he is self made."

"I wonder."

"What do you wonder?"

"Where he found a pattern small enough."

QUACKS ON INCREASE.

Herbalists and Bonesetters Are Overrunning British Isles.

Astonishing statements concerning the multitude of unqualified medical practitioners in Britain and their treatment of patients are contained in a bluebook issued recently embodying the result of enquiries made by the Local Government Board at the request of the Lord President of the Council. Information has been obtained from 1,600 medical officers of health in various parts of the United Kingdom.

Of the towns reported on, unqualified practice is increasing in eighty-two, in seventy-five it exists to some extent, in fifty-seven there is little, while in only thirty towns is it stated that unqualified practice does not exist. Smallpox treated as a simple skin disease by a herbalist, diphtheria diagnosed as mumps and patients not isolated, scarlet fever spread through being diagnosed as "rose rash," and measles treated as consumption are some of the cases described in the report.

Prescribing by chemists is stated to be so common as to be practically universal throughout the country. While in the main they confine their attention to the so-called minor ailments, and advise patients to consult a doctor in the more difficult cases, the evidence shows that a large amount of prescribing in what eventually proves to be disease of a graver character also takes place. The treatment of infants' diseases by chemists is regarded as having some bearing on infant mortality.

Herbalists are severely criticized. "Herbalists may be concerned in the spread of epidemics of infectious diseases. During a smallpox epidemic an ointment was extensively sold which, it was asserted, would cure smallpox. The vendor was prosecuted for spreading the disease by this means. Wrong diagnosis and consequent mistaken treatment are also responsible for spreading infectious disease. In one case smallpox was spread through treatment as chickenpox.

"Cough mixtures are prescribed by herbalists indiscriminately for respiratory diseases, which may really be tuberculosis, or chronic phthisis, and the delay entailed by such treatment seriously diminishes the chances of cure."

Attention is called to the "irretrievable harm" done by bonesetters. "The men who act as bonesetters are drawn largely from the working-class population, such as carriers, railway porters and the like, and in many cases they are illiterate and uneducated. Some have learned what knowledge they possess from ambulance associations. Those bonesetters who undertake minor surgical cases only do a relatively small amount of harm, though instances of disastrous results are reported. But the greater number of bonesetters undertake more complicated cases. Dislocations are treated without being reduced, and permanent disablement sometimes results."

Several instances of actual harm caused by taking patent medicines are mentioned. One medical officer reports that on three separate occasions during the last year he has treated cases of supposed scarlet fever in which the rash and symptoms were found to be due to the action of certain kidney pills.

"Father of the House of Lords."

A unique record is held by Earl Nelson, who was eighty-eight recently. He is not only the "Father of the House of Lords," but he also enjoys the unique distinction of being the only living peer who was a member of that assembly throughout the whole of the Victorian era. He was born in the reign of the third George, so that he has lived under six sovereigns, and for upwards of seventy years he has drawn a pension at the rate of $500 per week, granted by the state in perpetuity to the descendants of the victor of Trafalgar.

Lord Nelson, indeed, came into the earldom so long ago that he has been sometimes confused with the hero of Trafalgar. A poor old woman was once taken to church to see the present Lord Nelson, and the friend who was with her was about to describe his lordship's appearance beforehand, when the old lady exclaimed, "Oh, you needn't tell me what he is like. I shall know him directly I set eyes on him." When asked how she could recognize the earl, the dame responded, "Why, by his one eye and one arm, of course."

Head of the Clan Fraser.

A keen sportsman and soldier, Lord Lovat, head of the Clan Fraser—whose engagement to the Hon. Laura Lister, the second daughter of Lord Ribblesdale, has aroused so much interest—will go down to history as the commander of Lovat's Scouts, who did such excellent work during the South African campaign. A story goes that his lordship once received this telegram from a subordinate, who was injured in a railway accident while on furlough: "Will not report to-day, as expected, on account of unavoidable circumstances." The tone of the message was not satisfactory to the officer, and he wired at once in reply: "Report as ordered, or give reasons." Within an hour the following message came back over the wires from a hospital: "Train off—can't ride; leg off—can't walk. Will not report unless you insist." Lord Lovat is credited with making the shortest speech on record in the House of Lords. It consisted of exactly sixteen words.

A Sympathetic Burglar.

A thoughtful burglar who broke into the house of Joseph Brown, Streatham Highroad, recently, has earned the gratitude of Mr. and Mrs. Brown by returning through the post two highly prized miniatures, whose intrinsic value to the thief was inconsiderable.

The thief took $60 or $70 worth of portable valuables, including a gold miniature locket containing the portraits of Mr. Brown's two little boys. The parents were particularly sorry to lose the locket because the elder of the boys died a short time ago and the miniature could not be replaced.—London Daily Mail.

"Taxpayer" Comments on That Investigation Which 's Not Yet--How Motion In Council Was Stopped--No Direct Charge is Required to Be Made--Mayor Marsh's Words and Action Contrasted--Council Asked to Do Their Duty

Belleville, Jan. 11, 1911.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—I noticed in your editorial columns last night that you are still holding out for the investigation of the municipal affairs for the past year in the face of the reception of the proposal for same at the first meeting of the Council.

I note that the vote was not put, as Mr. Clarke stopped it with a suggestion that no direct charge had been made.

He should know that no direct charge requires to be made, as no notice can be taken of it, and the only way the matter can be reached is by a resolution of the Council. Apparently he is aware of this, and stopped the motion being put, knowing that that was the only legal way an investigation could be undertaken.

You have shown that, whatever is keeping your contemporary in such a knock-kneed state, you are out to get the proof, regardless of whose toes are pinched.

Nothing can be done without the support of a newspaper, and, while it may be possible to keep the blanket on the fire for a time, it will be that much hotter when it breaks out.

The matter appears to be a good joke to the "Ontario," but when it is considered that the Mayor, after stating that he did not want the lots to get in the hands of speculators, and he only approved of selling one lot to one man, then signed deeds for 14 to one man.

Any vessel can float down-stream, but in th end it gets on the rocks and that is what may happen if the Council do their duty.

It was not very edifying to see a Mayor and an M.P.P. using childish language to each other to the amusement of the small boy, and it would be more in keeping with their respective positions if they would keep their language up to the standard.

Yours truly,
A TAXPAYER.

SHELDON TEST CASE MAY MEAN RETURN OF $300,000

It is not at all beyond the bounds of possibility, says the Montreal Herald that if the suit which Messrs. Wilks and eBrnett, the curators of the Sehldon insolvent estate, have instituted against Stephen C. Matthews to recover over $7,000 profits which Mr. Matthews is alleged to have drawn from the office of the vanished wizard is successful, other suits will be taken which will add over $300,000 to the available assets of the man who duped so many thousands of credulous investors.

Speaking to The Herald, Mr. Wilks and Bernett, the curators of of the different amounts deposited and withdrawn by the creditors according to letter. Over and above their deposits, which, in the majority of cases still remained to their credit in the ledgers, the total amount of money entered in the "overdrawn" column was $215,908.87.

"Of course," said Mr. Wilks, "we could hardly expect to get back every cent of the money which has been overdrawn to add to the present available assets.

"In the first place there would be the litigation to think about. Going to law, particularly in regard to an insolvent estate is liable to prove expensive, and there are a number of cases where the individual amounts overdrawn are so small that the legal proceedings to recover the amounts would come to more than the amounts themselves. Then there are some cases that would have to be thrown out altogether, for different reasons. There are other cases where clients drew out their money a year and a half ago. These amounts we could never expect to collect, on account of litigation which would be involved in their recovery."

The case as taken by the curators is merely a test. It may be that the defendant in the present action may be ordered by the court to pay the $7,000 to the estate for the benefit of the less fortunate creditors. In the course of the hearing of the case some precedent may be brought to light which will open up a way for the recovery of all the 'fortunes' scooped in by those who considered themselves lucky in getting in on the ground floor when the game at 180 St. James street was in its palmiest stages.

ALLIANCE FORMED IN QUEBEC TO DISCREDIT NATIONALISTS

MONTREAL, Jan. 10.—The announcement made in the Mail and Empire a few days ago that the real object of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's visit to Quebec was not to cofer with the Quebec Premier, Sir Lomer Gouin, and leading Quebec Liberals on the political situation, especially as to what should be done to combat the Nationalist movement, was confirmed by a prominent politician who arrived from the Ancient Capital to-day a member of Parliament and a man high up in political circles. He stated that Sir Wilfrid Laurer, while in Quebec, had a long conference with the Quebec Premier, and with a number of prominent Liberals, not only that, but what is regarded as of some significance, is the fact that the Premier made a personal canvass of a number of his constituents in Quebec East and extended to them the glad hand and the sunny smile. The Premier is threatened with strong opposition in his own constituency at the next election and he is apparently preparing for eventualities.

As the result of the Quebec conference a policy has been decided upon in regard to the Natonalists, an offensive and defensive alliance has been formed beween the Federal and Quebec wings of the Liberal party, and th order has gone forth to all the Liberal newspapers in Quebec to conduct an aggressive campaign against the Nationalists, painting them as the enemies of the French-Canadian race.

In the English provinces the Liberal organs will hold the Nationalists up as anti-British and as the fomenters of disorder and of disunion between the two races.

The campaign has already begun as within the past few days it is noticeable that the leading Liberal papers of Quebec have turned their broadsides upon the Nationalists. The next move in the campaign will be to try to get the support of the French Bishops, it being claimed that the clergy are helping the Nationalists. Another thing that has been decided upon is that the Quebec provincial elections will be held before the Dominion general elections as the Laurier Government is anxious to have a test of the feeling in Quebec before tempting fate.

These are now the Liberals' plans, but as to how far they may succeed is problematical. Mr. Henry Bourassa will reach New York from Europe to-morrow night and will arrive in Monreal Thursday evening. The Nationalists are preparing to give him a cordial reception and after his arrival a conference will be held and future plans decided upon. Mr. Bourassa will at one go to Quebec to take his seat in the legislatue.

LISBON, Jan. 12.—A rapidly spreading strike has stagnated the republic. There is rioting in the larger cities. Troops are in command.

AN INTERESTING ADDRESS ON CANADA'S SHIPBUILDING

Capt. Alexander McDougall, President of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co., spoke as follows at the launching of the steamship Emperor:

This great ship is the largest ship ever built on British soil away from the British Isles. She is 525 feet long fifty-six feet beam and thirty-one feet deep, and is practically a double ship, one ship inside the other or rather call it a heavy double bottom and heavy double sides. All her boilers, machinery, cabins and fitout were made in our yard. She would command particular attention because of her great size, in any part of the world; it fact it is seldom such a large exclusively freight steamer is seen in the large ports at sea. On the present draft of our lake ports, she will carry about 10,000 tons, and at sea she would carry much more. She is the third large ship that we have to build to the order of Mr. Playfair, the King, the Prince, and now the Emperor. Long may she and her royal principal live and prosper.

This great ship has in her construction British and United States steel and iron, yet she has more than $270,000 worth of Canadian labor, material and transportation; this is money that stops in Canada, this great, prosperous country, with a coast line greater than any other country in the world. Canada has a small amount of ship tonnage, considering her necessities. The Canadian Ship Register indicates about 700,000 tons, but as all scows, barges and boats, from one ton capacity up is included, it is somewhat misleading. There are about 100 steel ships engaged in coastwise trade. These were mostly built in Great Britain, and there are about fifty steel vessels under the British flag doing coastwise trade in the lake country. There are also about 300 steam vessels, mostly small size, that were built in the United States, while there are only twenty steel vessels that were built in Canada. The Canadian Register has practically no oversea tonnage, and all told, about 200,000 registered tonnage fit for the coasting trade in rough sea.

Buying the steel shapes and plates in England or the United States, and building the ship in Canada leaves more than eighty per cent of the cost of the ship in Canada for labor, etc. Railways have been protected by twenty-five per cent. on cars and bridges, also great land grants and subsidies, while the ship has had practically no protection, and the ship is the nearest thing to life that man can make, and if made in other countries can carry itself to Canada to compete with Canadians. For ten years we have labored here against these odds without pay. Here we have one of the greatest plants in the world for its size, and with its two dry docks cut out of solid stone and the most improved appliances for shipbuilding in all departments to make the complete ship; they have none so good on the Clyde; they can only beat us with cheap labor. I was there lately and know.

A little assistance from the Government for a few years would soon make Canadians as noted for shipbuilding as they are now in railroad construction. Think of the hundreds of ships that will be required for the coastwise trade along more than 10,000 miles of this great country. Will they be made by Canadians, and thus help to stimplate all other trade? Or are they to be made in other countries and carry themselves here to the great loss to Canadian industries?

BIG LIQUIDATION BILL IN YORK COUNTY LOAN

That the cost of liquidating the York County Loan will set a record in the total amount, though it will be comparatively small considering the great amount of work that devolves upon the liquidators, is the opinion of those who have watched the process of liquidation.

"The law costs alone will be over $100,000," declared one who is closely in touch with the realization on the assets and the discharging of liabilities of the defunct company.

He added that if the ordinary course of winding up had been followed these costs would have been five times as great at least. Under a special statute, the creditors of the York County Loan and Savings Company, numbering in the neighborhood of 120,000, were divided into some thirteen classes, for each of which classes the court was authorized to appoint a solicitor. Instead of having thousands of solicitors making demands upon the assets of the company, the number has been considerably reduced.

"The liquidation is being conducted most economically," said ose who, while in no way connected with the liquidators, is in a posotion to have an insight into the management of the liquidation. "The cost," he added, "will not be one-fifth what it is in many smaller estates."

The remuneration of the liquidator, it is stated, is not fixed by statute, though under the Assignment Act an allowance of from 1 1-4 to 5 per cent. is allowed. In the Atlas Loan case, it is pointed out, the costs of liquidation were nearly 30 per cent. of the net proceeds of liquidation. The York County Loan will not be anything like this; it will probably be nearer 5 per cent., and possibly 2 1-2 per cent. At the present time, however, the remuneration which the court will be asked to allow must be guesswork.

At the lowest estimate of 2 1-2 per cent., the allowance to the liquidator will be over $50,000, as the amount handled by the National Trust Co. will be over $2,000,000.

Thus, for legal expenses and liquidator's fees alone, the cost of liquidation will be over $150,000.

The latest of the globe-girdling fakers is a fellow who proposes to make the circuit with a dog team. Turn him and all of his kind down, is good advice.

No wonder that grip and colds are pevalent, with such changes in temperature as have been going of late. For instance, it was 44 degrees above zero at noon yesterday and only 8 above at 8 o'clck this morning—a difference of 36 degrees in 20 hours.

Despite the decision of The Hague tribunal, the Yankee fishermen have been trying their old game of gaining access to the Newfoundland fisheries without any concession to the colony. Happily the Newfoundland cabinet detected the scheme asd turned it down.

A heading in a contemporary reads: "Nothing to Fear—The New Treaty May Be to Canada's Advantage." That word "may" is very significant. Hon. Clifford Sifton, Sir George W. Ross and other prominent supporters of the Government have said, with the Scotchman, "I hae ma doots."

In the matter of cheap power, cheaper school books, more taxes from railways, greater returns to the public from mines, and in other directions, the Whitney Government, says the Brantford Courier, has done a grand work. Some such course as that outlined with regard to timber limits would be another great feather in an administrative cap which is already full of them.

The analysis of recent census enumerations shows that the excess of women over men is increasing the world over. The details of the French census of 1906, just published, give the number of males as 19,099,721, and the number of females as 19,741,932, a difference of 645,211 in favor of the latter sex. Twenty years ago the female sex in Frasce outnumbered the male by only 130,000.

Agriculture in Ontario is possibly more advanced than in any other province in the Dominion. This is borne out by Deputy Minister C. C. James, who in addressing a meeting in Washington, said: "We have the province of Ontario fairly well organized for agricultural work. There are 340 Agricultural Societies, 60 Horticultural Societies, 100 Farmers' Institutes. 30 Co-operative Fruit Growers' Associations, 164 Farmers' Clubs, 600 Women's Institutes, 20 local Poultry Associations, 10 local Horse Associations. In addition to the above there are many provincial associations in connection with dairying, fruit growing, live stock poultry, etc."

FORMER CITIZEN HIGHLY HONORED

It is learned from the Edmonton Bulletin that Mr. W. J. Mr. Magrath, adds the Bulletin, was elected superintendent of Wesley Sunday School on its organization in 1907, shortly after that of the church, and has continued his unflagging devotion to the work in spite of the increasing demands of his business. It was, accordingly, felt by members of his Sunday School that such unswerving fidelity should not go unacknowledged even where so freely given.

LIPTON CAFE LICENSE CASE

Proprietor Asks Writ Annulling License Commissioner's Refusal to Renew

The following matter is of local interest, as Mr. Frank J. Truaisch is a well-known "Belleville boy":

On behalf of Mr. Frank J. Truaisch, proprietor of the Lipton Cafe, says the Montreal Witness of yesterday, Mr. Peter Bercovitch, advocate, presented a petition in the Practice Court asking for a writ of certiorari against the license commissioners to annul their refusal to renew the Lipton Cafe license.

The petition sets forth that the act of the commissioners is illegal, as, it is claimed, they had no right under the law which created them, to cancel any license except for reasons mestioned in the license law, and that none of the reasons they gave for cancelling his certificate were sufficient, under the act, to warrant such action.

It was further contended that if Mr. Truaisch had been guilty of any infraction of the license law he was making application for a license for the future, and that the commissioners could not legally cancel a license under such conditions for misconduct in the past.

Mr. Justice Demers, to whom the petition was presented, has ordered the writ to issue. The case will be pleaded on its merits later.

Heart trouble was the cause of her collapse and for a few minutes she was in a rather serious condition.

HORSE STEALING CASE ON TRIAL

Two Italians Are Parties To A Very Troublesome Case Before Judge Deroche

Before Judge Deroche to-day an Italian named Giovanni Martino, was arraigned and pleaded ot guilty to the charge of horse stealing. It appears that the accused and a fellow countryman named Pepio Crasendo had a deal about a horse and rig and before the bargain was consumated Martino took the outfit and drove to this city, where he was arrested some days ago on the charge of horse stealing.

The case was a tedious one owing to the fact that all evidence submitted had to be taken through an interpreter, as the party complaining and the accused are unable to speak English. The case was in progress this afternoon. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. A. A. Abbott, of Trenton, appeared for the accused. The parties reside in the vicinity of Trenton.

PASSING OF THE THIRD FLOOR BACK

Jerome's Drama Presented by an Admirable and Evenly Balanced Company of Artists

"Art in philanthropy," saith the Passer-by, is that exquisite example of the truth of the very aphorism. "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," which delighted an insufficient audience at Griffin's last evening. How splendidly this phrase illuminates the patient travail of the conscientious writer or actor or painter—all too often accused of trifling with his serious heritage of existence. In smaller communities, where the serious purposes of artistic endeavor only touch us, as it were, at a tangent, we are wont to feel like Lazarus, getting only the crumbs of third-rate productions, or, at best, belated metropolitan successes; but if Manager Hazza continues to favor us with such delectable artistic productions as that he gave us last evening we will be able to fraternize quite comfortably with the big city Dives. When one remembers the delightful flippancy of "Three Men In a Boat", one rubs one's eyes, bewildered to find that this masterful modern morality play, this daring drama of a celestial visitant in frock coat regenerating a sordid London lodging-house, is from the same pen—that of Jerome K. Jerome. With the exception of its cumbersome and inadequate title, a few lapses from the strict rules of up-to-date play construction—such as occasional soliloquies and palpable ritards in the tempo of accumulative interest, the play comes very near to being a flawless inspiration. Quite in keeping was the admirable, evenly balanced company of genuine artists, although "types," a circumstance which goes a long way to justify the modern tendency to types, which is the cause of much discussion in theatrical circles. Of course the mellifluous voice and velvety reserve of Forbes-Robertson, the incomparable, was missed; but his finished artistry was very agreeably approximated by his talented brother, Ian. In fact, the inevitable comparison is, in a measure, unfair to the latter. Those who were fortunate enough to see last night's production will be glad to know that most of the artists were in the play during its long run in New York. One exception was Miss Gertrude Boswell, who, however, played Vivian much better than her New York predecessor, playing the part with more dynamic emotionalism and color. Occasionally, however, maybe distracted by the dreadful noises from the upper regions of the auditorium, she wiggled flagrantly out of the picture. The setting and accessories were the last word of painstaking verisimilitude; the "fourth-wall" with hearthplace and lighting effects being the latest cry of realistic mise-en-scene. With such plays as "The Servant in the House," and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," the pulpit will soon be obliged to look upon the stage as a rival in the divine business of doing good. And it is fortunate that this has come to pass, putting an end, forever, to the senseless vilification of a noble and serious profession.

LOTS OF NEW LAND IS NOW READY

Three Million Acres Laid Out by Surveyors In Alberta Last Season

EDMONTON, Alta., Jan. 10.—During the past year fifteen or twenty surveyers that were working out of Edmonton, laid out approximately three million acres of new land to the north, northeast and northwest of Edmonton. As the result of their work, practically all the unsubdivided land between Edmonton and Athabasca Landing and between Edmonton and Las la Biche to the northeast has been laid out, also large areas of land have been laid out in the Peace River country, and along the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific and north of that line.

A great deal of land has bees subdivided along the Athabasca between the landing trail and the Pembina river, and within the next month or two the greater part of this new land will be thrown open at the land office at Edmonton or at the sub-agency at Lesser Slave lake for homestead purposes. The plans as turned in by the surveyors are now in the hands of the Surveyor-General's Department at Ottawa, and as soon as they have been approved they will be forwarded to the local land office. One or two of the surveyors have not yet completed their contracts of last season, but will finish within a month.

THE BEST.

An Edmonton man called at the Grand Trunk office the other day and stated that the Grand Trunk Pacific road bed was the best in the west, and, in fact, as good as any in America. He compared the road bed to that of the Grand Trunk between Chicago and Montreal, which he conceded to be the standard. 1td, 1tw

HARD FIGHT WITH COLD AND SNOW

The Provincial Railway Has Found This The Worst Season on Record

"Never, since Northern Ontario was opened up, has there been such severe weather as is being experienced this year," said Mr. J. L. Englehart, chairman of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission, to a newspeper man at Toronto.

"There wasn't a day in December that we didn't have the snowplows out on the tracks, something unheard of in other years. The severity of the cold, and the quantity of the snow is something hard to imagine. We are able to keep the trains going right through, that is, up to the present, but it is hard work, and they are of course, sometimes very late."

Mr. Englehart said that Monday was soft, with rain falling and a break in the weather was hoped for, but on Tuesday it grew colder and everything froze up tight. There was twenty-five degrees of frost. To-day snow is falling again and his majesty, the weather man, has seen fit to deal out over three feet of "settled" snow—that is three feet solid, not taking into account many places where it is drifted many feet high.

"How is the weather affecting the work of the construction of the new branch line?" inquired the reporter.

"We are going on with the work, alright," he said, "but the weather is a great hindrance."

At present there are five hundred men working on the line running from Kelso into the Porcupine district and this number will be increased to one thousand during the course of the next month, just to make sure that the line will be finished at the stipulated time, July 1, 1911.

So unmanageable has become the downpour of snow that snow plows have become next to useless. It has been found that the plows keep the tracks clear, throwing the snow off onto the sides, but the strong winds almost immediately blow it back again.

To get over this difficulty a machine known as the "spreader" is to be pressed into service. It is attached to a low car, and does not look altogether unlike an aeroplane, with flange-shaped wings. This bird-like machine follows along after the snow plow, and when the snow is thrown off into the sides, it lifts and throws it still further, packing it up in banks.

"Snow may be called 'the beautiful,' Mr. Englehart declared, "but just the same it is an awful nuisance."

GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE.

An exellent bill is offered to the patrons of this popular theatre for the last three days of this week, headed by Davis & Farrow, a team of clever artists who will present something entirely new in the way of songs and stories. Al. Wilson has a refined musical act, his xylophone solos are the feature of his act.

All new pictures will be presented tonight, which comprise Shakespeare's comedy, "The Merry Wives of Windsor," and the late "Tercentenary held in Mexico in which President Diaz and his staff participated.

ARTHUR H. SYDERE,
Clerk of the Legislative Assembly.
Toronto, Jan. 7, 1911.

Of course there are two sides to every story; but the trouble is the most of us only care to hear one.

From Butcher's Counter to Pulpit.

For thirty-eight years the Rev. W. Cuff, the famous pastor of the Shoreditch Tabernacle, has worked amongst the poor of the east end of London. He began life as a butcher, but, to quote his own words, "Early in my career I abandoned the carving of carcasses for the curing of souls." And few men have done more to alleviate the distress and bring sunshine into the lives of the masses in the east end. His work has been full of interesting and amusing experiences. He not only preaches to the people, but helps to feed them, and, on one occasion, thought he wuld assist his wife in clothing them. "So I took a little child," he says, "and measured it up and dressed it in the bonniest of suits. 'What do you think of that?' I said to the mother of the child. 'Well, I suppose you know best, pastor,' she replied; 'but you've gorne and made a boy of 'er!'"

Epigram on Dean Liddell.

When Dean Liddell, the part author of a famous Greek lexicon, was head master of Westminster, he one day told the boys in his class that they must write an English epigram. They might each choose their own subject, but an epigram they must write. Some said it was impossible, but one boy wrote:

Two men wrote a Lexicon,
Liddell and Scott;
One-half was clever,
And one-half was not.
Give me the answer, boys,
Quick to this riddle,
Which was by Scott,
And which was by Liddell?

Dr. Liddell, when the epigram was submitted, remarked: "I think you are rather severe."

Gone Before.

"When antiseptic surgery first came in," said a medical writer, "the doctors operated right and left. The widow of one poor chap put on his tombstone:

"'In memory of my dear husband. Gone to join his sciatic nerve, his large intestine, his eardrum, his liver, his left scapula and a leg inadvertently removed by a surgeon who was given to fits of absentmindedness.'"

Inherited Talent.

"Your son has made a great record in college."

"Yes; he gets past a Greek verb occasionally and can call the baggage smashers names in Latin."

"But he is the best pitcher on the college team."

"Some pitcher, eh?"

"He is all of that."

"Well, he comes by it honestly. His dad before him could pitch more hay than any two men in these parts."

Commercialized.

The muse was very kind to him.
He was an advertising bard.
His flights he never had to trim.
But reeled off poems by the yard.
With publishers he took no chance;
His terms were always in advance.

How Honesty Is Appreciated

Notwithstanding the exposure of wholesale frauds and grafting that had been practiced in the County of Oxford by an ex-Warden and others in authority, a report to the Globe says:

"A rather significant event in this "case was the defeat at the annual "elections of both Vickers and Stauffer, the two Councillors who were "most energetic in securing the appointment of a Royal Commission. "They sought re-election as Reeve "and Deputy-Reeve of Blenheim "Township, and in an election in "which the investigation was one of "the issues were left behind."

The reason of these defeats, the same despatch says, was:

"The expense Oxford has been put "to for private detectives and counsel has caused some dissatisfaction. "and the men responsible for the investigation are not as popular as "they were some time ago."

In plain language, the electors of Oxford punished the men who brought to light the stealings which had been practiced by the officials, because it cost the municipality some money. In other words, these electors would prefer being robbed, secretly, rather than have to pay a few dollars publicly to have the offenders punished.

Perhaps they were told the Tories were prosecuting the ex-Warden because he was at the head of the hope of the Liberal party, and they, the Tories, wanted to kill him politically, hence they would condone the grafting.

After all, this Oxford thieving is only a sample of what has been practiced in the west in timber deals and grazing land speculations, and in the Cap. Sullivan timber deals in Ontario under the Ross administration.

Ireland's Representation

Were it not for the fact that Ireland—particularly the southern portion of that island—is greatly over represented in the Imperial Parliament, as compared with England and Scotland, taking population as the basis of representation, the Nationalists would not possess the undue power which they now exercise in the House of Commons. As a matter of fact, were Ireland's representation readjusted according to population as compared with England and Scotland, the representation of the Green Isle in the House of Commons at Westminster would be reduced by at least twenty members.

During the recent election campaign in Great Britain, it is remarked by a contemporary, brief reference was made more than once to the unfairness of the over-representation of Ireland in the British Parliament according to population, but probably few people in Canada recall the history of that condition of affairs. At the time of the Act of Union in 1800 the population of Ireland was approximately 8,000,000. By the terms of that Act Ireland was to have 100 parliamentary representatives. But in 1826 came the failure of the potato crop and the terrible famine which resulted in disease and death and wholesale emigration to the United States and Canada by which this population was reduced by one quarter and the drain continued steadily but in a lesser degree until a few years ago. Ireland is now not only holding its own in population but actually making a little gain. By the last census the population was 4,700,000, but Ireland still retains the number of members given it for a population of nearly twice as large. Scotland, with a population of 4,400,000, has only 72 members. Obviously, there should be a reorganization of the whole Kingdom in order to place the representation on a fairer basis. How long would Canada tolerate such an anomalous state of affairs, supposing, for instance, that Quebec stood to the rest of Canada in the lation that Ireland stands to the other parts of the United Kingdom? Not very long.

DISTRICT DEPUTY PAID AN OFFICIAL VISIT

Canadian Order of Oddfellows Had A Pleasant Time At Rednerville Last Night

Mr. J. W. Boyd, D.D.G.M. of the Canadian Order of Oddfellows, last evening paid an official visit to Rednerville Lodge. He was accompanied by Ald. Canning, an executive officer of the order, and other brethren from the city. The officers of Rednerville Lodge were installed by the D.D.G.M. and degree work exemplified. At the conclusion of the lodge work supper was partaken of. A number of toasts were proposed and responded to, the addresses being interspersed with vocal selections.

SEA COAST OF BOHEMIA.

Humorous Errors In Geography of the Older Writers.

In a Shakespeare-Bacon controversy this droll error always turns up. But it is certain that the writer of "The Winter's Tale" could make no defence? Dr. Thoms is not forgotten by careful students; his "Notelets on Shakespeare" contained the germ of various discoveries which have been worked out in later time. And he stated positively that Bohemia had a seacoast once. Swarming up from Mount Thabor, the Hussites conquered Pomerania and the ports of Stettin and Rostock, which they held for some years. Further, he asserted that Speed's map represents them as still in possession; though published in 1622, after his death, it was certainly known many years before, and Shakespeare might have seen it. I never felt the curiosity to look up this reference myself, but some of the gentlemen who are so deeply interested in the matter ought to do so.

At any rate, blunders as grotesque have been committed by persons infinitely more responsible than an actor-dramatist. Perhaps the description of Bombay by the great Lord Clarendon is the most pleasing example. When urging the advantages of a marriage between Charles II. and Katherine of Braganza upon the Privy Council, he wrote that the alliance "proposed to give the English nation a free trade with Brazil (sic) in the East Indies. . . . And forever to annex to the crown of England the Island of Bombay, with the towns and castles thereon, which are within a very little distance of Brazil." Apparently the Privy Council saw nothing wrong, for when Francis Gwyn, who inherited the Clarendon manuscripts, published them, some fifty years later, he included this document, without any comment of his own or that august body. Probably Charles himself was not better informed when he granted the East Indian Company a perpetual lease of the island for $50 yearly.

Among the archives at Simancas is a confidential dispatch from some important personage, recommending Waterford as a spot where the soldiers of the Armada might disembark to conquer England. Among other advantages it was "only twelve miles from London." Philip II. was not more skilled in geography than in other matters, but he suspected an error here, and wrote on the margin, "I don't understand about this Waterford twelve miles from London. Make inquiry." One of his successors, Charles II., had the vaguest ideas about the geography of his own empire. It is reported, on excellent authority, that when the French took Mons, the great town and fortress of Flanders, he congratulated the Marquis d'Harcourt upon a victory over the English heretics. Flanders was Spanish territory at the date.

Funny stories are current of high officials in this realm at the present day. Grand Duff answers for one. Schoolboys ought to know that there is a town on the Persian Gulf called Bushire, once great, and still of high importance strategically. A personage was sent there from India on diplomatic business. In due time he forwarded the items of his expenses at Bushire to the foreign office, along with others incurred. The amount was transmitted to him with these latter deducted. On inquiry he was told that the foreign office could not recognize 'bus-hire.

May I dare to impute ignorance to Charles Darwin?—certainly he was the first to laugh if, in after years, he recollected advising Sir Joseph Hooker to write to "Wien," "that unknown place where they publish so many books. Where is it, by-the-by." When his fame was already world-wide, Darwin did not know that Wien is Vienna. — Frederick Boyle, in The London Pall Mall Gazette.

BLUE-BLOODED BARDS.

English Nobility Has Done Pretty Well In the Role of the Poet.

Ah! Love! If only thou wert born Princess,
Or else myself were only something less
Than that which I am now—of rank so high—
Oh! then we two might know such happiness!

It was thus that the new King of Siam, who was educated in England, lamented to an actress, to whom he wrote some very original verse, the gulf twixt throne and stage. The king has a decided penchant for literary work, and has several novels and comedies to his credit. Indeed, he might very well be compared to King Oscar of Sweden, another royal poet, whose literary work was published under a nom de plume. The Czar, too, is rather fond of writing poetry, and thus mournfully sums up his feelings in the third verse of one of his poems, which was translated six years ago:

My soul strives blindly for relief—
Chilled, as by drifting snow,
By doubts which scoff at the belief
Of finding peace below.

Lord Cromer, like the Right Hon. George Wyndham, has a "pretty turn for sonnets," while the following verse, composed by Lord Curzon, appears on a brass memorial tablet erected in the cathedral at Calcutta to members of the Indian volunteer contingent who lost their lives in South Africa:

These sons of Britain in the East
Fought not for praise and fame,
They died for England, and the least
Made greater her great name.

General Sir Ian Hamilton is a poet of no mean order, whilst it may surprise many people to learn that Sir George White some years ago wrote a poem entitled "Edward VII.," which was published in the Gibraltar Chronicle and Official Gazette, the first verse of which ran:

Unfold his standard! Let it greet the day,
Hymn loud an Anthem to the regal sway
Of Edward's Crown; the symbol of a reign
That hails the dawn of peace, the end of pain.

Lord Crofton, it might be mentioned, a musician of taste and talent, has composed many hymns and chants, including the favorite wedding hymn, "Oh, perfect love," while Sir George Young, too, has written many poems. There are also a number of society ladies—Viscountess Galway, Lady Esher, Lady Lindsay, Lady Alfred Douglas, and the Marchioness of Townshend—all of whom have published poems which have earned the praise of the critics.

Mention of the fact that the Right Hon. George Wyndham, M.P., has poetical inclinations reminds one that there have been one or two witty versifiers in the House of Commons. Sir Wilfrid Lawson was the best, but Mr. John O'Dowd, M.P. for Sligo, aroused considerable amusement when he wrote "The Lay of South Sligo," which was inspired by Mr. Patrick O'Brien's championship of lady teachers who wished to wear their engagement rings in school:

Oh, Patrick, dear, come over here;
Your smile I'd wish to see.
Give me your hand; you needn't stand
On ceremony with me.
By all the girls you're idolized,
From New York to Kettering.
No wonder; sure, you've legalized
"The wearin' o' the ring."

Empty Competitions.

A remarkable angling competition has just been held on the River Witham, England, where for two hours fifty-six Lincoln anglers fished in vain. They were on the bank of the river between Washingborough and Lincoln, but not a single fish was caught. About ten years ago a similar thing happened, but on that occasion there were only thirty competitors taking part. In another competition recently open to twelve clubs in Derby, the match for the twenty-five guinea challenge cup took place in the Derby Angling Association's private water in the canal at Wellington. After fishing for an hour and a half, only fourteen competitors out of sixty-four had taken any fish, and the challenge cup was won by Mr. J. Dawney with a gross weight of only 2 1-4 ounces, four shot. The lowest weights to take a prize were 1-4 ounces, six shot and three shot.

"Poor Polly."

Talking of aspiring dramatists who pester him with plays, Mr. Charles Hawtrey, who has made another "hit" in "Inconstant George," at the Prince of Wales' Theatre, London, mentions a letter he once received:

"Dear Sir (it ran),—If you are in want of an oppening one-act drama at your house I have such a domestic drama to offer. It is not a representation of the iper classes, but rather off the lower. It is called "Poor Polly Newly Married and Done." It is certainly orriginal, and will delight your middle and lower class audiences."

"The same man," says Mr. Hawtrey, "made me an offer of another play a little while later, entitled 'Saved by the Skin of Your Teeth'—a piece which he declared contained 'a thrilling love-story, with enthralling closing precedents'."

A Record Trip.

A journey of 2,419 miles on an arab pony has just been accomplished by Mr. J. H. Bill, a British consul in southern Persia, whi has reached his home in Staffordshire on the back of this plucky little animal. He told a newspaper representative that he believed it constituted a record for one animal. The early stages of the journey were the worst, for the pony had to tackle hilly and broken country, and he was unable to average more than twenty miles a day. One incident of the journey was an attack by brigands.

An English clergyman has sighted a new star; but that's nothing to blow about. Fell and bumped my head the other night and saw about a bushel of 'em myself.

ELECTION ADDRESSES.

British Annals Are Full of Striking Pronouncements.

At one time it was customary to address long and flowery communications to the electors, calling attention to past services and setting forth the candidate's opinions in detail. A member of the Lyttelton family, in an address about a century ago, asserted, "I have discharged my duty without fear or favor, resisting equally the undue influence of the crown and the machinations of turbulent sedition," a reference to the monarchy which would not be tolerated in these days.

The longest address of recent years was issued by a West Country candidate; it ran into more than 4,000 words. As a set-off to this there is the famous one issued to the electors of Birkenhead by Sir Elliott Lees. It consisted of the single word, "Pretoria," cabled from Pretoria, where he was serving with the Yeomanry.

An oft-quoted address was that issued by a candidate at Merthyr Tydfil ten years ago. It was said that the gentleman had it printed in Cardiff by mistake, being under the impression he was in the constituency for which he was to stand. "I have lived, loved, and married," he told the electors; "owned children and houses; experienced the world, the flesh, and the devil; made and lost, and made and explored; mined, distilled, manufactured, built, lent, borrowed, bought, and sold."

For really weird election addresses one must go to the thousands of men who aspire to the modest honor of local councillor. A year ago a Christian Socialist tailor came forward at Leicester, and it is pathetic to think that his really gorgeous address only brought him fourteen votes.

He began by asking the electors of his ward to "anoint their eyes with the spittle of love, and wipe them clean with the napkin of righteousness." The address is too long to quote in full, but its import was that every worker was to have a fixed wage of $15 per week, "with free travel and all rent and taxation ended." No one is to work more than five hours a day, and retire from active labor at forty-five.

"I want you to put me into power to send all school children on a tour round the world during the last four years of their school age at the nation's expense, to make them bright and intellectual men and women, to be well-guarded by our soldiers and sailors, under the charge of their teachers and the most eminent physicians in our land." He also intended "to put the whole British Empire in apple-pie order," when "every man shall smoke his pipe of comfort free from taxation, with beer of purity, while listening to the orchestral strains of parish bands."

It was a Hibernian candidate who stated: "My posterity belonging to one of the most famous Irish families and myself being a man of unassailable integrity, of clear intelligence, and of exhaustive will-power, I will do my utmost for our prehistoric town."

Students Cheer for Liberty.

The Khedive of Egypt was unpleasantly impressed recently by a demonstration which occurred at Tanta, 50 miles north of Cairo, as his highness halted there on his way home from Alexandra.

A number of students of the secondary school shouted, "Long live the constitution! Long live the constitutional Egypt!" thus indicating that they were only ready to cheer the khedive when parliamentary rule is established there. The shouts became deafening, and signs of displeasure were noticed on the khedive's face. When the khedival train departed the governor of the province proceeded to the school and an inquiry was opened.

The executive committee of the school has in consequence expelled twelve of the students. It has been found that the students belong to a secret society, the aims of which are unknown. Before their expulsion the students paraded the streets, shouting "Down with the Governor. Death to him! Long live the constitution!"

A number of hooligans joined them, and several arrests were made, including that of a Nationalist lawyer. Much excitement prevails at Tanta.

An Editor's Clever Daughter.

Mrs. Violet Tweedale, the writer of many brilliant novels, is "a woman of all works." She can paint a landscape and cook a dinner; she can write a book and make a shirt; she can etch a sporting scene and embroider the finest designs; she is a brilliant pianist, and has the reputation of being one of the best political speakers of the day. As a girl she was a beauty, and now, in middle age, with her regular features, white hair, and commanding presence, is strikingly handsome. Mrs. Tweedale, who is the eldest daughter of the late Robert Chambers, editor of Chambers' Journal, lives in a delightful home in Aberdeenshire. Every hour of the day is assigned to one or other of her numerous interests. "I never know an idle moment, and I never know an unhappy one till, by some misadventure, I am forced to sit with idle hands," is a remark she has often made.

No Profit.

Rev. P. H. Ditchfield, the writer of so many excellent books on archaeology and old English customs, tells this good story of a Wiltshire farmer. "An old squire was riding to the Bench one morning and met a farmer, and, after exchanging greetings, observed: 'And so, John, I hear you are going to be married again.' 'Yes, sir, next Tuesday.' 'And you have been married three times before, have you not?' 'Yes, sir; this one will be the fourth.' 'And you always did pretty well for yourself, John. Your wives have always had a bit of money, I think?' 'Yes, sir; but what with bringing on 'em in and carrying on 'em out, there ain't no profit.'"

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

Ah, how glad he was that he had not obeyed his earlier impulse, and horrified the anxious rescuers by a prophecy of lingering death for many, with the prelude, perchance, of murderous excesses committed by men on the verge of madness. If that story had to be told he would not flinch, but it was a grateful thing that the hour of its telling might at least be deferred.

A long message followed, a string of loving words from relatives ashore to those known to be imprisoned on the rock. During the merely perfunctory reading off of the signals his active mind was canvassing the probabilities of success or failure for the venture of the afternoon. It was high-water about three o'clock, and, in his judgment, with the wind in its present quarter, about northwest by west, the cross seas which would sweep the reef and engulf the lighthouse at half-tide would render it wildly impossible for any raft ever built by man's hands to live in the immediate vicinity of the rock.

However, the issue lay with others now. He knew that they would do all that brave men would dare. He was tempted to make known the inspiring news to all hands, but refrained, because he feared ultimate failure. Beneath his feet was a human volcano. Stirred too deeply, it might become active and dangerous.

So the apathetic multitude in his charge, hungrily awaiting a scanty morsel of food which only provoked what it failed to gratify, must rest content with the long statement written out by the purser and read by him at the door of each room.

Pyne took to Mrs. Vansittart the news of his uncle's presence on the steamer.

"If you would like to see him," he said, "I have no doubt Mr. Brand will let you stand on the gallery for a little while."

She declined, excusing herself on the ground of weakness.

"In this high wind," she said, "it will be very cold out there, and any further exposure would make me very ill."

"That's true enough," he agreed, though he wondered why she raised no question concerning the message she wished him to convey to Mr. Traill.

Had she forgotten the urgency of her words over night? He had carried her instructions quite faithfully to Brand and the latter smiled at the fantasy.

"Time enough to think of such things when we are assured of the lady's departure," he said, and they left it at that.

Thinking to interest her, Pyne told her of the crowd on the Falcon.

"Mostly reporters, Brand thinks," he said. "What a story they will build up in the New York papers. It will be more fun than a box of monkeys to get hold of this week's news and read all the flapdoodle they are printing."

But Mrs. Vansittart was not to be roused from her melancholy. She dreaded the least physical suffering. Privation was a new thing in her life. To-day she was inert, timid, a woman who cowered away from the door and was obviously anxious that he should leave her to the quiet misery of the packed bedroom.

As the day passed, a wearisome iteration of all that had gone before, a new feature in the relations of the crowded community made itself disagreeably apparent. Men drew apart from each other, singly, or in small groups. An inconsolable gloom settled on the women. By some means, the knowledge spread that they might all starve to death in the heart of this cold dungeon. They began to loathe it, to upbraid its steadfastness with spoken curses or unrestrained tears. The sanctuary of one day was becoming the tomb of the next. No longer was there competition to look at land or sea from the open windows. Everywhere was settling down a pall of blank, horrible silence and suspicion.

Even Constance yielded to the common terror once when the men of the watch escorted the bearer of a tray-load of provisions to the occupants of the coal-cellar.

"Enid," she whispered, "did you see the light in their eyes? What is it? Does hunger look that way?"

"It must be so, yet it is almost unbelievable. They are far removed from real starvation."

"One would think so. But it is so hard to realize things beforehand. And they have nothing to do. They are brooding all the time. We are slaves of our imagination. Many a sick person is allowed to eat far less than these men have been given, and the deprivation is not felt at all."

"What will become of us, Constance, if we are detained here for many days?"

"Dear one, do not ask me. We must not think of such things."

"But dad is thinking of them. I watched his face when I took him a scrap of food just now, and—"

"Hush, dear. Let us pray—and hope."

There was a clatter of feet down the iron stairs. The men of the watch were hustling to unbar the iron door. A solidly built, circular raft had been lowered from the Trinity tender.

An assistant-keeper, wearing a cork jacket, with a rope about his waist, was clinging to a stumpy mast in the centre. Two stout guide-ropes were manipulated from the deck of the vessel, and the flat, unwieldy mass of timber was slowly drifting nearer the lighthouse with the tide.

The door of the column opened towards the east, so the wind, with its pelting sheets of spray, was almost in the opposite quarter, and the stout granite shaft itself afforded some degree of protection for the entrance.

The scheme signaled from the steamer was a good one. None but a lunatic would endeavor to approach the rock itself, but there was a chance that the raft might be made to drift near enough to the door to permit a grapnel to be thrown across the rope held by the gallant volunteer on the raft.

It was his duty to attach the two ropes and thus render it possible for a stronger line to be drawn from the vessel to the pillar. There was no other way. The lighthouse did not possess a rope of sufficient length to be drawn back by the raft without the intervention of some human agency.

This was precisely the puny, half-despairing dodge that the reef loved to play with. Cat-like, it permitted the queer flat-bottomed craft to approach almost within hail. Then it shot forth a claw of furious surf, the heavy raft was picked up as if it were a floating feather, turned clean over, and flung many fathoms out to sea, whilst both of its guiding cables were snapped with contemptuous ease.

The assistant-keeper, kept afloat by his jacket, was hauled, half drowned, back through the choking froth, whilst the wave which overwhelmed the raft curled up a spiteful tongue and almost succeeded in dragging out several of the men stationed in the doorway.

With a clang the iron shutter was rushed into its place, and when the sailor was rescued the Trinity boat steamed away to try and secure the raft.

So joyous hope gave way once more to dark foreboding, and the only comfort was the faint one to be extracted from the parting signal:

"Will try again next tide."

CHAPTER XIII.

BEFORE THE DAWN

Discipline slackened its bonds that night. For one thing Mr. Emmett fell ill. Although inured to hardship in the elemental strife, being of the stocky mariner race which holds the gruff Atlantic in no dread, he had never before been called on to eat sodden bread, to drink condensed steam flavored with varnish, and to chew sustenance from the rind of raw bacon. These drawbacks, added to the lack of exercise and the constant wearing of clothes not yet dry, placed him on the sick list.

Again, there were ominous whispers of unfair division in the matter of food. It was not within the realm of accomplishment that the pursur Constance, Enid, and others who helped to apportion the eatables could treat all alike. Some fared bette than others in quality if not in quantity. The unfortunate ones growled and talked of favoritism.

A crisis was reached when th second officer mustered the night watch.

When one sheep leads the others will follow. A stout German from Chicago asked bluntly:

"Vere's de goot of blayin' at moundin' gart? Dere is but von ting to gart, und dat is der kidchen."

Community of interest caused many to huddle closer to him. Here was one who dared to say what they all thought. Their feet shufffled in support. The officer, faithful to his trust, was tempted to fell the man, but he thought the circumstances warranted more gentle methods.

"Why are you dissatisfied?" he sternly demanded. "What do you suspect? Are you fool enough to imagine that you are being cheated by people who are dividing their last crust with you?"

"How do you know dat? Dose girls—dey are chokin' mit Mr. Pyne all der day. Dey can'd do dat und be hungry, like us."

"You unmitigated ass!" said the disgusted officer. "There is food here for three people. They have fed eighty-one of us for two days and will keep us going several more days. Can't you figure it out? Isn't it a miracle? Here! Who's for guard and who not? Let us quit fooling."

And the doubters were silenced for the hour.

The hymn-singer endeavored to raise a chorus. He was not greeted with enthusiasm, but a few valiant spirits came to his assistance. A couple of hymns were feebly rendered—and again—silence.

"Say when," observed Pyne calmly when he entered the service-room to find Brand trimming the spare lamp

"Not to-night," said Brand.

"Why not? Hell may break loose at any moment downstairs."

"What has occurred? I heard something of a dispute when the watch mustered at eight o'clock."

"Things are worse now. One of the men found a gallon of methylated spirit in the work-shop."

"Good Heavens! Did he drink any of it?"

"He and his mates have emptied the tin. Eight are helplessly drunk—the others quarrelsome. The next thing will be a combined rush for the store-room."

"But why did not the second officer tell me?"

"He thought you had troubles enough. If he could depend on the remainder of the crowd he would rope the sinners. Says he knows a slave knot that will make 'em tired."

Brand's eyes glistened.

"The fools," he said, "and just as the weather is mending, too."

"You don't mean that?"

"Listen."

He glanced up at the glass dome. Heavy drops were pattering on it; they looked like spray, but Pyne shouted gleefully:

"Is it rain?"

"Yes. I was just going to summon the watch to help in filling every vessel. By spreading canvas sheets we can gather a large supply if it rains hard. Moreover, it will beat the sea down. Man alive, this may mean salvation. Tie those weaklings and summon ever sober man to help."

With a whoop, Pyne vanished. He met Constance on the stairs, coming to see her father before she stretched her weary limbs on the hard floor of the kitchen.

She never knew exactly what took place. It might have been politeness, but it felt uncommonly like a squeeze, and Pyne's face was extraordinarily close to hers as he cried:

"It's raining. No more canvas whiskey. Get a hustle on with every empty vessel."

He need not have been in such a whirl, however.

When the shower came it did not last very long, and there were many difficulties in the way of garnering the thrice blessed water. In the first place, the lighthouse was expressly designed to shoot off all such external supplies; in the second, the total quantity obtained did not amount to more than half a gallon.

But it did a great deal of good in other ways. It brightened many faces, it caused the drunkards to be securely trussed like plucked fowls and dumped along the walls of the entrance passage, and it gave Brand some degree of hope that the rescue operations of the next day might be more successful.

When the rain cleared off, the moon flickered in a cloudy sky. This was a further omen of better fortune. Perhaps the jingling rhyme of Admiral Fitzroy's barometer was about to be justified:

"Long foretold,
Long last;
Short notice
Soon past."

And the hurricane had given but slight warning of its advent.

"I feel it in my bones that we shall all be as frisky as lambs to-morrow," said Pyne, when he joined Brand after the scurry caused by the rain had passed.

"We must not be too sanguine. There is a chance, now. I won't deny that, but the sea is treacherous."

"This reef licks creation. At Bar Harbor, in Maine, where a mighty big sea can kick up in a very few hours, I have seen it go down again like magic under a change of wind."

"That is quite reasonable. Any ordinary commotion has room to spread itself in the tide-way. Here the tide is broken up into ocean rivers, streams with boundaries as definite as the Thames. The main body sweeps up into the bottle-neck of the Channel. Another tributary comes round the north of the Scilly Isles and runs into the tidal stream again exactly at this point. The result often is that whilst little pleasure boats can safely run out into the Bay from Penzance there is a race over the rock that would break up a stranded battleship."

"Say, do you like this kind of life?"

"I have given my best years to it."

Pyne was smoking a pipe, one which Brand lent him. The tobacco was a capital substitute for food, especially as he had established a private understanding with Elsie and Mamie that they were to waylay him when possible and nibble a piece of biscuit he carried in his pocket.

This arrangement was to be kept a strict secret from all especially from Miss Constance and Miss Enid, whilst the little ones themselves did not know that the she-dragons whom Pyne feared so greatly gave them surreptitious doses from the last tin of condensed milk, retained for their exclusive benefit.

"Do you mind me saying that you are a good bit of an enigma?" he hazarded, between puffs.

"It may be so, but I like the service."

"Just so. I was never so happy as when I took a trip as fourth engineer on a tramp in the Gulf of Florida. But that didn't signify being tied to a long nosed oiler for the remainder of my days."

"Are you a marine engineer?" inquired Brand, with some show of interest.

"I hold a certificate, just for fun I had a mechanical twist in me and gave it play. But I am an idler by profession."

The lighthouse-keeper laughed, so naturally that the younger man was gratified. Polite disbelief may be a compliment.

"An idler, eh? You do not strike me as properly classed."

"It's the fact, nevertheless. My grandfather was pleased to invest a few dollars in real estate on the sheep farm where Manhattan Avenue now stands. My uncle has half; my mother had the other half."

"Are both of your parents dead?"

"Yes, years ago. Lost at sea, too on my father's yacht"

"What a terrible thing!"

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the receipts were 500 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 825 hogs and 100 calves.

A feature of the trade was the continued strong undertone to the market for cattle and prices scored a further advance of a quarter cent per lb. for all grades. This is attributed to the small supplies coming forward and the good demand for stock for local consumption, as buyers generally were well cleaned out of supplies. At the higher range of prices the trade was active and everything was cleaned up long before noon.

Choice steers sold at 6½c to 6¾c; good, at 6c to 6¼c; fairly good, at 5½c to 5¾c; fair, at 5c to 5¼c, and the lower grades at 4c to 4½c per lb. There was also a good demand for cows and bulls and sales were made freely at prices ranging from 4c to 6c per lb., as to quality.

Another feature of the trade is the very strong feeling in the market for hogs and prices since Monday have made a further advance of 50c to 60c per cwt., which is due to the scarcity of stock and the keen competition between buyers for supplies. The demand was active and a brisk trade was done with sales of selected lots at $8.25 to $8.60 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

The market for sheep was also stronger and prices show an advance of ¼c per lb. Supplies coming forward are small, for which the demand is good and sales were made at 4½c to 4¾c per lb. Lambs were firm under a good demand, at 6¼c to 6½c per lb. A fairly good trade was done in calves at prices ranging from $3 to $11 each as to quality.

PRETTY WEDDING AT MELROSE

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Portt on Monday evening, when their eldest daughter, Eliza Ann was united in holy wedlock to Joseph L. Simpkins, son of G. E. Simpkins, of Melrose. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. E. Lake, of Shannonville, under an arch. evergreens and white ribbon. Entering the drawing room to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. Harry Hill, of Melrose, the bride looked charming in a gown of cream net over cream silk, trimmed with real lace, and carrying a white prayer book. The happy couple were unattended. The bride was given away by her brother, R. A. Portt.

After the ceremony the guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding supper where the toasts were proposed and honored in the customary manner. The gifts to the bride were both numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends. On the Monday evening following a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents where a dainty oyster tea was partaken of, and where a very enjoyable evening was spent in, music and games.

THE HONEYMOON.

It Didn't Mean What Mr. Tomson Supposed.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

I allus heered dat de milliferous time wid married people wa' de honeymoon.

Somep'n happen one day to gib me some sperience 'bout dis yere honeymoon. One mawnin' I wa' drivin' ma spress wagon, takin' some trunks f'om one house to anodder house out in de country, when I pass by de fa'm ob my frien', Pete Johnsing. Pete wa' only twenty-eight years old an' a might' fine nigga. He had saved up he money and bought a beautiful fa'm, wid a good house on it an' plenty ob stock an' de tools fo' farmin'.

"Mista Johnsing," I says, says I, "yo' got de nices' leetle fa'm in de county—well stocked, two mules and a cow, besides yo' chickens. Yo' ought to be might' thankful to de Lawd, Mista Johnsing, fo' de blessin's he's heaped on yo'."

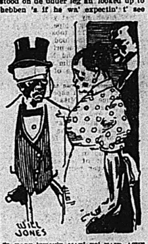
Pete, who wa' a-leanin' on his hoe lookin' kind o' sollum, he says, says he:

"Mista Tomson, yo' don' reckon on my wo'kin' dis yere fa'm all alone. I haint got no one to cook a meal's vittals fo' me; I hab to mak' up ma bed in de mawin' maself, an' git ma own suppa'. Den I sets all alone till bedtime. Haint no house mo' near'n a mile away, an' hits might' lonesome. Fus' t'ing I know, somep'n crack like a pistol, an' I jump; den I hear somp'n singin' outside jes like a h'a'nt wa' goin' by. Atter dat de do' blow op'n all on a suddent an' out go de candle. I must' up courage to slam de do' shet an' lock it; den I go cober up ma face wid de bedclothes. No, Mista Tomson, de blessin's de Lawd hab settled on me haint wha' dey cracked up to be."

Wha' I betteh done was t' punch Bob wid de stump of de whip an' git 'long. It must 'a' bin de debbel dat made me say somep'n wha' got me all mixed up in udder people's doin's.

"Mista Johnsing," I says, says I, "why don' yo' git a wife fo' t' keep yo' company?"

Pete tuk de hoe in de udder han' an' stood on de udder leg an' looked up to hebben 's if he wa' expectin' t' see one ob de angels done come down fo' t' marry him. Ennyhow, he wa' doin' up a pow'ful job of t'inkin', an' he says, says he:



"I HOPE 'TWON'T MAK' YO' HAID ACHE, MISTA TOMSON."

"Mista Tomson, how cum yo' haint got no wife yo'self?"

An' I says, says I, scratchin' ma haid, "Mista Johnsing, I don' git lonesome nohow."

Pete, he do some more t'inkin', an' he says, says he, "Mista Tomson, do yo' know enny likely gal dat would come in yere an' be a comfo't to me?"

De debbel wa' a settin' beside me ready to whisper in my ea', an' he said, "Tell him 'bout Mandy Jones," an' I said, says I:

"Yes, Mista Johnsing, I does know a likely gal, an' I'm t'inkin' she would like to git maaried. I've knowed her eber since she wa' a pickanniny, an' I kin recommend her fo' cookin' an' washin' an' all dem t'ings wha' are necessary fo' de comfort ob de home."

An' Mista Johnsing he looked at me kind a ha'd, an' he says, says he, "Mista Tomson, ef yo' know all dis 'bout de gal how cum yo' don' marry her yo'self?"

Dat wa' a might' ha'd question fo' t' answer. I scratched ma haid ag'in an' said, "Didn' I tole yo' I wa'n't lonesome?"

"Maybe she won' marry yo'," he said.

"Don' know nuttin' 'bout dat," I said. "I nebber axed her."

Well, I sat dar in de wagon talkin' t' Pete Johnsing fo' an hour o' mo', an' I made it up dat I gwine to do him an' Mandy a favor. I wa' t' tell Mandy dat a might' fine nigga wid a fa'm wa' wantin' a wife, an' I wa' t' tell Pete dat a might' fine gal wanted a husban', but Pete done knowed dat already, an' I wa' to bring 'em togedder.

De debbel wa' layin' fo' me, dissuadin' me to mix maself up in udder people's business, an' when he done made me promise dis he done climb down off de seat an' went away chucklin'. I driv' on, t'inkin' what a fine t'ing I wa' gwine to do fo' Pete Johnsing an' Mandy Jones.

Bimeby Pete Johnsing he marry Mandy Jones. I wa' at de weddin' maself. I didn't say nuttin', but when de women folks look at me an' say, 'Mista Tomson, I hearn yo' made dis match," an' "Mista Tomson, de groom an' de bride ought t' be berry thankfu' to you fo' bringin' 'em togedder," I felt might' proud o' maself an' went roun' jis' 's if I wa' at a cake walk. Atter de cemmermony Pete come up to me lookin' 's if somebody 'd doused a bucket o' joy all ober him, an' he says, says he, "Mista Tomson, dis am de happiest day o' ma life, an' I reckon yo' gwine done 't all." An' Mandy she so happy she jis' put her arms 'bout ma neck, an' she say, "How I gwine thank yo' nuf fo' gibbin' me sich a might' fine hus'ban'?" I tell yo' I wa' de cock o' de walk at dat weddin'.

Eberybody tole me dat since I'd been de cause ob he maarin' I mus' make a call. I axed Mrs. Spriggin's when de proper time come to mak' de call, an' she said atter de honeymoon wa' ober. I axed her when de honeymoon wa' ober, an' she says, says she:

"I dunno. Wid some I spec hit's ober might' soon; wid udders dey keep on fightin' right along."

"Yo' mean lubbin'," I says, says I, t'inkin' she wa' funnin'.

"Yo' bette' go git married yo'self. Den yo'll know." And she went off a-sniffin'.

I didn't t'ink nuttin' 'bout dis; but, seein' I didn't know when de honeymoon war ober, I jis' concluded I'd go mak' de call anyway. It wa' two weeks atter de weddin', an' I hearn, as I said, dat de honeymoon las' a month. But I didn't keer. I jis' put on de clothes Cunnel Appleton gib me, an' I went to de Johnsing fa'm. I walked along t'inkin' ef I mak' Pete so happy why I not gwine to mak' maself happy de same way. I wa' t'inkin' ober de gals dat I knowed wha' would mak' me as joyful as Mandy made Pete when I put ma hand on de gate ob dere home. I hearn somep'n go bang agin de do'. Den I didn' heah enny mo', an' I gwine up t' do do' an' knocked. Nobody didn' ax me to come in, so I jis' opened de do'.

Pete wa' a-standin' by de beaury, scowlin', an' Mandy by de stove, lookin' like de cloud comin' befo' de hurricane.

"I thought I hearn somep'n drap," I says, says I.

"Reckon yo' did heah somep'n drap," says Pete, says he. "Mandy jes' done frow a flatiron at me."

"Wha' fo', Mista Tomson," said Mandy, said she, "yo' go tie me up wid a man lak dat? Befo' yo' brought me an' Pete togedder I wa' happy as de day wa' long, singin' an' laughin' lak a leetle kitten. An' now"—

"De claws done growed," de husband butted in.

Mandy grab anudder flatiron an' frow it at Pete. Pete done dodged behin' me, an' fus' t'ing I knowed I didn' know nothin'. When I did know somep'n I wa' lyin' on de bed; Pete wa' a-swabbin' ma haid, an' Mandy wa' a-moppin' up ma blood on de flo'.

"Might' fine way," says Pete, says he, "to treat yo' atter yo' make yo'self a go-between to get her a husban'."

"Mista Johnsing," says I, I says, "de next couple I's a go-between fo' atter I done it I won't come back so soon. I rudder be between 'em when dey's doin' de co'tin' dan durin' de honeymoon when de flatirons is flyin'."

"Sarves yo' right," says Mandy, says she, "fo' makin' a match between a innercent leetle gal an' a low down nigga!"

I put ma han' up to ma haid an' felt de bones. De flatiron done struck it square, but ma haid didn't mind a leetle t'ing lak dat 'cept fo' de blood, so I git up an' I says, says I:

"Mista an' Mrs. Johnsing, please accep' ma apology fo' callin' befo' de honeymoon done gone. I jes' allowed I'd come an' see how happy yo' wa' togedder, but I reckon I called too soon. When de mules is fus' put in harness togedder befo' dey done broke in dey might' fractious. Sometimes dey kick in de dashboard, an' I hab knowed 'em to smash de wagon into kindlin' wood. Dat's when de driver better keep away from de heels ob bofe ob 'em."

"Better not try to drive 'em togedder in de fus' place," said Mandy.

"Mrs. Johnsing," says I, I says, "ef I'd 'a' knowed yo' had de debble in yo' heels I wouldn't 'a' recommended yo'. An' Mista Johnsing," I continued, "ef I'd 'a' knowed"—

I saw Mandy reachin' fo' anudder flatiron. I jist had time to dodge.

"Wha' fo' yo' gwine say dat agin my husban'?"

"Wha' I gwine say agin yo' husban'?"

"Wha' yo' wa' gwine t' say."

"Ef yo'll let me finish I'll go on. I wa' gwine to say when yo' put in de flatiron interjection dat ef I'd 'a' knowed—wha' was it I knowed?"

"I know," says Pete, says he, "dat only a low down nigga 'll butt in between husban' an' wife befo' de honeymoon's ober."

"An' dey hain't got used to de love taps," Mandy tucked on.

"Didn' I apologize?" I tucked on to dat. "Ef yo' kin spa'e a towel to wrap around my haid wha' de love tap struck me instead ob yo' husban' I'll go way an' not come back ag'in till de honeymoon's done gone entirely."

Mandy she done wrap a towel ober de place wha' de sha'p edge ob de flatiron cut de scalp, an' as I went out she says:

"I hope 'twon't mak' yo' haid ache, Mista Tomson. Goodby! Call anudder time atter we done git settled."

When I got to de gate I looked back to say somep'n perlite, an' dem two niggas wa' makin' up, kissin' each udder.

I reckoned atter all I wouldn't try gittin' maaried maself. It is too much wo'k gittin' through de honeymoon.

WANTS NATIONAL ISSUE

W. F. Maclean Gives Notice of Motion in the House.

As Aftermath of Farmers' Bank Case He Proposes That Bank Act Should Provide For a National Issue of Bank Notes Properly Secured—R. S. Lake Offended at Article In English Papers.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—After a three weeks' recess over the Christmas holidays, the House of Commons was regalvanized into life yesterday afternoon. It was private members' day, and a number of matters of more or less public importance were discussed.

An aftermath of the Farmers' Bank failure, was a notice of motion given by W. F. Maclean (South York), that when the revision of the Bank Act came up, he would propose a clause providing for the public inspection of banks, for an issue of national bank notes, properly secured, to take the place of the present bank note issue, and for the repeal of the double liability clause.

R. S. Lake (Qu'Appelle) gave notice that on Thursday he would make reference to what he thought was a particularly offensive article on immigration to Canada, which recently appeared in an English paper, John Bull.

C. L. Owen (E. Northumberland), called the attention of the Minister of Railways and Canals to the pollution of the Trent River and the consequent destruction of game fish. Mr. Graham promised attention.

W. D. Staples (Macdonald, Man.) took exception to an article in the Grain Growers' Guide, under the caption, "The Need for Decided Action," which stated that the farmers elected men to Parliament who simply laughed at them after election day was over. Mr. Borden had outlined the very policy on terminal elevators which the farmers' delegation had advanced, and had divided the House upon it. He himself had moved a resolution asking that the vacancy on the Railway Commission be given to a practical farmer.

R. L. Borden made an allusion to the reciprocity negotiations now in progress at Washington, and asked if the Government could give the House any further information on what basis the negotiations were being conducted, and why Sir Wilfrid changed his mind "not to go to Washington again."

The Prime Minister replied that Mr. Borden was in possession of as much information as he had about the negotiations. The Government would be judged by their action, and any policy adopted would have to be submitted for the approval of the House. "We never went to Washington," declared Sir Wilfrid. "But we are always ready to receive an invitation and to act upon it; we are always ready to improve our trade relations with our neighbors."

In reply to Richard Blain (Cons., Peel) Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King said that Judge Barron, Stratford, had been appointed to investigate the matter of the re-appointment of G.T.R. striker whose reinstatement had been deferred.

Major Sharpe (N. Ontario) asked if the attention of the Government had been called to the failure of the Farmers' Bank, and the irregularities alleged to have been connected with the securing of the charter. He asked if it was the intention to appoint a royal commission to investigate, in the public interest.

"In the absence of the Finance Minister, I would not like to give an answer one way or the other," replied Sir Wilfrid.

"Has there been any petition for a royal commission?" pressed Major Sharpe.

"Not to my knowledge," said the Prime Minister.

The Verville eight-hour-day bill occupied the attention of the House for some time in committee, a few clauses and amendments being passed.

A supplementary return, tabled in the Commons yesterday at the request of Hon. Geo. E. Foster, gives the details of the resolutions adverse to reciprocity with the United States, passed by Boards of Trade and other public bodies throughout the Dominion, also letters of protest which have been addressed to the Minister of Finance on the subject.

The latter include a number of letters from companies objecting to the idea of reciprocity in coal. These are from the Dominion Coal Co., the Acadia Coal Co., the Intercolonial Coal Mining Co., and the Nova Scotia Steel Co. Seventeen P.W.A. lodges of the Maritime Provinces likewise object to reciprocity in coal. Other bodies which have sent in their protest to the Government include Toronto, Stratford, Welland, Deseronto, Hamilton, Kingston and Victoria, B.C., Boards of Trade, the Sydney, C.B., Trades and Labor Council, and the citizens of Stellarton, N.S.

A return, tabled at the request of A. B. Ames, shows that the total cost of the enquiry into the Lumsden charges as to over-classification on the N.T.R., which was conducted last session, was $11,103. Of this amount $9,869 was paid for legal services and reporting, the remaining sum being paid to witnesses as fees. Smith, Markey & Skinner of Montreal received $3,800; F. C. Moss of Toronto, $2,817, and F. H. Chrysler, who was public counsel, $2,500.

A return was presented to Parliament by Hon. Mackenzie King, detailing correspondence which has taken place in connection with the settlement of the Grand Trunk strike. One of the features of the return is a letter signed by Sir Richard Cartwright, in his capacity as acting Premier, to Mr. Hays, pointing out the effect the strike was having on business, throughout Ontario, and urging that, if a settlement could not be effected through conference between the parties, the matter should be left to arbitration.

FIRE IN QUEBEC.

Ancient Capital Is Visited by Loss of $125,000.

Quebec, Jan. 12.—A disastrous fire destroyed the large dry goods stores of Glover, Fry & Co., Fabrique street, yesterday morning, causing a loss valued at about $125,000.

The fire started at 3 o'clock in the cellar, supposedly due to a defect in the furnace. The four-storey building was completely gutted, as well as the large stock of dry goods. The adjoining buildigs, occupied by the Chinic hardware stores and by Geo. Patry, importer of wines, were greatly damaged by fire, smoke and water. The upper flats of these two buildings were occupied by families, Wilson and Patry, who suffered damage by smoke.

P.A.Y.E. In Ottawa.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—For an hour and a half Tuesday night during the rush between 5 and 6.30 o'clock, Messrs. A. B. Ingram, vice-chairman of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, F. H. Wise, chief engineer of the board, R. McRae, master mechanic of the Toronto Street Railway Co., and McCullough, Cousens, and Campbell, Toronto experts, stood at the corners of the main intersections, their watches in their hands, watching Ottawa's working population hurry home via Ottawa Electric Railway Co. cars. All the cars that passed this corner, which is the busiest in the city, are equipped with the pay-as-you-enter system, and despite the thousands of passengers boarding the cars there the average time taken by each one to enter the car, pay his or her fare, and take a seat, was only from one and one-quarter to two seconds.

Want to See Our Navy.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Canada's new navy, with all ships, officers and men and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, if he can come, will be present at the famous Mardi Gras festivities to be held next month at New Orleans if the invitation of M. B. Trezevant, manager of the New Orleans Progressive Union, supervising the Mardi Gras carnival, is accepted. Mr. Trezevant despatched the invitations to the Governor-General and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries yesterday, and they will doubtless be received to-day. Canada's cruiser Rainbow has been given a special invitation.

Increases the Schedule.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—There is talk in the capital of asking reciprocity with the United States on a point where none now exists.

All shipments of goods from Canada to the United States of value of $100 or over must have attached to them a document from the U. S. consulate. To obtain that document it is necessary to pay $2.50, which to all intents is an increase in the regular schedule of duties. There are no Canadian consuls in the United States, so there could not be any corresponding arrangement.

A Chilly Fire.

Winnipeg, Jan. 12.—With the thermometer 35 below zero Tuesday midnight, some twenty or thirty persons occupying apartments in the Parrish block, corner Gertie and Notre Dame streets, were forced to choose between jumping down the burning stairs or climbing down the outside fire escapes, few of them being clad in more than their night clothes. Several small children were in the block, and a number of persons were badly frostbitten or burned, but no lives were lost.

Church Union.

Kingston, Jan. 12.—Rev. W. T. Wilkins, clerk of the Kingston presbytery, speaking regarding the objection to the meeting re church union, holds that the presbytery has a right to discuss the question at the January session. The opinion of some of the local members of the presbytery is that if the protest against the January meeting is pressed, while they might discuss church union if the majority were willing, they could not legally take a vote on union.

Reciprocity In Dairy Products.

Stratford, Jan. 12.—The dairymen in attendance at the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association convention, yesterday afternoon passed the following resolution though not unanimously:

"That the Government of Canada be respectfully but most strongly urged in the negotiations now pending between Canada and the U.S., to provide for complete reciprocal free trade in all lines of dairy produce."

A 1,000-Mile Walk.

Winnipeg, Jan. 12.—J. M. Macoun of the Geological Survey, who, with his party was wrecked last September in a gale off Wager Inlet, Hudson Bay, and given up for lost, is safe at Churchill, and with his fourteen men on a 1,000-mile walk, accompanied by dog trains, carrying outfits and supplies, headed for Gimli, whence this news comes by wire: "Macoun's party reached Fort Churchill about Dec. 1."

For Church Union.

Montreal, Jan. 12.—Church union was the paramount question discussed at Tuesday's meeting of the Montreal presbytery, held in Knox Church, a decision being finally reached in favor of the general assembly's remit embodying the proposed basis, the voting being 33 in favor and 25 against.

Frozen Piety.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—In the Senate yesterday, Senator Landry was told that a clergyman had applied to be appointed chaplain of the steamer Arctic, but that, as it was not customary to employ chaplains on Arctic expeditions, it had been decided not to make a precedent in this case.

No Plural Voting.

Montreal, Jan. 12.—It was announced yesterday that the Mutual Reform Club intend to inaugurate a vigorous campaign in Montreal for the abolition of the plural vote in the Province of Quebec.

FINTON BEFORE A JURY

Saltfleet Farmer Faces Charge of Killing Father.

No Outward Quarrel Occurred Between Father and Son, Say Witnesses In Hearing at Hamilton — Lawyers Blackstock and Staunton Engage In Hot Exchange of Words—Tom Finton Moody That Day.

Hamilton, Jan. 12.—The trial of Thomas Finton, charged with the murder of his father, Elijah S. Finton, a Saltfleet farmer, on April 26, 1910, came up before Justice Teetzel in the Court House here yesterday morning, the hour at which the hearing was to begin, the court room was jammed. During the day the crowd inside grew so great that a number of people who were standing were pushed through the glass doors. The counsel in the case are George Tate Blackstock, K.C., and S. F. Washington, K.C., for the crown, and George Lynch-Staunton, K.C., and S. D. Biggar, K.C., for the prisoner.

In the course of a lengthy address to the jury yesterday morning, Mr. Blackstock gave an outline of the tragedy and the crown's suspicions and allegations, and said that a foul and bloody murder had been committed. The most interesting part was his announcement that there is no evidence to prove that the spots found upon Finton's overalls were of blood, though suspicion would lead to that belief, and his statement that Elijah S. Finton drew $100 from the Traders' Bank a few days before his death, and that $60 was found on the floor near a couch where Tom Finton had been lying on the afternoon after the murder. The crown had evidence that Tom had spent $40 in Hamilton on April 26. Mr. Blackstock also repeated the prisoner's acknowledgement that it looked as if the man who wore the overalls killed his father.

The first witness was George Finton, brother of the deceased farmer, who testified to finding his brother's body out by the barn about 12 o'clock on April 26 of last year. He said that on the morning Tom left the breakfast table about 6.45 to go outside, and his father followed him. Some time later he saw Tom drive off to Hamilton, though he did not see his brother alive again after he left the breakfast table.

To Mr. Staunton, witness said that the father and son seemed on good terms, and Mr. Blackstock's challenge of this statement precipitated a tilt between the two counsel. "It's outrageous to open up the question in re-examination," said Mr. Staunton.

Mr. Blackstock turned from the witness and glared at Mr. Staunton for a moment. He then said: "I think it is entirely outrageous and discourteous for you to make such an accusation. Such a remark is quite characteristic of a habit of yours, which I had hoped you would have done your best to restrain at this trial."

"I repeat, it's outrageous." "That is a piece of grateous impertinence," said Mr. Blackstock.

Finally Mr. Blackstock got the witness to say that, as far as he saw, there was no outward quarrel between father and son, though his brother had said something to him about the money that he had willed Tom.

Witness said that prisoner's wife left her father-in-law's house because she did not like the language of Mrs St. John, a friend of the old man's. To Mr. Blackstock, after Mr. Staunton had raised a vain protest to the question, George Finton said that he himself had never seen anything objectionable about Mrs. St. John's language.

In the afternoon Mrs. Kerr, Elijah Finton's housekeeper, was on the stand for several hours. She said that she noticed that on the morning of the murder Tom was moody, while his father was inclined to be talkative. Tom left the house first, and his father followed. About an hour's afterwards Tom came in again, and she observed that his rubbers were wet, though at that time there had not been any rain. She saw his hitch up, and noticed that he put something that at the time she thought was a broken instrument or a bar, upon the rig. She did not see the deceased around the yard while Tom was hitching up.

Mr. Staunton compared the witness' statement with former statements she had made, and alleged that she materially added to her evidence after she heard that Tom had accused her of putting blood on his overalls. This Mrs. Kerr denied.

Cattle Killed by Gas.

Chatham, Jan. 12.—In the Division Court at Wallaceburg Tuesday, an action was brought by David Eberts of Dover Township, against the Fuel Supply Co. of Sarnia to recover damages for live stock killed by the fumes of natural gas from the mains of the defendant company, which pass through Ebert's fields. Judgment was awarded the plaintiff, $60 damages being allowed.

The plaintiff put up the claim that a peculiar and deadly effect of this gas is that the animals do not become sensitive to it, and suddenly are overcome and die. They are not repulsed by the odor, and consequently do not avoid the vicinity of the leaking pipes.

Collision at Welland.

Welland, Jan. 12.—A small wreck occurred at the Grand Trunk Depot here about 8 o'clock yesterday morning, when a Wabash engine with caboose, southbound, smashed into a freight train standing at the depot, partly wrecking the Grand Trunk caboose and crushing the front of a freight car. The locomotive was badly damaged, the front trucks being torn off the trucks.

The engineer was slightly injured, the rest of the trainmen being unhurt. A bad curve in the road here badly obstructs the view. It is claimed that the semaphore was partly down.

Stepped on Matches.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Accidentally stepping on some matches in the match factory of the E. B. Eddy Co., Miss E. St. Louis, of Hull, an employe, had a narrow escape with her life yesterday. The matches ignited and caught her clothings, the girl running screaming from the mill. Charles De Repentigny, a timekeeper, managed to get hold of the girl and tearing off her clothing probably saved her life. De Repentigny came away with badly burnt arms and hands, while the girl escaped with minor injuries to her limbs.

Stole Oats From Neighbor.

Cornwall, Jan. 12.—The winter assizes closed here last evening, after a two-days' sitting before Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, chief justice. There were two civil and one criminal case on the docket. In the case of Joshua G. Fetterly of Matilda, charged with stealing about 60 bags of oats from a neighbor, the prisoner pleaded guilty after the grand jury had returned a true bill against him. He was sentenced to two and a half years in Kingston Penitentiary.

A Bigger Proposition.

Brantford, Jan. 12.—Representatives from Preston, Berlin and Galt recently conferred here with local hospital representatives in reference to the establishment of a tuberculous hospital for the adjacent counties on a large farm at Galt. As a result, the movement here for a Brant County hospital has been delayed, and the medical association has been asked to consider the bigger proposition.

Hotelkeeper Prosecuted.

Brantford, Jan. 12.—Local hotelkeepers have inaugurated a campaign to prevent minors from getting liquor under false pretences on the statement that they are of age. The Kirby House here yesterday prosecuted a young man who had been ordered away. Other cases are to follow. The license inspector is assisting the hotelkeepers in the movement.

New York, Jan. 12.—Geo. W. Perkins, former member of the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., has been chosen by Mr. Morgan, it was reported yesterday, as one of the three trustees for the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Should Mr. Perkins become a trustee, he will fill the position held by the late Grover Cleveland.

Tariff Conference Stays in Session Three Hours.

This and the Fact That Canada's Experts Have Been Called Into the Negotiations Seem to Indicate That Details Are Being Discussed—Rumor Says Advances of United States Were Extensive.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The outlook for a successful termination to the Canadian-American trade negotiations now pending is considerably brighter to-day. Hon. Mr. Fielding and Hon. Mr. Paterson conferred with Secretary Knox for almost three hours yesterday afternoon, and when they separated there was a much more optimistic tone in the little circle of diplomats. For the first time since the conference started the Canadian Ministers called to the meeting their two departmental assistants—namely Mr. John McDougall, Deputy Minister of Customs, who was summoned from Ottawa, and Mr. James A. Russell, the tariff expert of the Finance Department. The presence of these men indicates that the negotiations have passed the initial stages, and are on a basis more likely to lead to something definite.

It is stated in Washington circles that the American proposals were found by the Canadians to be unexpectedly broad and comprehensive, giving substance to President Taft's seriousness in opening up the whole subject. In harmony with this the President has told recent callers at the White House that for the present the Americans are not worrying over what the personal or sectional opposition may be to their proposals.

Expressions of opinion at the capitol yesterday was rather more favorable to the principle of freer trade with Canada. Inasmuch as legislation affecting national revenues has to be passed upon by the House of Representatives the attitude of the leaders of that body on this question is of importance. Champ Clark of Missouri is billed for the Speakership of the next House, and as such will be House leader. At present he is the minority leader, and speaks with authority for the Democratic party.

"I am, and always have been, in favor of reciprocity with all the nations of the world, especially with Canada and Central and South America," declared Mr. Clark. "They are our neighbors, and we ought to have the bulk of their foreign trade. One of the most foolish things that ever happened was the abrogation of the treaty between Canada and the United States in 1866.

"I am in favor of anything in reason," said Mr. Clark, "that will make closer relations between Canada and the United States. We are the same sort of people, the same breed."

Portuguese Railway Strike.

Lisbon, Portugal, Jan. 12.—A majority of the railroad employes in Portugal struck yesterday.

The Government had long been warned of the movement and took active measures to maintain the service, with partial success.

Died at Ninety.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—The death occurred Tuesday night in L'Original, at his old home, of ex-Judge Peter O'Brian, of the united counties of Prescott and Russell. The late judge was 90 years of age, and retired from the bench several years ago going into private life in L'Original. While suffering from the effects of weakness due to old age the deceased had always been up and about the old homestead and his death was very peaceful.

Y.M.C.A. for Pekin.

New York, Jan. 12.—John Wanamaker has just promised to erect his sixth Y.M.C.A. building in the Far East. It was announced yesterday at the international headquarters here that he had pledged $60,000 to provide a Y.M.C.A. building for Pekin, China. It was also announced that, of the $2,000,000 fund recently started to erect fifty or sixty association buildings in stragetic centres in foreign lands, $1,800,000 has been pledged.

Killed by Snowslide.

Nelson, B.C., Jan. 12.—Fred E. Bartlett, a resident in the Slocan district for 17 years, was killed Tuesday at Silverton by a snowslide from the roof of one of the buildings at the Galena Farm Mines. ENERGY—THE HUMAN POWER-HOUSE.

ergy, which is conducted by the nerves to every part of the "human plant"—the body.

It is quite proper to call the human body a plant, the brain a power-house, and the nerve centres dynamos; for it is in the nerve centres, as in a electric dynamo, that a transformation of eergy takes palce. It is here in the human dynamos that the form of energy known as NERVE FORCE first makes its appearance.

All known phenomena are due to energy, which has different forms of manifesting itself. Fuel has energy in a latent state. It is burnt in a furnace, and the energy that was latent becomes manifest by being transformed into heat and mechanical motion through a steam engine. The dynamo transforms this mechanical motion through electricity; and as long as the medium is appropriate,

A WEIRD STORY FROM BRANTFORD

In the Globe of to-day there appeared the following special telegram from Brantford:

BRANTFORD, Jan. 11—Brantford may yet see professional hockey this season. "Buck" Irving's new Eastern Pro. League has proved a disappointment in some ways. Belleville being particularly weak in its support of its team. Irving now plans to drop Belleville from the eastern circuit and bring the Belleville team to Brantford, entering it under Brantford colors, with Galt, Berlin and Waterloo, in the Western Ontario League. He wired to-day making the proposition, which is received locally with such favor that he has been requested to come here and arrange the details. Irving says the team is a good one, and the other western Ontario teams are anxious to have Brantford enter the league.

Mr. Irving was interviewed by The Intelligencer with reference to the above and made the following statement:

Berlin, Waterloo and Galt want another team in the Western League and wish Brantford to come in. I was asked at Brantford if I would handle the team. Nothing has been done as yet, but the chances are that some one will have a team in Brantford, probably the Brantford Rink Company, and I am securing players for them. Mr. W. Scranton will be manager. It is rot as to the Belleville team being transferred, although the gates have not always been satisfactory, owing to bad weather and many other attractions; still I have had the warm support of the press and the best citizens who take an interest in hockey.

HOCKEY NOTES.

City League Hockey Match t-morrow night at 7 o'clock. Admission 15c.

The Picton Juniors and the Ontarios will meet again on Monday night next on Belleville ice. The game will be a lively one, as there is little to choose between the teams.

A referee in an Eastern Ontario pro. hockey game ruled off a player for scrapping. The player turned and punched the referee, who promptly knocked the player down with his bell.

Trenton Pros. will meet the locals here to-night. Both teams will strive very hard for victory as the winning of this match means much to them.

Two senior and two junior rinks from the Napanee Curling Club came to the city this afternoon and this evening will play the first of a series of district matches with similar rinks from the local club. Messrs. F. Dolan and J. Ifer will skip the senior rinks and J. S. Cook and W. M. Watson the junior rinks for the local club.

HOW J. A. FARRELL CLIMBED TO TOP

Climax of 32 Years Working Career—Story That Reads Like a Romance

NEW YORK, Jan. 11—"From mill hand to Steel Trust President" sounds like the title of a paper novel, and ordinarily would see mto be a tale founded on the imagination of a romancer. This, however, accurately describes the 32-year working career of James A. Farrell, who is to-day president of the United States Steel Corporation and successor to Wm. Ellis Cory.

Here are some facts of the career of the corporation's new president:

Started working when he was sixteen years old.

First position was that of a laborer in a wire mill.

First wages were $4.65 a week.

Salary now is $100,000 a year.

Is forty-eight years old.

Is over six feet in height and weighs 220 pounds.

At twenty-five became superintendent of the Pittsburg Wire Co.

Father was an Irishman; mother a New Englander.

Has been married twenty-two years and has five children.

CARED FOR IN CELLS

Four tramps were last night afforded protection at the police station in the cells. Of these two were only 10 years of age. The party claimed to have come here looking for work.

SOME NOTES OF PRO. HOCKEYISTS

Toronto Star:—

"Mag" McGregor, of the Tecumsehs, played for Berlin pros. Monday night, when they defeated Waterloo, while last night he lined up with Port Hope, and helped them defeat Belleville.

Harry Burgoyne, of the Picton pros., and Andy Kyle, of the Port Hope pros., both spent Sunday in town. The game is taking in great style in Port Hope," said Andy. "The people like it, and will continue to like it if only the referees will cut the rough stuff out. The rough stuff does not last. The crowd tires of continual dirtiness. They are surely putting me over the jumps down there, but I guess I'll learn to take care of myself before I get hurt much. Port Hope will win that league."

Burgoyne is just as sure that Picton will be champions. "Wait until we get going and we'll show them all," said Burgoyne. "Picton is the greatest little sporting town I was ever in. The people treat us like princes. We have got to have stricter referees. Of course the boys are all out to make good and will give it to a speedy opponent if they get a chance, and you bet the lad who gets it is going to give a receipt for it. A good tight referee will stop a lot of that and make the games better to watch. I've got two gashes already, one in the mouth and one over the eye."

Walter Burgoyne, of Toronto, the Picton point player, a brother of Harry Burgoyne, is developing into a hard body checker. Pete Charlton has him in front of him, and Pete has taught the lad to keep 'em out if he has to shoot them into the rafters. He isn't dirty, but he body checks like a fiend.

PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY.

To-night's Game.

The League game between Trenton and Belleville at the Arena to-night will be a fast brilliant game of hockey from start to finish. The ice is in perfect condition, so the game so the game should be full of startling plays, for the full hour's time set play. Reports from Trenton say that Reddy McMillan is determined to play the game of his life here to-night aganst his old town. He will be cheking Capt. Dusome. It should be a pretty battle between these two expert players for the honors.

The funeral of the late W. J. Farley, of Seattle, will take place from his father's residence, Canifton, on Saturday, Jan. 14, at 2.30, p. m., to Belleville cemetery. Services at the house at 2 p. m.

HER PHYSICIAN ADVISED

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbus, Ohio.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during change of life. My doctor told me it was good, and since taking it I feel so much better that I can do all my work again. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fine remedy for all woman's troubles, and I never forget to tell my friends what it has done for me."—Mrs. E. Hanson, 304 East Long St., Columbus, Ohio.

Another Woman Helped.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter."—Mrs. Charles Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

You may think you would like the millionaire's job, but how would you like his second wife in your old age?

Informative.

"One half the world doesn't know how the other half lives."

"It is their own fault, then."

"Whose fault?"

"Oh, half the world's!"

"Why?"

"Because magazine writers are doing nothing else but telling them."

Had the Evidence.

"Ma, were we rich once?"

"No; just in comfortable circumstances."

"But we must have been rich, very rich."

"Why do you think so?"

"I remember when we used to eat bacon."

Annoyed Grandma.

He saw the charmer on the stage
And wondered if she was of age,
And when he sent her a bouquet
Across the footlights far away
Of course she smiled and thanked him,
But when he said he loved her so
And asked her if her heart was free
She took the child across her knee
And very deftly spanked him.

Jones' Opinion.

"What is Jones talking about?"

"Oh, automobiles."

"Likes them?"

"No. Says they are just a passing fad, like the bicycle."

"What's Jones' business?"

"Breeds driving horses."

Economical.

"He is married, you say?"

"Yes."

"Did he marry a good cook?"

"No."

"Too bad. Why?"

"Said he could hire a cook more cheaply."

Fine.

"Is she beautiful?"

"Yes."

"Very?"

"Well, her face is her fortune, and she is said to be extremely wealthy."

Lost Opportunity.

"Know that man I just spoke to?"

"No."

"He is a bank president."

"Why didn't you tell me sooner, so that I might have fallen dead?"

Rational Holiday.

Thrice welcome then Thanksgiving day!
May
You come often and stay
Long!
We are for you strong.
We like your style.
Our smile
Is on straight
When you are at the gate.
No noisy din
Ushers you in.
You do not need for backer
The cannon cracker
Or the torpedo cane,
For you are sane.
Neither do you demand
A grand
Piano for a gift
As you drift
In.
You win
(And you are a winner)
On your old fashioned dinner.
Oh, you classy feed,
You are indeed
A theme that might inspire
The poet's blooming lyre.
First there is the old turk,
A work
Of art and skill,
To head the bill,
And all along the line
Are features superfine—
Potatoes, Irish or sweet;
Gravy never yet beat,
Rich red cranberry sauce
To come across
On call.
Nor is that all.
No; the list is just begun.
Under a ton
Of good things the table groans,
But its creaky tones
Are music mighty fine.
Thanksgiving for mine!

GOOD FORM CHIT CHAT

Good Form

Good manners are not difficult for a young girl to acquire, but it is difficult for the average young girl to realize their tremendous importance. Yet if she will only stop to think she will remember some old woman who, in her eyes, holds everything of grace and charm. Then why does she not try to imitate her? Why does she not study this woman's personality and find out the secret of this charm? And if she studies this older woman, provided her model is a woman of distinction, she will always find that the secret of this charm generally lies in good manners.

The schoolgirl should try first to be considerate. In being that she will find nearly everything else will be comparatively easy. She will not talk in loud, breezy tones, because she will know that she is disturbing other persons; she will not hurry through the streets in a bold and pushing manner, nor stand in foolish, giggling groups on street corners, because she will know that she is making of herself a nuisance.

Nor will she enter shops and engage in high pitched conversation, plentifully larded with unintelligible slang, incommoding other customers by blocking the counters.

If she will only accept consideration as a foundation and conscientiously begin her building, using quiet tones and soft colors, laying well polished stones of tact and grace one upon another, leaving out all that is harsh and unlovely, she will soon find herself possessed of a structure called a charming personality.

And once a young girl is safely housed within these walls she need never fear the lack of friends and popularity.

Invitations by Telephone.

Women who entertain much agree that to have an immediate answer to an invitation, as is possible by use of the telephone, saves a hostess much nervous strain. But at the same time they admit that, however formal the occasion may be, if the persons are invited by word of mouth there is a certain casualness which a written request never can acquire. It is as though Dame Etiquette said, "You may, but I wouldn't."

One strong argument against telephone invitations is the danger of misunderstanding the date. This has happened more than once on the occasion of formal dinners, and one or more guests have arrived the wrong evening. That is why an invitation so given must be followed by a written answer, in which day, date and hour are repeated. Such a communication is regarded as imperative, even though a positive answer has been given over the telephone.

Nor should there be any delay in sending such a note. The person invited should go directly from the instrument to her desk and write the prospective hostess as though she were answering a note.

If any error has been made in time her note, containing the hour and the day as she understands it, will receive an immediate response from the other woman, making right the mistake.

Hints For School Behavior.

The first weeks away at school are difficult. Even where there is no homesickness to contend with, so much depends upon first impressions. A girl's entire school life—yes, after life—may hinge on the way she acts at first.

Here are a few don'ts that may help:

Don't boast, pose as exclusive or talk braggingly of your home friends.

Don't rush into friendship. The most desirable girls are rarely the most approachable.

Don't be confidential on short acquaintance. You will live to regret it, especially if you discuss teachers or other girls.

Don't be fresh, domineering, self assertive or a know-it-all as a stranger. Nothing will so surely "queer" you.

Don't be stand-offish. Willingness to meet friends halfway is a big asset toward popularity.

Don't complain of the food and go in for general criticism. This enrages the old girls who love the school and exact a school spirit in newcomers.

Don't go in for crushes on a day or two acquaintance. Don't go in for them at all if your school life is to be broadening and you wish to be a general favorite.

Wedding Hints.

For an early morning wedding a tailor dress is best form for the bride. She may wear flowers or carry them, as she chooses. The bridegroom may wear a sack suit, but a cutaway would be better. With the latter a high hat would be required, but with the former a derby would be correct.

Bridesmaid's duties are honorary. She should be willing to make herself useful to the bride before and immediately after the wedding.

At the ceremony she precedes the bride into the room or church, following her from it. She does nothing during the ceremony, as it is a maid of honor who holds the bride's flowers and turns back the veil.

For the Children

American Boy Scout Band Leading Parade.

When the American Boy Scouts of Brooklyn paraded a short time ago they were headed by a military band composed of boy members. They turned out 5,000 strong. Over the entire length of the three mile march hundreds of thousands of people cheered and waved flags and otherwise encouraged the lads, and as the bands broke forth in martial strains the lads swung along like so many veterans. Those who witnessed the parade were amazed with the soldierly appearance and the precision with which the boys performed their evolutions.

There were many features in the parade, showing the scout from the recruit stage to the finished product. There were Red Cross patrols, the members of which are being trained in first aid work; the bicycle patrol, composed of dispatch bearers; the girl auxiliaries, who act as nurses, and the signal corps, composed of boys who have learned to use the semaphore and to "wigwag" as well as those who are studying wireless telegraphy.

With the exception of a few recruits all the boys wore the olive drab uniform. Some of them carried blankets and other camp paraphernalia, and one company was armed with rifles.

An Oddity In Numbers.

Ask some one to write in order the numbers 1 to 9, leaving out 8. Then ask him which of the figures he has written he considers least well formed. Whichever one he decides is the worst multiply by 9 and use the result as a multiple for the line of figures. The answer will be expressed all in the one figure chosen as poorest. For example, suppose 3 is considered as imperfectly formed. We will multiply the line by 27, which is 9 times 3, thus:

12345679
27
86419753
24691358
333333333

You can then say to the victim, "If you keep on practicing that way you will soon improve on 3's."

Game of Elements.

To play this game seat yourselves in a circle, take a clean duster or handkerchief and tie it in a big knot, so that it may easily be thrown from one player to another. One of the players throws it to another, at the same time calling out either of these names: Earth, air, fire or water. If "earth" is called, the player to whom the ball is thrown has to mention something that lives on the earth, as lion, cat; if "air" is called, something that lives in the air; if "water," something that lives in the water, but if "fire" is called the player must keep silence. Always remember not to put birds in the water or animals or fishes in the air. Be silent when "fire" is called and answer before ten can be counted. For breaking any of these rules a forfeit must be paid.

Christmas After Dinner Trick.

Place three almonds on the table and cover each with a hat. Show your audience that you have nothing concealed in your hands and allow some one to mark the almonds so that there can be no question of any substitutes. Then pick up each hat, take the nut from under it and eat it, replacing the hats on the table. "Now," you say, "I will make all three nuts come under one hat. Which hat shall it be?"

After one of the three hats is selected you wave your hand mysteriously over the hat, say "Hocus pocus," and place the hat on your head.

This is an old trick, but it always takes. No one can deny that the three nuts eaten are under the hat on your head—now, can they?

Only Way Out.

Relying on his skill in lying,
He poured a tale in wife's ear,
But when he found he had been spying
He said, "Select your hat, my dear."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

A MAN'S idea of a rest is to lie on the lounge with his feet in the best sofa pillows, while a woman's is to sit and embroider holes in a piece of linen.

Many an otherwise happy hope is ruined because some person who can't will sing.

Some people make mistakes as if they were doing them on commission.

There are people who if they succeed in making their families miserable by their vagaries are satisfied that they are living the simple life.

The postcard album has superseded the family photographs as entertainment for callers.

Some men take to politics for glory, but they feel that they have to get a living out of it first.

The devil takes a vacation when he has started a church row.

There is no use trying to give a gold mine to a man with a cold in his head.

A fool millionaire and his actress wife are soon parted, leaving a fool and an actress millionaire.

Ancients and Moderns.

Where are the mighty men of old
Who used to tear around
And gather glory tinted gold
And other nations pound?
Alas, they all are laid away
Safe in the halls of fame!
But we have other men today
Who get there just the same.

Where are the men who used to plow
The mighty, raging main
And scuttle every passing scow
On which their guns might train?
They lie some forty fathoms deep.
Long since are hushed their knells.
Our pirates are the ones who keep
The summer place hotels.

Where are the men who took an ax
And proclamation made
The startling message that the tax
Should all to them be paid?
Their methods softer are, though quite
As forceful is their "must."
They get us, and they get us right,
By managing a trust.

Yes, things are changed around a bit.
The sword is sheathed today,
And men depend upon their wit
To take the stuff away.
And, looking carelessly around,
Who would a doubt express
That they a better way had found
To gather in success?

Catching Both Ways.

"Who do you suppose invented the hobble skirt?"

"Must have been a one legged man."

"No; I think it was some dressmaker who thought she could save money on the cloth, with the chance for increasing the price when the styles changed again and required more goods."

Charlie's Bargain.

"Papa."

"Yes."

"Charlie has bought mining stock for 10 cents a share. Don't you think that is a bargain?"

"Well, I don't know. He is certainly easily sold, whether the stock is or not."

The Difference.

"Pa?"

"Yes, my little son."

"I like to eat my dates."

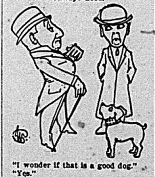
"Certainly! We all do."

"Sister doesn't."

"Doesn't she?"

"No; she keeps hers."

Always Good.



"I wonder if that is a good dog."

"Yes."

"How can you tell?"

"Because he is mine."

Explanation.

"My wife believes everything I tell her."

"Impossible!"

"Fact."

"She must be credulous."

"No. I am simply mighty careful what I tell her."

Appropriate.

"Why be such a fool?"

"Why?"

"Yes."

"Well, it seems so well suited to amuse the company."

The Vehicle.

"Did she go off in a towering rage?"

"Huh?"

"I say, did she go off in a huff?"

"No; she used an airship."

Not Yet.

When we have wings we'll rise and fly
When pleasant summer breezes cease
Off to some sunny southern sky,
And then we'll be as smart as geese.

Bad Man For That.

"He is stupid and honest."

"What a man to hang a jury!"

A sunny smile and a dimple will go a long way toward selling a man a book, but it won't help him a bit in explaining to his wife how it happened.

When a woman marries for support and the man marries for an attendant, what is the answer?

A wise man learns by the mistakes of others to conceal his own.

It isn't exactly a desire to uproot evil that impels a man to dig for money.

Strange! Happiness, they say, is a state of mind, yet a person in a state of mind is never happy.

The Main Chance.

Now congress, chastened and subdued,
To Washington will come
To doctor laws that may be crude
And slightly out of plumb,
To guide the trembling ship of state
Along its distant way,
With peace and safety for its freight
And—well, to draw its pay.

On measures for the public weal
It will be standing pat,
As steady as a bar of steel
Or anything like that,
And anything that isn't right
Will get it in the neck,
For something noble it will fight—
That and its mileage check.

Economy will be the word
That flutters down the line,
And not a whisper will be heard
That smacks of a combine.
No fat appropriation bill
May see the light of day
Unless some minor one that will
A trifle boost their pay.

Yes, it will soon be on the job,
And very shortly now
A nation's restless pulse will throb
As congress shows it how.
With care and watchfulness and zeal
It slowly will advance,
Nor will it pull a shady deal
Unless it has a chance.

Improved the Effect.

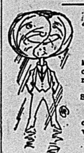
"What a magnificent building!" exclaimed Uncle Cyrus, who was gazing at the capitol building in Washington for the first time.

"It is," said the casual stranger who was volunteering information. "And it looks much better now than it used to when the roof was flat."

"Was the roof flat once?"

"Sure. It was built flat. That dome you see on top like a big balloon was caused by expansion under the pressure of hot air generated by congress."

"You don't say so!"



Missed His Calling.

"He doesn't know enough to come in out of the rain."

"No, he doesn't. Say?"

"Well."

"What a fine cabbage patch he would make."

Some Handicap.

"He has lost his job as a chauffeur."

"What was the matter?"

"The train ran over his car."

"Wouldn't the boss give him back his job?"

"Maybe, but he couldn't find enough of him in one place to make a bargain with."

Vol. 44 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY JANUARY 13, 1911. NO. 68

EX-MAYOR J. W. JOHNSON REPLIES TO MR. MARSH

Records of the Registry Office Quoted—Circumstantial Arraignment of the City's Trustees--A Grave and Serious Offence Directly Charged--Collusion and Conspiracy Alleged--Restitution Demanded

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—Referring to the letter of ex-Mayor Marsh in your issue of January 11th, I cannot aid him in the role he assumes of an injured innocent.

Before the publication of Mr. Burrell's letter, we had the records of the Registry office which prove that Mr. Marsh and Mr. Price took advantage of their positions as trustees, with the special knowledge it confered, to benefit themselves and their relatives financially at the expense of individual citizens and of the city treasury. Whatever doubt may have lingered was dispelled by Mr. Burrell's letter. "Not direct, but via Mrs. Smith," to quote Mr. Mr. Burrell's terse expression, was the system established by the Mayor and Treasurer for the sale of city lots. Such solicitude as these gentlemen chowed for the financial advancement of their relatives is touching. They gave them notice of the land bargains, secured Power of Attorney to act for them and stood off the citizens of Belleville who desired to purchase until all the machinery was in readiness to make the citizens pay toll to the relatives of the Mayor and Treasurer.

I saw and read in the Registry Office the Power of Attorney given by Harry A. Davidson, Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, to David Price, "to sell real estate for him in the city of Belleville," which was recorded on October 12, 1910. I saw and read in the Registry Office the General Power of Attorney given by Isabella E. Smith, Township of Hawkesbury, County of Prescott, to Euretta S. Marsh, registered October 22, 1910.

The ordinary man sees in this action collusion and conspiracy, and when he follows the matter to a finish, he finds that the result contemplated was achieved—a profit—a toll of about $1,600 secured.

That money belongs to the City of Belleville, Mr. Marsh. The right and fair thing for you to do is to restore to the city the proportion you or your relative secured. When you do, I shall be amng the first to commend your action.

Yours faithfully,
J. W. JOHNSON.

MALT LIQUORS HARMLESS UNDER NEW BREWERY PROCESS

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Chemist Overbeck, who announced lately that he had discovered how to make alcohol without fermentation, has patented a process for de-alcoholizing malt liquors. A company is being formed to operate under the patent. The first brewery will be started shortly at Grimsby. Mr. Overbeck says the method is completely successful. It prevents beer and stout from being intoxicating, while leaving the flavor sparkle and palatability unimpaired. Fifty-two experts tasted the de-alcoholized liquors, and more than half of them were unable to distinguish between them and those containing alcohol. Others detected a subtle difference, which would not be apparent to the average taster. The process is applicable to all beers, and it will be possible for teetotalers to drink Bass and other familiar ales without breaking the pledge. The new company proposes to buy famous brands de-alcoholize them and put them on the market, with the familiar labels, with a blue ribbon attached, to designate that they are not intoxicating.

Mr. Overbeck's discovery has another side. He says that every hogshead of beer de-alcoholized by his process will yield about three gallons of proof spirit. This forms an excellent mild whiskey, which can be sold as such. It burns clearly and steadily without fumes. If de-alcoholized beers becomes general. Spirits will be produced in such quantities as would glut the market. It could then be used the same as petrol, which might be ousted from the marautoboats and aeroplanes are a possibility of the near future.

CUTTING A TUMOR FROM THE NECK OF A LION

Head Keeper Bill Snider of the Central Zoo Park got ready the other morning to take a tumor out of the neck of a 14-month old lion cub. He was born in the Zoo at about the time of the Hudson-Fullerton Celebration, and so was named Henry Hudson.

Several weeks ago a swelling began to form in his neck just in front of where his Adam's apple would be if lions had Adam's apples. It grew to be larger than a croquet ball, and for the last few days the cub has been unable to eat any kind of food suitable for a growing lion. He was fed with a spoon, which didn't do any good to his dignity and left him weak physically.

Director John W. Smith decided that the swelling was a subcutaneous fibrous tumor, and that if were not cut out it would grow to be considerably larger, and the operation was decided upon as a necessity.

Yesterday morning Snyder placed a full supply of antiseptics, sharp knives, and scissors, catgut, needles, and other surgical necessities, in an empty cage next to that occupied by Henry Hudson, which is connected by a door. Standing in front of the cage was a squad of helpers provided with ropes, nets and bags.

The cub suspected that all these doings concerned him and was suspicious of the whole business. He retreated to a far corner, watching there, watching every movement of the men and growling intermittently and making his eyes so green every time his anger rose to a high point.

Snyder stepped from the empty cage into that occupied by the cub and prepared to throw a net over his head. The lion crouched down a little lower and got ready for business. Snyder threw the net bag at the cub's head. With a snarl he leaped forward, catching it in his teeth instead of letting it slip over his head. Then came a struggle between the cub and Snyder, the keeper to tear the bag out of the cub's teeth and to tear it all to pieces. The keepers outside became so interested that it seemed to escape them that at any moment the cub might turn loose the bag and begin chewing at Snyder's leg.

In the end Snyder won his point and the cub was blindfolded. That had been accomplished at the rear of the cage. It was now necessary to get him over to the front and tie him so firmly that the delicate operation could be carried out without a struggle. Seizing the cub by the tail, he dragged him over to the front side, head out of the canvas bag and was making strong efforts to get around at his captor. The keepers slipped ropes around his head and feet and body. Snyder got another bag over his head and in two minutes the cub lay lashed to the outside steel bars with his neck bared for the operation

Considerable cocaine was injected into the neck in the region of the tumor, and then Snyder opened the skin and cut out the fibrous mass. Having washed the wound with antiseptic fluids, he placed together the flaps of skin and took seven stitches to hold them in place. The cub was then untied and allowed to rise. Snyder remained in the cage for a few minutes to watch him. The cub didn't want to fight any more. He walked wearily over to a corner and laid down.—New York Times.

HOLSTEIN BREEDERS OF THIS DISTRICT HAD INTERESTING SESSION HERE

The Aims and Object of the Gathering--Formation of an Association Discussed--Motion to That Effect Unanimously Adopted--Belleville District Holstein Breeders' Club Organized--Officers Elected

A large and representative gathering of the yeomen of Hastings, Prince Edward, Peterborough and Northumberland counties, who are breeders of Holstein cattle, assembled at the Anglo-American Hotel, here, yesterday afternoon. Amongst those present were the following:

S. L. Terrill, Wooler; W. L. Wood, Wooler; J. M. Branscombe, Bloomfield; M. A. Foster, Bloomfield; M. Scott, C. T. Deakin, Picton; M. E. Maybee, Trenton; W. Adams, Wooler; S. J. Foster, Bloomfield; R. W. Ireland, Smithfield; E. Terrill, Wooler; G. A. Anderson, Ameliasburg; J. R. Anderson, Ameliasburg; B. Mallory, Belleville; A. D. McIntosh, Stirling; A. D. Foster, Bloomfield; J. A. Caskey, Madoc; D. E. Hagerman, Minto; Wm. Pollock, Wellmans Corners; G. A. Brethour, Norwood; G. A. Sharp, Stirling; G. A. Kingston, Campbellford; R. Leavens, Bloomfield; F. R. Mallory, Frankford; A. P. McConnell, Picton; C. Metcalfe, Picton; D. M. Donald, Trenton.

Mr. B. Mallory was voted to the chair and read the following circular, which briefly set forth the objects of the meeting.

(a) To become better acquainted.

(b) To encourage the breeding of Holstein cattle in our district and throughout the Deminion.

(c) To advertise our district as a centre for high class stock that we may compare favorably with other districts which are advertising, i.e., the Quebec Breeders; the Brockville Breeders, etc.

(d) To act as a stimulus to the price of milk and cream by seeking new channels in which to sell our product.

(e) To hold an annual banquet previous to annual meeting of Holstein Friesian Association of Canada where we may discuss any proposed legislation which may materially affect us as a district, and to act as a unit in so far as possible in any proposed changes in officers or by-laws of said Association.

(f) If thought desirable or advisable to hold annually or biennially a consignment sale in some railroad centre of our district, where buyers from a distance may make good train connections, and have good accommodations during the sale.

(g) To have executive officers for the district, whose duty it will be to look after any interest in the district during their term of office.

(h) To have a name for our district which we may use as an attraction to buyers from a distance by jointly advertising the many excellent qualities of our cattle and the many herds which they could visit within a limited radius of the city of Belleville.

(i) To seek some special grants for the fairs in our district because of our distance from the large centres now receiving grants.

On motion, Mr. B. F. McIntosh was appointed Secretary pro tem.

The question of the advisability of forming an Association was discussed at considerable length.

Mr. J. A. Caskey, of Madoc, thought it was a move in a right direction to form a Breeders' Association in this district. United we stand, divided we fall. We should be as one body in this matter. There was practically no end as to where the breeding of Holstein cattle would be. He moved that a Breeders' Association be formed.

Mr. A. D. Foster, of Prince Edward County, in seconding the motion, spoke in support of forming an Association.

Upon a vote being taken, the motion was unanimously adopted.

NAME OF CLUB.

Mr. A. P. McVannel was in hearty support of a Breeders' Assocation being formed in this section of the community. Buyers have come from British Columbia to this district looking toward the purchase of grade Holstein cattle. He went away without procuring the cattle he desired, and no doubt said he was unable to get what he wanted in this district. An instance like this would of necessity do more harm than good. We had good breeders here and had everything that was essential to raising good cattle. He suggested that the name of the Association be called the Bay of Quinte Holstein Breeders Association.

Mr. G. A. Brethen, of Norwood, was of the opinion that the name Midland District be used for the Association.

Mr. Terrill, of Seymour, suggested that the Association be called the Central Ontario Breeders' Association.

Mr. Fred Mallory thought that if the word Central Ontario was used it might embrace the city of Toronto, as that city, under the division of districts for fair purposes, was in Central Ontario.

Mr. J. R. Anderson, of Ameliasburg, would favor the name of Belleville, Bay of Quinte or Midland in preference to Central Ontario.

After some further discussion it was unanimously agreed to that the name of the Association should be Belleville District Holstein Breeders' Club.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows:

Hon. President—B. Mallory.

President—A. D. Foster, of Bloomfield, P. E. Co.

Vice-President—G. A. Brethen, of Norwood.

Sec'y.-Treas.—F. R. Mallory, of Sidney Township.

Executive Committee of Directors—J. H. Caskey, Geo. Anderson, E. Terrill, W. Woof and B. R. Leavens.

AS TO MEMBERSHIP.

Who would be eligible to become members of the club caused some discussion.

Mr. Brethen moved, seconded by Mr. Maybee, that any person is eligible to join the club who has one or more registered Holstein female.—Carried.

The membership fee was fixed at $1 per annum, and some 35 of those present became members by subscribing that amount.

The advisability of holding a consignment sale was, on motion, referred to the officers of the Club to consider and report at a subsequent meeting.

Messrs. A. P. McVannell, A. D. McIntosh, H. C. Duff and R. S. Duncan, who are instructors under the Government, were made honorary members of the Club.

A vote of thanks was passed to Messrs. McIntosh and McVannel for their services in connection with promoting the meeting, to which they both responded.

After the meeting adjourned the Executive appointed met and decided to hold a banquet here on the 1st of February, to which all breeders will be invited and some prominent persons will also be asked to attend.

TO-DAY'S SPECIALS

TRAVERS PLEADS GUILTY.

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 13.—Travers, late manager of the defunct Farmers' Bank, pleaded guilty in court this morning to three charges, making false returns to the Government, stealing $40,000, and making false entries in the books. The prisoner was pitifully nervous in court.

The Magistrate said he would think over the case until Monday. In the meantime Travers remains in custody.

FATAL COLLISION ON N.Y.C.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Hon. James McMullen, Senator and formerly M. P., has joined the ranks of the growing army of Liberals who are opposed to entering into a treaty of reciprocity with the United States.

There will be a big influx of immigrants into Canada this year. Steerage passages on the C. P. R., Allan and C. N. R. boats, which will sail in March, are all filled up.

The great White Star Steamship Company are to place additional vessels on the Canadian route. The White Star cannot shine too brightly on the trade of the Dominion.

Toronto is having another great religious revival. The trouble with Toronto is that it is always chasing after religion but never catches up to it.

Kingston is proposing to do a wise thing in the way of cutting down tax exemptions and asking for legislation to change the time for holding the municipal elections to November or early December. Belleville might properly take concurrent action.

That there are a large number of men out of employment in Toronto is evidenced by the fact that a three-line advertisement in an evening paper offering work to two men brought forward two hundred applicants.

Waterways treaties, reciprocity treaties and such-like gold bricks are not the materials that can be built into the foundations of this country's greatness, is the opinion of the Toronto Telegram.

Peterborough Review: Kingston boasts of having twenty-five ex-mayors alive in the city. Let us rise to the remark that the speed of Kingston life never hustles a man off prematurely.

In fairness to ex-Mayor Marsh it must be stated that he neither sent to the city council a written request for an investigation of the sale of city lots, nor did he join in a communication to that effect from his co-Trustee, Treasurer Price.

Vehicle traffic caused 376 deaths in the streets of Greater New York last year up to Nov. 1. Of this number 101 were killed by automobiles, 111 by trolley cars, and wagons or trucks were responsible for 158. The remaining three were crushed to death inside a trolley car that was in a smash-up.

In Western Canada during the year 1910, there have been 1,265 miles of new railway graded, and 684 miles laid with steel. The total railway mileage of Western Canada is now 11,472 miles—nearly half the railway mileage in the whole of Canada—and much of it built within the past twenty years.

King George and Queen Mary are leading the movement for buying exclusively British goods. Why should not Canadians follow, as far as possible, so worthy an example, asks the Toronto News, instead of arranging the tariff so that more of our needs will be supplied from the United States?

Vocal solos were given by Mrs. Jas. Grant, Miss Maud Riggs and Miss Bawden. Piano solos were rendered by Miss Riggs, Miss Emberson, Miss La Voie and Mrs. MacColl. GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE.

A bill composed of music and comedy was offered to the patrons of Griffin's Opera House last night. Davis and Farrow present a comedy act that is a laugh from start to finish. Mr. Davis of the team possesses a fine baritone voice and his singing received the hearty applause of the large audience present. Al. Wilson is a master of the Oxylophone, his playing of both classic and popular melodies deserves of special mention. The motion pictures are above the ordinary, among which are shown Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor" and the late tercentenary held in Mexico. Taken in all, the show is one of the best seen here in a long while.

TRIPLE ENTENTE IS HOLDING GOOD

Russia Still In Sympathy With Aims of France and England

PARIS, Jan. 11.—Efforts of the German press to create the impression that the special treaty between Russia and Germany, regulating the situation in regard to the Persia and Bagdad Railway, indicates a withdrawal of Russia from the triple entente existing between Russia, France and England are viewed with calm indifference in diplomatic circles here.

The French Gvernment has the best possible reasons for believing that the triple entente was never more solid than to-day. The special agreement between Russia and Gemany concerning Persia is almost the same as that concluded in 1909 between France and Germany concerning Morocco and does not alter the general policy of the contracting powers.

Messages of the most friendly nature have been exchanged between Nicholas II. and President Falliers.

Your correspondent is assured on the highest possible authority that neither the recent Potsdam interview nor the Russo-German convention concerning Persia in any way weakens the triple entente nor modifies the European equilibrium, maintained by it.

Moreover the exceedingly cordial manner in which Emperor Nicholas received Paul Doumer and the friendly welcome accorded by the Czar to Mr. Doumer's proposal for establishing a French institute at St. Petersburg aroused enthusiasm among French University men and students were regarded here as establishing new bonds of sympathy between Russian ad French Universities of deep intellectual and political significance.

King's Glove Hand.

It is not generally known that King George's custom of appearing with his right hand gloved and the other bare has its origin in something more than a mere whim of fashion. The wearing of a glove on the right hand by a monarch is a distinct survival of the days when the sovereign's touch was held to be a certain cure for all kinds of disease, especially scrofula.

In the days when at certain dates it was customary for hundreds of sick men and mendicants of all kinds to be laid out in the courtyard of royal palaces awaiting the healing touch of the "anointed of the Lord," monarchs found it necessary to wear a glove in order to escape infection. Thus arose the habit which dusing modern times has passed into a mere fad of fashion, the significance of which has long been forgotten by the majority of people.—M.A.P.

RECORD OCEAN TRAFFIC SOON

Transportation Between England and Canada Promises Well

LONDON, Jan. 11.—That the new year promises to make history in the matter of steamship traffic is indicated by the announcement that another White Star liner, the Teutonic, will be used exclusively for the Canadian passage.

Therefore at no distant date, if the present trend is followed, quite as many Atlantic liners will ply between British and Canadian ports as are now employed on the run to New York and other ports of the United States.

Apart from direct general traffic with Canada, which is growing by leaps and bounds, emigrants will receive more attention in the coming year than has been given them in the past. On the Canadian side also big strides will be made in this direction, and many improved facilities for landing passengers and cargoes at the ports of Halifax and Montreal will be made.

In this connectino too it is announced that the Allan line has entered into an arrangement with a large shipbuilding of the fastest type. Details regarding dimensions and speed, however, are lacking at present. In addition to this prospective addition to the fleet, the company has acquired another vessel by purchase, the Statendam, 10,000 tons, one of the best of the Holland-American Line stamships, which will receive another name when under the Allan flag.

The Belfast Harbor Board has decided that Belfast's new graving dock shall be formally opened the first week in March. This mammoth dock, which has taken six years to complete, at a cost of 750,000 pounds, will provide accommodation for for vessels almost one thousand feet long and one hundred feet beam. It is fitting that the first occupant of the dock will be the gigantic Olympic.

Various obstacles have delayed the construction of the dock, the last difficulty being a dispute between individual contractors.

TO OPPOSE HOME RULE

The First Steps Taken--Ulster Unionist Clubs are to be Revived at Once

BELFAST, Jan. 11.—The first steps were taken here to-day to revive the Ulster Unionist clubs, which were largely responsible for the successful movement against Gladstone's Home Rule Bill of 1893. A meeting, presided over by Lord Templemore, called on the surviving presidents and secretaries to arrange to re-organize the clubs to work to their utmost to oppose Home Rule.

MAKE IT A CRIME TO SELL BAD EGGS

Boards of Trade of Montreal and Toronto Are to Ask for Legislation

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—As the result of united efforts on the part of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association, the Montreal Board of Trade and the Toronto Board of Trade, an attempt will be made to secure legislation making it criminal to offer for sale bad eggs.

At a meeting of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association to-day the matter was brought up and President Gunn stated that figures prepared by the association showed that during last year 17,000,000 dozen of eggs in Canada were rendered unfit for consumption by late marketing. The loss by this was estimated at $3,400,000. Out of a total production of 120,000,000 dozen eggs a year in Canada, it was estimated that fully seventeen per cent. was spoilt by delay in marketing. President Gunn announced that efforts were being made to secure a system of standardizing eggs and also to have it made a criminal offence to sell bad eggs.

NAVIGATION CO. MET AT PICTON

At a meeting of the Ontario & Quebec Navigation Company, Limited, recently held at Picton, Mr. A. Leslie was elected Chairman of the board, and Mr. R. G. K. Hepburn, Secretary. Other directors are B. R. Hepburn, J. de C. Hepburn, J. F. Chapman, H. Dempsey and W. B. Cooper. The new company has a Dominion charter, and has purchased the Hepburn line, of Picton, as well as several other Bay of Quinte lines. The fleet, it is stated, will include about twenty passenger and freight boats, besides a fine new passenger and freight steamer, which is being built at Collingwood at a cost of $200,000.

THE BEST.

An Edmonton man called at the Grand Trunk office the other day and stated that the Grand Trunk Pacific road bed was the best in the west, and, in fact, as good as any in America. He compared the road bed to that of the Grand Trunk between Chicago and Montreal, which he conceded to be the standard. 1td, 1tw

SMOKING MERRIHUANA.

It Fills Mexican Peons With Something Like Delirium Tremens.

Water bugs and worms are among the tidbits in which the Mexican peon delights. He catches his bugs as they skim along the top of fresh water ponds, drying them and then eating them with as much zest as an American boy eats peanuts. As near as the peon can explain it, their flavor is something on the order of the chestnut, but as no white man has ever tried eating water bugs, or if he has doesn't dare confess it, the exact taste of these Mexican morsels can't be described very accurately.

The peons dote, too, on the nice, fat pulque worm. This insect is about two inches long and half an inch thick. They fry the dainty in grease and pack it in brown paper packages of a dozen worms, which fetch 2 cents a paper. An industrious pulque worm collector makes a good living.

The worm inhabits the maguey or pulque plant, from which is distilled the agua miel, or honey water, of Mexico. After twenty-four hours' fermentation it is very intoxicating. After the Mexican has primed himself with several drinks of agua miel and has smoked half a dozen cigarettes made of the dried leaf of the merrihuana weed and brown paper he is ready for any crime of violence.

This combination of stimulant and narcotic has the effect of deluding the victim into thinking that his enemy—and every peon has a choice collection of enemies—is a pygmy in stature. At the same time it gives him an idea that he is tremendously strong and wonderfully brave. So he sallies forth to make mincemeat of his enemy or enemies and, as a rule, lands in the local calaboose.

One of the peculiar effects of merrihuana smoking is to distort the size of all animals, making them of enormous size and horrible shape. The smoker is filled with a horrible fear, something like the horrors brought on by delirium tremens. A kitten or a puppy to his distorted vision appears as some terrible creature. A common sight in Mexico is to see a swarthy "greaser," armed to the teeth, flee in terror from a small dog, while he would fearlessly attack any man with his knife or his machete.

Not a Savant.

A Harvard man told at a dinner in Cambridge a story about ignorance.

"Some sailors were being banqueted in Philadelphia at St. George's hall," he said, "and a young bluejacket, pointing to a superb silver caster, said:

"'Waiter, bring up that 'ere chandelier.'

"'That ain't a chandelier,' the waiter answered, laughing. 'That's a cruet.'

"'Well, never mind what it is,' said the sailor. 'Bring it up. We ain't all been to college.'"

Both Affected.

"Whenever she gets to thinking how much they're in debt it affects her nerves."

"Huh! The way it affects her husband is singular."

"How singular?"

"Just singular; it affects his 'nerve.' He tried to borrow a hundred from me today."—Catholic Standard and Times.

It is always the chap with the short end of it who advocates equality.

A One-Man Government

The Government at Ottawa, never strong, is now literally a one man Government. Mr. Fielding's enforced absence has left Sir Wilfrid Laurier without a single lieutenant who can be trusted to lead the House. Mr. Pugsley led the House once when the Government tried to force through the St. Lawrence Power Bill. His efforts on that ocassion will not lead him to make a second attempt. Sir Frederick Borden, Hon. Frank Oliver Hon. Mr. Templeman, and other Ministers refrain from taking any part in the business of the House unless called upon to defend their respective departments. Hon. Mackenzie King, the premier in petto, is not aspiring just yet to leadership his experiences with the House have not been pleasant. An affable gentleman, of good parts, he does not seem to be destined to be a successful parliamentarian. He talks overlong to begin with and he talks to the House as a College professor might talk to a class, having thought it all out and proved it according to some book. He is shocked and pained beyond measure when his fellow members say, "Oh, Shaw!" There is nothing in the text book to show what is to be done when the classes refus to be convinced. The only likely man in the Cabinet to-day is Hon. George P. Graham, who is stronger on the stump than he is in the House. The attention of the Government is in striking contrast to the situation of the Opposition, which includes two dozen men who could be mentioned offhand capable of leading either the Government or the Opposition for one week or a month if called upon to do so by Mr. R. L. Borden. One can hardly imagine how the business of the House could be transacted by the present Government if Sir Wilfrid Laurier were prevented from being in his seat every day and nearly every hour during the session.

At the same time disintegration seems to be going on among the Liberals throughout the country and it is amusing to hear them appealing to the Conservatives for help. The insurgency of their Nationalists wing in Quebec and the unrest among their followers in the West are political factors of the first importance. Instead of dealing with the Nationalists Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues are calling to the Opposition, accusing them one day of being in sympathy with the insurgents, and urging them the next day to vote with the Government so as to destroy them. Exactly why the Conservatives should mix in this family quarrel between Laurier and Bourassa has not been explained. The disclosures which came out during the debate upon the address show that the Laurier wing have nothing to boast over the Bourassa wing on the score of loyalty. Mr. Borden stated the position of his party upon the naval question in terms clear and unmistakable. The Borden Government will be prepared to help the Empire in any emergency and will give the people a chance to say what are their views upon the proposed Canadian Navy. The position of the Nationalists, if correctly stated by Mr. F. D. Monk, and others, is not antagonistic. They are willing for a direct contribution to the Imperial Navy if an emergency presents itself and to bow to the mandate of the people and construct a Canadian Navy if, and whenever such a mandate is given. The Laurier Government stands in the mulish position of refusing to listen to any arguments and of refusing to consult the people who have to pay the bills.

SERIOUS INJURY TO FISHING ON TRENT RIVER ALLEGED

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—Mr. C. L. Owen, (east Northumberland) brought an important matter before the House this afternoon respecting the fisheries in the Bay of Quinte and the Trent River, which are seriously threatened by the failure of the Government to establish fisheries at the various dams now in process of construction.

Mr. Owen said: "I wish to ask the Minister of Railways and Canals (Mr Graham) if anything is going to be done with respect to the preservation of the fish in the waters of the Trent River. I may say that dams have been erected along the Trent Valley Canal without providing for a fish sluiceway. The waters of the Trent River have been noted for many years, at least as long as I can remember, for their beautiful game fish and persons come in large numbers, annually, especially from the United States, to fish in these waters, and leave a large amount of money with the people who live along the banks of that river. The view of many fishermen there is that the fish will follow the current and pass down through the locks and the basins until they reach the Bay of Quinte and Lake Ontario; whereas if sluiceways were provided the fish would be turned back to their feeding grounds. Therefore something should be done for the preservation of the fish in the waters of the Trent River."

Mr. Graham said that the question was one worthy of attention and promised an enquiry.

A SKILLFUL SHOT.

The Way to Bring Down an Overhead Incoming Bird.

One of the cardinal rules of the old time shooting school cautioned the gunner against ever trying to stop an overhead incoming bird, but to wait until it had passed by and to the rear and then take chances on what is undoubtedly the harder shot of the two.

It is surprisingly how difficult it is for some sportsmen to successfully score on their incoming birds. Many who can seemingly cope with game in any other mode of flight will habitually balk at this shot and acknowledge their inability to make it.

Yet once its principle is understood and the lesson learned the dropping of an overhead incomer is as easy as anything can well be. The miss is always made by the sportsman shooting under and behind the bird, and there is but one way in which the error is to be avoided.

To make the shot the gunner should wait until the bird is about to pass over him, then, bringing up his gun, follow in from behind, cover the bird and swing in ahead of it and, maintaining the same rate of speed, press the trigger the instant the bird is hidden behind the barrels. Do not stop the swing of the gun and be sure the bird shall have disappeared from sight. If the shooter will observe this rule he will be surprised how easily and invariably he will kill his bird.—Recreation.

WISHBONES.

On Their Shape Depends the Force of Birds' Wing Strokes.

Scientists call the "wishbone" the furcula, and it is the union of what are in man two collar bones. These receive the brunt of the strokes of the wing that turn the creature in its flight.

Few of us appreciate the strength of the stroke of the bird's wing. A swan has been known to break a man's leg by a blow of its wing, and in like manner the wing beatings of the larger birds are dangerous if they strike the human head or face. If, therefore, a large bird is in the habit of making sudden turns to right or left in its flight it must be fitted with a "wishbone" capable of withstanding the great strain of the wing stroke on the one side when unaccompanied by action on the other.

For this reason we find in the eagle and birds of its class that turn quickly a furcula that is a perfect Roman arch, widely at variance with the Gothic arch, which is the shape of the "wishbone" of our common fowls. The eagle's furcula is everywhere equally strong and lacks those points of weakness that make our sport of breaking the "wishbone" possible.—Harper's Weekly.

Lord Brougham's Oratory.

We have no orator in the least like Lord Brougham since the close of Brougham's public career. Everything that nature could do so far as appearance, manner and voice were concerned she had done to prevent him from being a great orator, and yet a great orator he undoubtedly was. I wonder what the house of lords just now would think of a peer who gesticulated and bellowed as Brougham was in the habit of doing. But it was impossible to listen to Brougham and not be carried away by the force of his intellect, by his torrent of words, by the sudden whirl and eddy of his rapid illustrations and by the longer and shorter stretches of quietude and repose into which his argument occasionally flowed.—From Justin McCarthy's "Reminiscences."

THEIR COLORS.

A Touch of Human Nature Amid the Horrors of War.

Out of the midst of the bloody horrors of the battle of Fredericksburg comes a sweet and touching incident which goes to prove that the rage of battle cannot obliterate the tenderness dwelling in the hearts of men. The story is taken from Major Robert Stiles' "Four Years Under Massa Robert." The Federal army was entering the town, shot was flying in all directions, and Buck, a Confederate soldier, was peering round the corner of a house.

A little three-year-old, fair haired baby girl toddled out of the alley, accompanied by a Newfoundland dog, and in the midst of the hissing shells chased a cannon ball down the street. Buck grounded his gun, dashed out into the storm and swung his great right arm round the baby. Then he ran after his company, the little one clasped to his breast.

The company took refuge behind the stone wall which has now become historic, and there for hours and days of terror the baby was kept. Fierce nurses took turns in petting her while the storm of battle raged and shrieked. Never was a baby so cared for, and scouts scoured the countryside to get her milk.

When the struggle was over and the Federal army had left the company behind the wall received the post of honor in the van to lead the column into the town. Buck stood about in the middle of the regiment, the baby in his arms. There was a long halt, and the brigade staff hurried to and fro. The regimental colors were not to be found.

Suddenly Buck sprang to the front. He swung aloft the baby girl, her little garments fluttering like the folds of a banner, and shouted:

"Forward, men of the Twenty-first! Here are our colors!"

Off started the brigade, cheering lustily.

SHIRKING JAIL WORK.

Bidwell, the Forger, Was a Champion at Malingering.

Malingering is common in jail, but surely a case quoted from his own experience by Dr. Quinton, the late governor of Holloway, in "Crime and Criminals" is a record. The "hero" was a violent prisoner who feigned stiffness of the index finger to avoid oakum picking. He was so angry when the finger was forcibly bent that "on returning to his cell he promptly placed the offending finger in the hinges of his table, which was attached to the cell wall, and violently raised the leaf, with the result that the finger was absolutely shattered and had to be removed."

Another case even more remarkable in its way was that of the notorious American criminal Bidwell, who was sentenced to penal servitude for life in connection with the Bank of England forgeries.

"He was in good health on conviction, but never did any active work. Feigning loss of power in his legs, he lay in bed from day to day and from year to year, defying all efforts of persuasion and resisting all unpleasant coercive measures devised to make him work. When I saw him at Dartmoor at the end of eight or nine years of his sentence long disuse of his legs had rendered him almost a cripple. The muscles were extremely wasted, and both hip and knee joints were contracted in a state of semiflexion, so that he lay doubled up in a bundle. Though he was examined time after time by experts, no one succeeded in discovering any organic disease or any cause for his condition other than his own firmly expressed determination never to do a day's work for the British government, a threat which, I believe, he ultimately carried out."

Notice that a typographical error has led to a law suit. It doesn't always get that far but the provocation is there every day just the same.

FOR LADY READERS

THE SECRET OF A GOOD COMPLEXION.

This is the season for evening parties, social events, etc. Why not look your best? Why let your complexion suffer by contrast with other ladies? Why not insure a good complexion? You can do this on sound, natural lines by using Zam-Buk, Nature's herbal balm.

Zam-Buk is a skin food; and complexion is purely a matter of skin health. Zam-Buk smeared lightly over the face each night acts as a skin tonic. It stimulates the cells beneath the cuticle to heathy action, makes the capillaries and blood vessels work, and the vigorous circulation thus started carries away secreted impurities. Waxy, salllow deposits are thus removed. Hard, pimply growths are thus removed. That yellow tinge gives place to the pink of health and the white velvety "look" and "feel" which heathy skin alone has.

Isn't this wiser than relying on talcum powder and cosmetics? These only put on a "complexion" from the outside. It doesn't last. Zam-Buk helps Nature to build up a complexion from the blood and tissue. It lasts.

Zam-Buk also cures skin diseases, ulsers, pimples, abcesses, blood-poison, eruptions, cuts, burns, scalds, chapped places, scalp sores, piles, etc. 50c. box, all stores or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, but beware of harmful substitutes and imitations.

NORTH MAGNETIC POLE.

It Is Not a Stationary Point, but Is Constantly Shifting.

Only the experts understand that the north pole and the north magnetic pole are two entirely different things. As a matter of fact, there are few localities on the earth's surface where the compass points due north. The reason is because the north magnetic pole or area lies in the vicinity of King William's Land, just off the arctic coast of North America, in Bothnia. When this magnetic pole is between us and the north pole the compass points due north. As we go either east or west from this line it is easy to see that the compass is off to a certain degree. If we were to travel north of the magnetic pole the needle would point south; west of it the needle would point east. Sir James Ross in 1831 located the north magnetic pole approximately at a point up in Bothnia. In 1903 Captain Roald Amundsen in the ship Gjoa set out on a three years' expedition, relocated the magnetic pole and made the "northwest passage" for which mariners have striven since the days of Henry Hudson. Terrestrial magnetic force is different in every part of the earth's surface and is not always the same at a given point. It is subject to regular daily and yearly changes. Amundsen posted himself near the seat of the magnetic power and for nineteen months, day and night, with his party, took readings of their instruments, both inclination and declination. He also made short excursions into the region of the magnetic pole and was able by the aid of the declination observations to prove that the magnetic north pole does not have a stationary situation, but is continually moving. But the general location is where Sir James Ross first had the honor to place it.—Chicago Tribune.

BOSTON LIGHT.

It Is Said to Be the Oldest Harbor Beacon In America.

The outer light of Boston harbor is Boston light, eight miles below the city and at the very outer end of the channel that ocean liners follow. It stands on Little Brewster island, a pile of rocks partly grassed over in its gentle hollow on the sheltered side. Three families live here—those of the head keeper and his two assistants. In all the inhabitants number a dozen souls.

The light itself is said to be the oldest in America, built in 1715 by the government of England. It is of rough bowlder stone, hooped with iron bands, and its lean, whitewashed form is a landmark and seamark far and wide.

A rustic iron railway for carrying coal leads up from the waterside to the engine house, where is an engine and boilers in which steam is kept up continually to operate the siren foghorns. Their great trumpet-like forms protrude through the wall of the building on the seaward side. In foggy weather one can hear from the open windows the faroff mooing of the foghorn on the Boston lightship, seven miles away, as the keepers on the lightship can hear this one at Boston light.

An old cannon lies on the ground near the lighthouse. It was provided by the Cunard Steamship company before the foghorn was installed to give signals. It is unused now. But in addition to the great revolving light in the tower there is a set of red and white range lights that give the location of anchorage for vessels in the channel. If they see red it means that they are out of their proper location, but if white they are safe.—New York Mail.

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

"It must have been something like that. I was only six years old at the time. My uncle lost his wife and child, too, when the Esmeralda went down. It nearly killed him. I never thought he would marry again, but I suppose he's tired of being alone."

"Probably. By the way, now that you mention it, Mrs. Vansittart wished to see me yesterday. I could not spare a moment so I sent her a civil message. She told Constance that she thought she knew me."

"Hardly likely," smiled Pyne, "if you have passed nearly the whole of your life in lighthouses."

"I did not quite mean to convey that impression. I knew a man of her late husband's name, many years ago."

"She is a nice woman in some ways," said Pyne reflectively. "Not quite my sort, perhaps, but a lady all the time. She is not an American. Came to the States about '90, I think, and lost her hubby on a ranch in California. Anyhow, the old man is dead stuck on her, and they ought to hit it off well together. The Vansittart you knew didn't happen to marry a relative of yours?"

"No. He was a mere acquaintance."

"Odd thing," ruminated Pyne. "It has just occurred to me that she resembles your daughter,—your elder daughter,—not so much in face as in style. Same sort of graceful figure, only a trifle smaller."

"Such coincidences often happen in the human family. For instance, you are not wholly unlike Enid."

"Holy gee!" said Pyne, "I'm too run down to stand flattery."

"Likeness is often a matter of environment. Characteristics, mannerisms, the subtle distinctions of class and social rank, soak in through the skin quite as sensibly as they are conferred by heredity. Take the ploughman's son and rear him in a royal palace, turn the infant prince into a peasant, and who shall say, when they reach man's estate, 'This is the true King.' You will remember it was said of the Emperor Augustus: 'Urbem lateritiam invenit, marmoream reliquit.' 'He found the city brick, he left it marble.' The same noble result may be obtained in every healthy child properly educated."

The college-bred youth had not entered into any general conversation with Brand before. He had the tact now to conceal his astonishment at the manner of his friend's speech.

"You fling heredity to the winds, then?" he asked.

Brand rose to his feet, as was his way when deeply moved

"Thank God, yes!" he cried.

A faint hoot came to them through the chortling of the wind.

"One of our visitors," shouted Brand, "and here we are gossiping as though snugly seated in arm-chairs at the fireside."

He hurried to the gallery, putting on an oil-skin coat.

"We must win through, and I guess I'll play ball with my father-in-law," quoth Pyne to himself as he followed.

This time it was the Falcon alone, and she signaled with a lamp that it was deemed best to defer active operations until the following afternoon. The tide at dawn would not suit.

She went off, and the two men returned to the grateful shelter of the service-room.

Brand farbade further talk. Pyne must rest now and relieve him at three o'clock. The youngster needed no feather-bed: he was asleep in amazingly quick time. There is a supperless hunger which keeps people awake at night with a full larder in the house. The crude article differs from the cultured one so greatly that the man who hungers of necessity cannot sleep too much.

Thus far, the inhabitants of the lighthouse had been given quite enough nutriment to maintain life. There was no reason why any, even the most delicate, should be in real danger during the next forty-eight hours. But scientific reasoning and the animal instincts of mankind clash at times; in that lay the danger whose sullen shadow was deepening the lines in the corners of Brand's eyes.

Every hour, the officer on duty and some men of the watch visited him to report that all was well below. Some of the less drunken mutineers were pitifully sober now: the others were maudlin. Beyond the few words exchanged on this and kindred topics, he was left alone with his thoughts throughout the silent watch. Pyne slept heavily. Glancing at times at the youngster's stalwart figure and firm, handsome face, Brand found himself reviewing the buried years. He thought of the days when he, too, looked forth on the world with the stern enthusiasm of triumphant youth.

Long-forgotten ghosts were resurrected, shattered ideals built up again. He wondered, if the decades rolled back, would he decide, a second time, to abandon the fine career which lay at his feet and withdraw his grief and his talents to the seclusion of lonely rocks and silent headlands!

He had been happy, as men count happiness, during the decades. No cloud had arisen to mar the complete content of his life. The blossoming of the girls into delightful womanhood was an increasing joy to him, and it was passing strange that his little household should be plunged into a whirlpool of events in the very hour when their domesticity seemed to be the most assured. The changeful moods of the elements found no counterpart in his nature. He, knowing the sea, did not expect it to remain fixed in one aspect. Whether in storm or calm the contrary would surely happen 'ere many days had passed. But life was a different thing. How came it that at the very close of so many years of association with the fickle ocean she should play such a trick on him and his daughters, enfold them with perils, snatch them from the quiet pleasures of the life they had planned for the future and thrust upon them, even if they escaped with their lives, a publicity which he at any rate, abhorred and even dreaded.

He harbored no delusions on this point. He knew that the drama of the Gulf Rock was now filling the columns of newspapers all over the world. He and his beloved girls would be written about, discussed, described in fulsome language, pictured by black and white artists, and eulogized by wide-awake editors eager to make much of a topic dear to the public mind.

She dived suddenly as the gallery door opened. Brand caught a fleeting glimpse of her vanishing form.

"Who was that?" he asked,

Pyne had found his pipe and was filling it with tobacco.

"Mrs. Vansittart," he answered.

"Paying her long-deferred visit, I suppose. She chose a curious hour."

"So I thought. But she just popped her head in to tell you that she didn't know you at all."

Brand smiled.

"Poor lady!" he said. "She, like the rest of us, is perturbed and uneasy. I imagine she is of a somewhat hysterical temperament."

"That's so," agreed Pyne.

There were puzzling discrepancies in Mrs. Vansittart's explanation of her untimely appearance. Evidently, she did not expect to meet him there. She thought she would find the lighthouse-keeper alone. The ready deduction presented itself that when she did encounter Brand she did not wish any third person to be present at the interview.

That Constance's father had no cause to look at matters in the same light he was quite certain. Anyhow, it was not his affair, and he declined to trouble his head about Mrs. Vansittart's vagaries.

So the young philosopher lit his pipe and delivered a dictum on the sex.

"Some women," he said, "are made up of contradictions. She is one. I have known her for some time and I thought nothing could phaze her. But there must be a sort of society crust over her emotions, and the wreck broke it. Now, for my part, I like a woman with a clear soul, one in whose eyes you can catch the glint of the inner crystal."

"They are rare," said Brand.

"I suppose so. Indeed, it used to be a mere indeal of mine, built up from books. But they exist, and they are worth looking for."

He waited, lest perchance the other man should take the cue thus offered, but Brand, for the twentieth time, was poring over the records of the days which followed the hurricane reported by a former keeper. The American pursed his lips.

"He has had a bad time with a woman once in his life," he mused. "It must have been Constance's mother, and that is why he doesn't believe in heredity. Well, I guess he's right."

Had he seen Mrs. Vansittart cowering on her knees outside her bedroom door, he might have found cause for more disturbing reflections. She was crying softly, with her face hidden in her hands.

"Oh, I dare not, I dare not!" she moaned. "I am the most miserable woman in the world. It would have been better if I had gone down with the vessel. The Lord saved me only to punish me. My heart will break. What shall I do? Where shall I hide?"

And her sobbing only ceased when the noise of ascending footsteps drove her into the company of sorrowful women who would nevertheless have forgotten some of their own woes did they but realize her greater anguish.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE WAY THEY HAVE IN THE NAVY

"Some people are never satisfied," said Pyne, whilst he helped the cooks by smashing a ham bone with a hammer. The bone had been picked clean of meat and marrow on the first day after the wreck, but it occurred to Enid that if it were broken up and boiled she might procure some sort of nourishment for the two children, who were fast running down in condition.

"What is the matter now?" inquired Constance, whose attentive eyes were hovering between the cooking stove and a distilling kettle.

All the flour and biscuits, with the exception of two tins reserved for exeremities, had been used. She was striving to concoct cakes of chocolate out of cocoa, an article more plentiful than any other food of its kind in stock, but water could not be spared, and eating dry powder was difficult to parched palates.

"There are two tug-boats, a trawler, and a Trinity service-boat not half a mile away," said Pyne, "and the cliffs at Land's End are peppered with people."

"Surely that is satisfactory. Dad told me that the Falcon signaled this morning he was to expect a special effort to be made at half tide on the flow, and not on the ebb, as was arranged yesterday."

"Yes, that is all right as far as it goes." Pyne leaned forward with the air of one about to impart information of great value. "But the extraordinary thing is that whilst every man on board those vessels is thinking like steam how best to get into the lighthouse, we are most desperately anxious to get out of it. So you see, as I said before, some people—"

"Oh, dash!" cried Enid, "I've gone and burnt my finger all through listening to your nonsense."

"Are there really many people on the cliffs?" demanded Constance.

Pyne pounded the bone viciously.

"I go out of my way to inform you of a number of interesting and strictly accurate facts," he protested, "and one of you burns her fingers and the other doubts my word. Yet if I called your skepticism unfeeling, Miss Enid would be angry."

"I don't know why kettle lids are so cantankerous," said Enid. "They seem to get hot long before the water does."

"The hottest part of any boil is on top," said Pyne.

Enid smiled forgiveness. "I believe you would be cheerful if you were going to be electrocuted," she said, pensively. "Yet, goodness knows, it is hard to keep one's spirits up this morning. The sea is as bad as ever. What will become of us if we get no relief to-day?"

"Mr. Pyne," interrupted Constance suddenly. "Do you think that any of the men can have gained access to the store-room during the night?"

"I can't say for sure," he replied. "What has put that into your mind?"

"The purser and I examined all that was left this morning, and we both agreed that some of the things had disappeared. It is very strange."

Pyne was not wholly prepared for this mine being sprung on him. So he essayed to gain time.

"If I thought it would do any good to the suffering people I would gladly see them enlivened by the news," he said. "I confess, however, I expect nothing but disastrous failure—and—gentlemen—Lieutenant Stanhope is practically engaged to be married to one of my daughters."

What was to be said? They quitted him in silence that was the dominant note of their lives just then. Pyne alone remained. He wondered why one man should be called on to endure so much.

Though each of those present on the gallery was loyal to Brand's sorrowful request, it was impossible to prevent others from seeing that something of exceptional interest was in progress afloat and on the rock.

Brand did not know that the officials of the Trinity House had only agreed to help Stanhope's hazardous project under compulsion. The sailor informed them that he was determined to carry out his scheme, with or without their assistance. So, when the Falcon, the tender, and a strong tug hired by Mr. Traill, rounded the distant Carn du headland at eleven o'clock, the lighthouse-keeper felt that further protest was unavailing. It behooved him to take all possible measures to help the men who were about to dare so much to help him.

In the first place, he caused a rope to be swung from the gallery to the doorway. If any doubt were entertained as to the grave risk attending Stanhope's enterprise it was promptly met with in accomplishing this comparatively simple task. Even a heavy piece of wood, slung to the end of the ninety odd feet of cord necessary did not prevent the wind from lashing the weighted end in furious plunges seaward. At last a sailor caught the swinging block with a boat-hook. The man would have been carried away by a climbing wave had not his mates perceived his danger and held him. Then two life-buoys were attached to other ropes, in case there might be some slight chance of of using them. The tackle which the unfortunate captain of the Chinook had cast adrift was utilized to construct safety lines in the entrance way. Loops were fastened to them, in which six of the strongest men available were secured against the chance of being swept through the door to instant death.

Meanwhile, the three vessels had steamed close to the mooring buoy, which, it will be remembered, lay in full view of the kitchen window. Constance gave them a casual glance. Being versed in the ways of the sea, she instantly discovered that some unusual event was astir.

She called her sister's attention to the manoeuvres of the steamers; one, the Trinity tender, lay broadside on to the incoming tide.

"They are lowering a boat, I do declare," she announced, after they had watched the proceedings for a little while with growing curiosity. At the distance, nearly six hundred yards, it was difficult to discern exactly what was taking place.

"No boat can live if it comes near the rock," cried Enid. And then a wild thought brought her heart to her mouth.

"Oh, Connie!" she cried in a sudden access of terror, "I feel sure that Jack is doing something desperate to save us. Dad knows. They all know, but they would not tell us. That is why Mr. Pyne has not been near us for hours."

WIT OF THE INDIAN

The Dignified Red Man Has a Keen Sense of Humor.

STORIES OF STANDING BEAR.

The Race the Old Chief Was Willing to Run Against a Government Attorney—A Gallant Brave and His Mirror—An Invisible Bridge.

The impression prevails widely that the Indian lacks the saving sense of humor—"that most characteristic of all American qualities." To the creating and the spreading of this impression many recognizable traits of Indian character have indisputably contributed—his ancestral pride, his exclusiveness, his gravity of face and dignity of manner in public.

Nevertheless an injustice is done him, for among no primitive peoples is the sense of humor keener or more spontaneous and kindly.

Years ago I was conversing with a group of children of the Omaha tribe. They were on their way to a reservation school, and directly in their path lay a swamp an eighth of a mile wide, and straight through this they were required to wade twice a day.

"It is too bad," I remarked. "Can you not go around the swamp? Your feet will be wet, and you will be uncomfortable and possibly ill."

"Oh," cried a girl of about twelve years, her dark eyes dancing with merriment, "we walk over the $1,200 bridge."

They all laughed at this. What could it mean? I saw no bridge; there was no bridge to be seen. It made them merry to see me mystified, and I heard them laughing and chatting as they went through the water and mud. Afterward I discovered the humor in the remark. Some years previous to that time the government had appropriated $1,200 to build a bridge over this swamp, but somehow the money had vanished into somebody's pocket and the work was not done.

One evening I saw a gallant young brave making his way swiftly over the prairies of the Omaha reserve. He was dressed in all his finery, and at his side dangled a small mirror. Manifestly he was an ardent lover. This I should have surmised from his dress and eager haste, even if I had not known him. As he was a friend of mine, I had inside information of his hopes and purposes; also I ventured to stop him for a moment, precious as I knew his time to be.

"That mirror at your side," I remarked, "is to give opportunity for Prairie Flower to discover how lovely she is, is it not?" He considered a moment, and then, with a twinkling eye, he replied:

"No. Maybe so she will talk too much to me, and then I will look into my mirror to see how tired I am."

This certainly was the humor of absurdity.

Examples of Standing Bear's humor I could give almost without number. During the trial of his case before Judge Dundy the contention of the government attorney was that an Indian is not a person within the meaning of the law. This puzzled the old chief greatly. It also amused him.

One day at my table he was vigorously plying a knife and fork when suddenly he paused in his eating, lifted up his hands, and, a humorous smile lighting up his noble, storm scarred face, he remarked: "The attorneys say I am not a person. But I can use a knife and fork. Does a bear do that? If he, the attorney, is a person I am one also. We both eat with knives and forks. Indeed, I think I can use them faster than he can. If he wants to race me eating I am ready." We all laughed at this. When we were quiet Standing Bear added, "That is, I will run an eating race with the attorney if he will pay for the beefsteak."

The first public address Standing Bear ever made was given in my church. In the course of it while he was pleading for assistance he addressed various classes of people present—the men, the women, the clergy, the business men, the children. When he was pleading with the women he said: "I appeal to you because you are brave and patient. Whenever you have anything hard to do you never rest until it is done." This was a gallant sentiment worthy of a chief. But Frank La Flesche, who was interpreting, rendered the sentence thus: "You women are patient. When there is anything hard to be done we men let you do it." This was so true to Indian custom that the audience laughed.

Standing Bear was puzzled. As he stood silent a moment wondering what mistake he had made Bright Eyes, the beautiful Omaha maiden, stepped forward and said, "My brother Frank has made a mistake in interpreting the chief's thought." Then she gave the proper rendering.

The Chicago papers took liberties with Standing Bear's name, one of them referring to him constantly as Upright Bruin. When this was explained to the chief he took the matter with great good nature.

"What does it matter?" he remarked, his face beaming. "I am all tied up with names. I am like a pony tangled in his lariat. Father Hamilton, the Presbyterian, calls me elder. The Episcopalian clergyman calls me warden. For I am an officer in the little church in our village, where both these good men preach. And now the papers call me—what is it? Yes, Bruin. No matter. The judge in Omaha says I am a person, and that satisfies me."—Southern Workman.

People seldom realize what a good time they are having until it is all over.

Many a man is kept busy acquiring the things he doesn't want.

The sting of defeat lasts longer than than the sweets of victory.

CUTTING HIS PANTS.

A Funny Man's Criticism of the Sartorial Artist's Efforts.

When a tailor puts you on the measuring box, with a man guarding the door so that you can't get away and another making a book on the game, he reels off something like this as he goes about you with his measuring tape: "13—2—11—16—8—4—18—11—46—Gee, you're beginning to get a front, ain't you?—6½—17—side and two hips, Jimmie—33¼—36—Can you come in tomorrow or Friday?—19—6—House or a flat, did you say?—28—Custom of the house to have a deposit on all orders—16—What was that last, Jimmie, did I say? Oh, make it 23 in the middle—What did you say your name was, mister?"

Now, nobody can make any combination of the foregoing figures which will spell anything like a decent pair of pants. But the tailor cares nothing whatever about the figures which he calls out to Jimmie and indeed makes no reference to them in his later operations. He knows the pants won't fit, anyhow, so what's the use? If you watch him you will discover that he usually takes up some other man's measurements when he undertakes the laying out of that particular garment on which he puts your name.

Having selected from the mass of papers on his desk a set of figures which suits him, he goes behind his counter, yawns, looks in the glass, smooths down his hair, hunts for the place where he left his cigar and at last picks up a thing which looks like a board rule, with a curve in the corner like a hockey stick. If you are not watching him he will probably cut your pants by ear and will not bother to use this implement, but if you insist upon inspection he'll make a pretense of scientific use of this instrument, whose real nature or purpose no human being knows or ever will know.

What the tailor is thinking of as he begins to make chalk marks in a piece of blue paper, using this rule as a straight edge, is the "joy ride" he is going to have with Marie in his new auto that evening. It makes no difference to him whether the chalk slips or not, nor is it important how far along this or that angle he allows the straight or curved line to run. He knows they are not going to fit, anyhow, so why should he bother about it overmuch? The only hope you can possibly have meantime is the one raised in your bosom when the tailor, from behind the counter, looks up and says: "Jimmie, why in the world didn't you mark the name on this gent's pants? Oh, well, never mind."

The tailor goes on making several cute little pictures on the blue paper by aid of this curved thing, which has numbers scattered along it here and there. He draws in several isosceles triangles, converging at more or less the same point; but, not liking the looks of these, he rubs out some of the lines and tries over again. Then he forgets which ones he rubbed out. It makes no difference anyhow. At last he stands off, critically gazes upon the pattern which he has been casting, makes a hit or miss crosswise dab with the chalk—which determines, wholly by chance, how long your pants are going to be—and smiles to himself. —Everybody's Magazine.

Fearless Queen Sophie.

In 1860, when the combined armies of Victor Emmanuel and Garibaldi attacked Gaeta, Queen Sophie of Naples conducted the defense, her husband, Francis II, being utterly unnerved. Most of her time was spent upon the ramparts, where she remained during the hottest fire. She was absolutely without fear. Once when a bomb burst in the room where she was dining with her husband and his suit she walked to a mirror that hung on the wall and, noticing that her hair was whitened by the plaster the bomb had scattered, remarked: "What a pity powdered heads are out of fashion! White hair suits me admirably."

He Won the Trick.

"Oh, George, dear," she whispered when he slipped the engagement ring on her tapering finger, "how sweet of you to remember just the sort of stone I preferred! None of the others was ever so thoughtful."

George was staggered but for a moment. Then he came back with: "Not at all, dear. You overrate me. This is the one I've always used."

She was inconsistent enough to cry about it.

Locality.

"Where were you born?" asked the judge of election.

"Have I got t' answer that question?" inquired the man who wished to vote.

"Yes; that's the law."

"Well, sir, I was born in th' steerage, if ye've got t' know."—Chicago Tribune.

Long and Short.

"What all this trouble about the long and short haul?" demanded the secretary of the woman's club.

"It's this way," explained the treasurer. "Some dressmakers say a train ought to be six feet in length. Others say three feet is enough."—Washington Herald.

The Genius.

The principal difference between a genius and a fool is that the genius is able to get people to take up his ideas and make fortunes out of them.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The man who combats himself will be happier than he who contends with others.—Confucius.

DECISION IS REACHED

Canada Changes Minor Rules Regarding Fishing.

Voluntary Alterations Will Be Made Assenting to the Objections of the United States — Hague Tribunal Will Not Have to Meet Again to Settle the Question—All In Future Go to Permanent Commission.

Washington, Jan. 13.—The commissioners for the United States and Canada who have been considering the fishery regulations, have reached a decision. The Canadian and Newfoundland Governments undertake to change the existing regulations to remove the objections of the United States, thus making it unnecessary to call upon the board of experts.

The objections to the Newfoundland legislation were found not so easy of reconciliation, and Sir Edward Morris, Premier of Newfoundland, left for home last night with the further task ahead of him of drafting legislation which, it is hoped, may be accepted at a later diplomatic conference. The rock on which Newfoundland and the United States split was the request of the latter that their fishermen should have the right to purchase bait from Newfoundland fishermen without any restrictions, and use it for fishing on the Banks. Sir Edward Morris so far has been unwilling to concede this, and it is said he is desirous of securing in return for it the removal of the American duty on Newfoundland fish. Canada grants the American fishermen free bait now under a modus vivendi. As to the free entry of Canadian fish into the United States, there are those who look for that as one of the provisions under the pending trade treaty, should one be enacted.

The conferences have been going on since Monday morning and followed similar conferences by the State Department with representatives of the Gloucester fishing interests. The formal statement of the outcome issued at the State Department is as follows:

"As a result of these conferences an understanding was reached that instead of calling upon the commission of experts appointed under the award to determine the reasonableness of certain existing fisheries regulations to which the United States had objected, Canada will proceed voluntarily to make such changes in the existing regulations as are necessary to remove the objections of the United States.

"The effect of this arrangement is to make it unnecessary to reassemble the (Hague) tribunal to act upon the report of the experts, and eliminates any further proceedings at The Hague. All differences which may arise in the future as to these or any future regulations which cannot be disposed of by diplomatic negotiations will be referred to the permanent mixed fisheries commission, to be established in accordance with recommendations of the award."

The regulations thus to be modified are understood to refer to the use of purse seines, Sunday fishing, right of search and like subjects.

The United States was represented in the conference by Secretary Knox Counsellor Chandler P. Anderson, Robert Lansing, one of the counsel of the United States in The Hague arbitration, and Hugh M. Smith, acting commissioner of fisheries. The British were represented by Ambassador Bryce, Sir Edward Morris, Prime Minister of Newfoundland; Sir Allan Aylesworth, Minister of Justice of Canada; L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries of Canada; Geo Young, secretary of the British embassy; Dr. Wakeham of the Canadian fisheries department, and Captain O'Reilly of the Newfoundland fisheries department.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

WAS KILLED BY BLOW

Doctor Testifies in Finton Trial at Hamilton.

Prisoner Threatened to Leave His Father, Says Witness—Blackstock and Staunton Continue Their Bickerings and Add to Excitement of Case—Brother Found Sixty Dollars Under Head of Lounge.

Hamilton, Jan. 13.—The passages between counsel in the Finton murder trial have been one of the most interesting features of the affair so far. Yesterday George Tait Blackstock, K.C., and George S. Lynch-Staunton, K.C., had several more bitter exchanges. Mr. Staunton objected a number of times to Blackstock's mode of examining the witnesses, and Mr. Blackstock made similar objections, until it was necessary for Justice Teetzel to act as peacemaker between them.

George Millen, ex-reeve of Saltfleet, and an intimate friend of the murdered man, said he told Tom that his father had complained to him of the way the son was acting toward him, and that he had threatened to sell the farm, thereby putting Tom and his wife out of the place. He said he went out with Tom to the barn, when the latter returned from Hamilton, and that Tom refused to look at the body. Mr. Staunton accused the witness of doing all he could to throw suspicion on Tom.

J. W. Finton, the prisoner's brother, explained that when removing a lounge which came to him as a part of his father's furniture, $60 in Traders' Bank bills were found under the head of it. The witness said he went to the jail at the request of Mr. Staunton to see if Tom had a cut on his finger, but forgot it when he got there. He added that he did not have to look for the cut, and Mr. Staunton replied that he might have made it his business to do so, as he was the prisoner's brother. The witness protested that Mr. Staunton was trying to impute something to him, and told him that he did not like what he said.

"I have not said anything," said Mr. Staunton.

"It's the way he says it," chipped in Mr. Blackstock.

Mrs. J. W. Finton said she noticed a coolness between Tom and his father, and that he and his wife were not at the old home for Christmas with the rest of the family.

David Muir, cashier of the Traders' Bank at Stoney Creek, said he cashed a check for $100 for Elijah Finton several days before his death. The witness said that Mrs. Tom Finton did not have an account with the bank, but it was subsequently learned that she had, and that it was under the name of Mrs. Tom Finton, and not Mrs. Bella Finton, the name which he had looked for.

At the conclusion of the morning's session, the prisoner's friends all crowded around him and congratulated him on the good fight being made for him. His wife, a pretty, girlish-looking woman, her face much flushed with anxious excitement, shyly approached him, and after shaking hands urged him to "cheer up." He laughed brightly, and thereby showed that he was not in need of encouragement.

Six of the crown's witnesses were heard on Wednesday, and eight yesterday morning. There are twenty-two crown witnesses altogether, and six or seven defence witnesses. At this rate of progress a conclusion in the trial cannot possibly be reached before to-night at the earliest. Both sides are making an effort to get the hearing over by Saturday, so as not to have the jury locked up over Sunday.

At yesterday afternoon's session Dr. Thompson, coroner, of Stony Creek, told of being summoned to the Finton farm and finding the body lying with the arms folded across the breast. The skull was crushed in on top, and there were pools of blood twelve inches from the body.

The skull being produced, the doctor indicated in detail how it was cracked. He did not think that, had the deceased fallen by accident where he was found, the arms would have been folded as they were. In answer to Mr. Blackstock, he said he thought death was caused by a blow on the head.

The Plague In Manchuria.

Pekin, Jan. 13.—Bubonic plague in Manchuria is spreading rapidly. Reports received here state that hundreds of persons are dying every day, and that the number of fatalities is increasing. A French plague expert has succumbed to the disease. The Chinese Government has appealed to the foreign community for assistance in combatting the epidemic, and four missionary doctors, one an American and the others British, have volunteered their services.

It is planned to quarantine the railways and the great wall, in the hope of arresting the spread of the scourge southward.

Will Now Hear Other Side.

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—Twenty members of the Canadian Manufacturers Association are here arranging for the presentation of the memorials on the question of the tariff.

A preliminary meeting was held yesterday afternoon and another last night after the arrival of the Montreal delegation. The finishing touches was then put upon the memorial.

The manufacturers will be received to-day by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Richard Cartwright and other Ministers.

Sir Thomas Brocklebank Dead.

Pittsburg, Jan. 13—Cable despatches to this city announce the death in Liverpool yesterday of Sir Thomas Brocklebank, baronet, father of Mrs. George Westinghouse, jr., of this city. He was 63 years old and was made a baronet by Queen Victoria. He leaves a widow and three sons and three daughters.

WANT DUTY CUT.

Niagara Fruit Growers Upheld Ontario Association.

Grimsby, Jan. 13.—Niagara Peninsula fruit growers, at their annual meeting here yesterday afternoon, approved of the action of the representatives of the tender fruit interests at the annual meeting of Ontario growers, in agreeing to cut in two the import duty on grapes, in order that the States may be induced to lower the duty on Canadian apples. The duty on grapes is now two cents a pound.

Another very important matter taken up was the recent victory over the express companies in regard to rates. General Manager Bryce of the Canadian Express Co., and General Manager Stout of the Dominion Express Co., have agreed to come to the district to confer with the growers as to a new tariff, satisfactory to both. To meet the express men a committee was appointed, with instructions to prepare a brief on behalf of the growers.

Growers who attended New York State Growers' Convention at Rochester, reported that there it had been demonstrated that an arsenate of lead mixed with lime and sulphur, spray would greatly increase its efficiency. The only danger is in getting too strong a mixture, but to overcome this hydrometers to regulate the strength had been arranged. One has been purchased for St. Catharines district.

The report of Secretary-Treasurer Fisher shows a balance of $275.13 in the treasury. Regarding annual meeting of the institution, to be held late in February, Profs. Parrott and Whitgee of Geneva, N.Y., were suggested, the selection being placed in the hands of the directors.

A life membership and honorary directorship was bestowed on Dr. Jessop, M.P.P., for his active interest in the work of the growers.

Mrs. Schenk on Trial.

Wheeling, W.Va., Jan. 13.—It was woman against woman yesterday in the sensational trial of Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, charged with placing poison in the food and medicines of her husband, John O. Schenk, the millionaire packer. Unmasking his heaviest batteries, Prosecuting Attorney Handlan called as his first witness "Miss Evans," the woman of mystery in the case, who nursed Schenk during his illness from poison.

When court opened at 9 o'clock half an hour earlier than usual, a storm of wind and rain was sweeping the city, and Judge Jordan had the smallest crowd so far in the course of the trial to contend with.

The request of Judge Jordan that the trial be hurried was pleasing news to the jurors, who were anxious to get to their homes, despite an unusual diversion which is allowed them in their quarters in the court house. The jurors are spending the evening in the fascinating recreation of playing "penny ante," four hundred pennies and three decks of cards being allowed them.

Must Pay Charges.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—No more bargain counter incorporations will be allowed to slip into Ontario. Companies have been securing incorporation at Ottawa and a $25 to $50 license from the Ontario Government to do business in this province. Hereafter the possession of a Dominion charter will not relieve the holders from full incorporation charges in Ontario.

The rule governing such cases in the past was as follows:

Fees for licenses are fixed in each case by order-in-council, depending largely on the amount of capital used in Ontario, calculated on the foregoing table of fees for the incorporation of domestic companies, except in the case of Dominion corporations which may pay either $25 or $50. If the company's capital is $100,000 or less the fee is $25; if the capital exceeds $100,000, the fee is $50.

Chin Wah Nok New Secretary.

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—Chin Wah Nok of Canton, China, has been appointed English secretary of the Chinese consul-general for Canada, Mr. Wang, by the Imperial Chinese Government. The new secretary arrived in the capital at noon yesterday, and was received by a large delegation of local Chinamen. Mr. Hum Quom, the local member of the Chinese Parliament, who has been aiding the English secretary to the consul, received the new appointee officially, and turned over the office to him.

Mr. Hum Quom said that it was more than likely he would attend the next session of Parliament in China, to which he was elected.

To Sign Boundary Treaty.

London, Jan. 13.—J. P. Crommelin, Liberal minister in London and diplomatic agent to France, left yesterday for Paris, where he has been authorized to sign the boundary treaty between France and Liberia. This treaty was negotiated in 1907, and its consummation was made recently a condition upon which France would approve the American project for the re-establishment of the finances of Liberia.

Comb Penetrated Scalp.

London, Ont., Jan. 13.—When crossing the icy street at the corner of Talbot and Dundas street yesterday Mrs. John Westman of East Dundas street fell, striking her head on the ground. The comb in her hair penetrated the scalp and caused a serious wound. Her head was also severely bruised.

Threw Snuff In Theatre.

Welland, Jan. 13.—For the past few nights some unknown person has been throwing snuff in the Drexel Theatre, with the result that it was impossible to continue the performance. On Tuesday night Frank Shurer was arrested and fined $14 for the offence.

Severed His Arm.

Harriston, Jan. 13.—While operating a straw-cutting machine on his farm at Drew Station, Arthur Shannon's hand came in contact with the rapidly-revolving knives, which severed the right arm below the elbow. He is expected to recover.

ATTACK ON THE WEST

English Journal Raises the Ire of the House.

Article In John Bull Is Brought Into Discussion by R. S. Lake and Opinions of Western Members Are "Too Strong For Words"—Dr. Grenfell and His Reindeer Proposition Are Discussed In the Senate.

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—For over an hour in the House of Commons yesterday the west "hit back" to an article which both the Prime Minister and the Opposition leader described as maliciously libellous, published in the English periodical edited by Horatio Bottomley, the eccentric financier, journalist, and Parliamentarian. The Canadian west and its people had been anathematized. Settlers were represented as freezing and starving to death, and gruesome pictures were drawn of the hardships alleged to have been experienced. Corruption was described as rife, and officialdom as a by-word for robbery, while the women were declared to be of the lowest class. The article added that the English settlers were discriminated against in favor of Germans and Americans. All of which, when brought to the attention of the House by Mr. Lake (Qu'Appelle) — himself of English birth—caused some vigorous western plain speaking from the representatives to the sunset side of the great lakes.

Dr. Schaffner (Souris) complained that he must necessarily express his sentiment in thought, as the language he would use would be censored by Parliamentary propriety.

Dr. Clark (Red Deer), however, found opportunity in the incident to ventilate what he termed an English-born Canadian's opinion of "the fool talk of British decadence with which defeated and discredited Unionist politicians sought to lie ignorance into disquiet." He alluded to the address of Sir Joseph Lawrence to the Empire Club in Toronto, in which the latter declared that the price Britain was paying for free trade was one million paupers, as the utterance of a man who was either ignorant or irresponsible.

Mr. Ralph Smith (Nanaimo) opined that the article complained of was penned by "a degenerate, useless Englishman who had failed to make good."

"I have no respect for that freedom of the press," quoth Mr. R. L. Borden, "which permits a man in a representative position to publish what he knows to be thoroughly and contemptibly false."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was grateful that the matter had been brought to the attention of the House. "Not that the statements carry weight," observed the Premier, "because they are so false that they carry their own repudiation, but because of the malice with which they are evidently actuated." It was significant that the libels had been most vigorously met by the English-born members from the west. The allegations were dispelled in no more emphatic way than by the presence of so many of these gentlemen in the Canadian House of Commons.

In the Senate yesterday Senator Landry asked if the Government had given Dr. Grenfell financial aid to place draught reindeer in Canadian Labrador, and, if Dr. Grenfell had not placed the reindeer in Canada, would the Government give further aid.

Sir Richard Cartwright said the Government had granted such aid, and was satisfied with the manner in which Dr. Grenfell had carried out the undertaking. Further aid would be granted.

On motion of Senator Landry the Senate ordered a statement of sums received by the National Battlefields Commission, the expenses of the commission and payments for land.

Senator Lougheed said that the Senate had come back from a long vacation with the expectation of finding a large amount of business ready for its consideration, but had been disappointed, as apparently there was really nothing ready for it. He asked what the prospects were of the Government providing the Senate with some work to do.

Sir Richard Cartwright said that the Senate and the Commons had come back from their vacation on the same day, and this might account for the conditions of which Senator Lougheed complained, as bills had not come up from the Commons. However, he expected that there would be a large amount of legislation placed before the Senate within a very short time.

Shut Out Foreign Combines.

Washington, Jan. 13.—Representative Humphrey's bill to shut out of American ports all steamships that belong to foreign shipping trusts or combinations, received the favorable consideration yesterday of the House committee on merchant marine. It would shut out all foreign ships belonging to shipping commissions, under penalty of $200 for each passenger landed, and the forfeiture of all goods brought in. It would also cancel the mail subsidy contracts of this Government to American ships that belong to such trusts.

Child Killed by Train.

Stratford, Jan. 13.—Norman McMillan, the seven-year-old son of J. W. McMillan of Railway avenue, was struck and instantly killed by the G.T.R. express yesterday afternoon. The lad was returning from school with some playmates and was crossing the tracks at Wild's coal yards when the accident happened.

Train Struck Rig.

Arnprior, Jan. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Watt of McNab Township were driving into Arnprior yesterday morning when they were struck by a westbound Grand Trunk freight train at Daniel street crossing. Mr. Watt was instantly killed and Mrs. Watt was seriously hurt. The team escaped unhurt.

The Berlin Board of Trade, at the annual meeting last night, by a standing and unanimous vote of over 100 members present, expressed strong disapproval of any reciprocity agreement with the United States.

The executive committee having in charge the plans in connecton with the coronation of King George, met yesterday and completed tentative arrangements, which will, if anything, be on a more extensive scale than at the time of King Edward's coronation.

Says Eddy Will Is Void.

Concord, N.H., Jan. 13.—An opinion, signed by former U. S. Senator William E. Chandler and others, to the effect that the will of Mrs. Eddy Baker Glover Eddy, founder of the Christian Science Church, is void, and that she therefore died intestate, and her estate "passed on at her death to her next of kin" was made public here last night. It is not stated whether there will be a contest of the will by Mrs. Eddy's relatives. The matter given out for publication here consists of a letter from Mr. Chandler to Hannis Taylor, professor of constitutional and international law at George Washington University, Washington, D.C., and the reply from Prof. Taylor. This reply contains the opinion that Mrs. Eddy's will is void, and to Prof. Taylor's signature to the opinion have been added those of Mr. Chandler, Attorneys John W. Kelley of Portsmouth and De Witt C. Howe of Concord, who were associated with Mr. Chandler as counsel for the "next friends," and William L. Chambers, a lawyer of Washington.

"Mr. Street (Gen. Frank S. Street of Concord) drew the agreement for my signature. When signing, I took it for granted that Mrs. Eddy would not, in giving away her property, undertake to violate public law. If I had thought that she had already done so, by attempting to create a church with an endowment of two millions of dollars, I should not have signed."

Taking No Chances.

London, Ont., Jan. 13.—The preparations have all but been completed for the arrangement of the patrol and the care of the hydro power line from here to the Falls.

It is the intention of the commission to erect, as soon as possible, a big horse-power automobile at each fifty miles.

In the local barn there will be four horses, one to work from here to St. Mary's another to St. Thomas, and one on the main line and a truck horse. The horses will work ten miles each way out of the barns, and the autos 25 miles each way, and the latter will be used only for night and hurry calls.

There will be two men on each patrol, and they will spend the night at watch-stations erected at ten-mile points, to be on hand for any emergency whatever. There will be a 'phone in these houses, and also cooking apparatus, beds, etc.

In this way the commission mean to have the very best possible service given the cities and towns all over western Ontario.

Baron Swaythling Dead.

London, Jan. 13.—Baron Swaythling, the banker, died here yesterday.

Montagu Samuel-Montagu, the first Baron Swaythling, was born Dec. 21, 1832, and was the son of the late Louis Samuel, a watchmaker of Liverpool. For over 50 years he conducted business in London, and until September, 1890, was head of the banking firm of Samuel Montagu & Co. In 1894 he was granted a royal license to assume the surnames of Samuel-Montagu, and created a baronet, and in 1907 he was elevated to the peerage, taking the title of Baron Swaythling of Swaythling. The baron took a great interest in advancing Jewish and other institutions and in founding new synagogues.

Message on Table.

Toronto, Jan. —"I have taken——." These words, scrawled upon a sheet of paper and an empty two-ounce bottle of carbolic acid lying upon a near-by table, were the plain explanation of the finding of Mrs. Samuel G. Ball in a dying condition at her home at 681 Crawford street, by a neighbor.

She died about two hours later, after medical aid had been summoned. Ill-health is given as the cause of her act. She was 45 years of age and lived with her husband.

Hotel Burned.

Lethbridge, Alta., Jan. 13.—The Balmoral Hotel was burned yesterday morning. The fire started in the boiler-room about 8 o'clock, and nothing was saved from the building. The firemen had a hard time, as the thermometer was more than 30 below zero. The loss is estimated at $75,000, and the insurance is not known.

B. C. Legislature.

Victoria, Jan. 13.—The Legislature opened yesterday. Amongst the new legislation are bills for the inspection of logging and railway construction camps, and one dealing with insurance. The university endowment question is also up for consideration.

Guests of Earl Grey.

New York, Jan. 13.—The Marquis and Marchioness of Salisbury, their son, Viscount Stranbourne, their two daughters, the Ladies Mary and Beatrice Cecil, the Dowager Countess of Arran and Lady Winifred Core, all arrived here yesterday by the steamship Adriatic, on their way to Ottawa, where they will be the guests of Earl Grey. None of the party has ever been on this side before.

The marquis, who is a son of the late Prime Minister, Lord Salisbury, was reticent about politics. "It is too early yet to tell what will be done with the House of Lords," he said. "However, the fact that the balance of power was practically unchanged by the recent elections would seem to indicate that the people are satisfied with the attitude and program of the Government."

Suit For Slander.

Windsor, Jan. 13.—R. H. Holland, who was defeated by Walter Chater in the recent mayoralty race in Walkerville, yesterday issued a writ against Customs Officer John Bailey of Walkerville, claiming $10,000 for slander. Bailey, on nomination day, is alleged to have made a strong speech against Holland, in which, Holland says, he was called dishonest and charged with swindling people in making real estate deals.

The Panama Canal.

Washington, Jan. 13—President Taft yesterday sent to Congres a special message urging the fortification of the Panama Canal and recommending that an appropriation of $5,000,000 for the initiation of the work on the proposed defences be made at the present session of Congress. He forwarded with the message the report of the special army and navy board, recommending fortification of the canal.

Stranded In Europe.

Boston, Jan. 13.—The filing of the bankruptcy schedule of the Collevert Tours Co., shows that between 25 and 30 Americans who had paid for tickets for a tour around the world are stranded at various points in Europe and Asia. The liabilities of the company aggregate nearly $49,000, with assets of less than $2,500.

Twisted.

"What we want," said the magazine editor, "is a story that reflects real life."

"That's the trouble with our current literature," replied the harsh critic. "We are getting too much fact in our efforts for fiction and too much fiction in our alleged facts."—Washington Star.

How the Days Go By.

Frank looked up thoughtfully from his engine and cars game of railroading, played on the primitive plan of a five-year-old boy.

"Mamma, isn't it funny how the days go by, one after the other, just like a train of cars, with Sunday for the engine."—Harper's.

A Misapprehension.

The young man leading a dog by a string lounged up to the ticket office of a railway station and inquired, "Must I—aw—take a ticket for a puppy?"

"No; you can travel as an ordinary passenger," was the reply.—Suburban Life.

ENERGY—THE HUMAN POWER-HOUSE.

ergy, which is conducted by the nerves to every part of the "human plant"—the body.

It is quite proper to call the human body a plant, the brain a power-house, and the nerve centres dynamos; for it is in the nerve centres, as in a electric dynamo, that a transformation of eergy takes palce. It is here in the human dynamos that the form of energy known as NERVE FORCE first makes its appearance.

All known phenomena are due to energy, which has different forms of manifesting itself. Fuel has energy in a latent state. It is burnt in a furnace, and the energy that was latent becomes manifest by being transformed into heat and mechanical motion through a steam engine. The dynamo transforms this mechanical motion through electricity; and as long as the medium is appropriate,

BOXING BASKETBALL

PROFESSIONAL HOCKEY MATCH RESULTED IN A TIE

The hockey match which was played here last night betwees Belleville and Trenton professionals was far from being satisfactory in several respects. The ice was in fine shape, but the other conditioss were of a depressing character. In the first place, the attendance was small and only six men showed up on Belleville's behalf, Crossett being non est. Then it was almost 9 o'clock before the Trentons entered the rink, and they also had only six players, Reddy McMillan being missing from their line-up. Furthermore, it was whispered that the game would be the last here under Mr. Irving's management. So, when only six men lined up on each side the cup of depression was full to overflowing.

THE PLAY.

Under the guidance of Mr. Pete Charlton as referee, and Mr. Ernie Lang as judge of play, the game was started just after 9 o'clock, and it proved to be hard, fast and exciting.

In the first period there was a good deal of brilliant hockey, the men working hard for victory. Belleville scored three goals and three more of their shots hit the goal posts but fell outside.

In the second period the play was equally fast. Belleville scored first, then Trenton got two in quick succession, but the home men tallied again and once more hit Trenton's goal post before time was up. The score stood 5 to 2 in favor of Belleville.

The final period was all Trenton's so far as scoring was concerned, they tallying three goals and blanking their opponents. When time was up the score was 5—5, and it ended at that. The line-up was:

Belleville—		Trenton—
Cross	Goal	Tooze
Sanford	Point	Debeau
Stalker	Cover	Pringle
Dusome	Centre	Mallen
Dubec	Right	Chipchase
McDonald	Left	Lightfoot

BELLEVILLE CURLERS BEAT NAPANEE IN SENIOR AND JUNIOR GAMES

The local curlers are naturally elated over the victory they secured last evening by defeating the Napanee curlers. The match was the first of the series for the Eastern District, which comprises Belleville, Napanee, Kingston and Brockville. The matches were made up of two rinks in each series of seniors and juniors, and in both matches Belleville were the victors, winning the former by 13 shots and the latter by 9 shots. Mr. B. Ier, who skipped one of the senior rinks, had a decided lead, securing a score of 21 to 9. The veteran skip, Mr. F. Dolan, in the early part of the match was behind, but by careful playing on the part of his players and himself the rink came out one shot ahead, and that by securing 4 shots in the final end played. While one of the Belleville junior rinks was 7 shots behind at the conclusion of the match, the other rink was 16 ahead. The regulation number of ends, namely 18, were played. Those participating and the scores were as follows:

It looks very much as if last night's match is to be the final professional game here under Mr. "Buck" Irving's management. Mr. Irving attributes the non-success of his venture to counter attractions, namely O. H. A. Intermediate and Junior hockey teams and cheap shows; but those were not the only causes, as is generally known. However, there are other projects under consideration, as to which more anon.

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2

Past Help.

The man with the old clock under his arm laid it on the jeweler's showcase. "I wish you'd see what is the matter with this," he said.

The jeweler removed the dial, screwed his eyeglasses into place and inspected the works of the ancient timepiece.

"Nothing is the matter with it now. Its sufferings are over."

"Well, how much do I owe you?" asked the man.

"Nothing," answered the jeweler. "This isn't a professional treatment. This is a coroner's inquest."—Youth's Companion.

I walked around the counter before I struck him."—Case and Comment.

What Would You Say?

If you should see
A big green tree,
With candles all alight,
With popcorn strings
And pretty things
And tinsel shining bright,
With stars that swing
And bells that ring,
All green and red and blue,
And lots of toys
For girls and boys
And lots of candies, too,
And you should hear
Somebody near,
Call out in cheery way,
"What sort of tree
Can this one be?"
I wonder what you'd say?

HAIR HEALTH

If you Have Scalp or Hair Trouble, Take Advantage of This Offer.

We could not afford to so strongly endorse Rexall "93" Hair Tonic and continue to sell it as we do, if we were not certain that it would do all we claim it will. Should our enthusiasm carry us away, and Rexall "93" Hair Tonic not give entire satisfaction to the users, they would lose faith in us and our statements, and in consequence our business prestige would suffer.

Therefore when we assure you that if your hair is beginning to unnaturally fall out or if you have any scalp trouble Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will promptly eradicate dandruff, stimulate hair growth and prevent premature baldness, you may rest assured that we know what we are talking about.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is vastly different from other similar preparations. We believe that it will do more than any other human agency toward restoring hair growth and hair health. It is not greasy and will not gum the scalp or hair or cause permanent stain. It is as pleasant to use as pure cold water.

Our faith in Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is so strong that we ask you to try it on our positive guarantee that your money will be cheerfully refunded without question or quibble if it does not do as we claim. Certainly we can offer no stronger argument. It comes in two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain it only at our store —The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

Woman's World

GOOD FORM CHIT CHAT

Milady's Mirror

A pretty woman is as often a fool as an Adonis is a fop. Beauty and brains are separate things, says a writer in Truth, and they hardly ever go together in women, because brains have a way of molding the features into strength. This is all very well in a man in whom strength is considered beauty, but in a woman it jars with our preconceived notions. In Greece, it seems, brains used to make a mold which was magnificently beautiful; it is not so in these days. We have a few curates with Greek profiles, a few beauties of the classic type, but one seldom hears of their possessing exceptional brains. If Darwin had been a woman letters would have appeared in the papers suggesting that women of science were dreadfully plain, no doubt because, being plain women, they took up science as a last resort. The idea that the size and formation of the brain forbade smooth, high brows and a small mouth would never have occurred to these critics.

Helen of Troy was stupid; one cannot read her history without adoring her for the mixture of beauty and silliness which produced Homer, and, after many centuries, dipped Marlowe's pen in the divine fire. To be "a lovely lady garmented in light from her own beauty," whose "beauty made the bright world dim," is, as a rule, reserved for those who devote themselves to being beautiful.

Mme. Recamier has been cited as an exception, but both her beauty and her brains have been questioned. On the whole, it seems that she was a very pretty and graceful woman, with exceptional charm, who studied the art of listening. Brains have their own beauty, but it is not of the sort to appeal to the man who goes to see a procession of earnest and hard-working women in the spirit of the man who goes to a cattle fair and appraises them quite in the manner of the purchaser.

The gift of great beauty is rare, and, as has been said, it is its own excuse. Prettiness is very common, but it does not usually go with brains, in either sex. But charm is independent of brains, beauty, income or anything else, and when we come down to the matrimonial basis of calculation which prevails among those who write to the newspapers we shall find that charm wins the day.

Gaslight Injures Skin.

Since winter is usually the period for bad hygienic habits, such as staying in the house too much and eating too heavily for comfortable digestion, you must bear in mind that the season is one for especial precaution in the way of good hygienic sense.

Then there is the matter of the hot gaslighted room.

How many girls realize that a long stay under brilliant gaslight is ruinous to the complexion, parching, yellowing and sometimes blotching?

The skin must get a good deal of its fresh oxygen through the lungs, and gaslight burns this up with a rapidity that is terrifying when you come to dabble with the scientific side of the subject.

Warmth is needed for a good skin, but so also is a moist atmosphere, wherefore a long walk on a drizzly day is sometimes greatly beneficial, and indeed it is to the rains and fogs of their climate that Englishwomen owe their beautiful complexions.

Good For the Eyes.

It strengthens the eyes to bathe them either in very hot water or in very cold. Better yet is to take pieces of absorbent cotton, rounded and made into little pads to fit the eyes, dip them in ice water and place them on the lids, changing them as they become hot. After a few minutes of such treatment the eyes will feel comforted and relieved to a great degree. This is specially grateful to the eyes after riding in the wind or after having been subjected to the dust and cinders of a railway or the glare of bright reflections on the water when on a boat. Those who have a tendency to weak eyes should daily use an eye cup in which is placed a boracic acid solution. The saturated solution diluted one-half is generally the best and should be made fresh for each eye. The eye should be opened and shut in the solution half a dozen times or more, so that it will thoroughly bathe the eyeball as well as the lids.

Care of Eyebrows.

The skin beneath the eyebrows needs daily attention. One frequently sees a dry, scaly condition here, similar to dandruff of the scalp—and indeed it is the same thing—and here and there tiny bald patches. Crude petroleum rubbed well into the eyebrows at night will relieve the scaliness and promote the growth of hair. A tiny brow brush should be on every one's toilet table, and used daily it imparts luster to the brows and keeps them in good condition.

For the Children

The Starling an Unwelcome English Invader.

It may interest young bird lovers to know that the United States department of agriculture has forbidden the importation of the English starling. The reason for this is that it promises to become as great a pest as the English sparrow. It destroys vast numbers of larvae, but attacks fruits, causing great loss in orchards. It also eats the young and eggs of other birds. It was brought to this country in 1890, when sixty birds were released in Central park, New York city. Since then it has increased prodigiously.

At a distance the starling resembles a blackbird, but on near approach its plumage has a greenish gloss, showing bronze reflections, while on the back are arrowhead spangles of brown. Its bill is bright yellow.—Outing.

Trick For Christmas.

Place an empty high hat on the table. Show a large handkerchief on both sides to convince your audience that there has been no preparation for this trick. Then from the folds of this same handkerchief the performer produces a walnut, which he lets drop into the hat. The handkerchief is now crumpled up and displayed again, and, lo, another nut is produced. Thus he goes on until a dozen nuts are dropped into the hat. Next turn the hat upside down, and again a surprise awaits the audience, as the hat is quite empty.

The secret of the trick depends on a nut suspended by a thread the color of the handkerchief attached to the edge. In this condition the nut is held in one hand with that corner of the handkerchief, and both sides of the handkerchief are shown and shaken out; then the nut is dropped behind the handkerchief unseen. Dropping one corner and holding the handkerchief between the tips of one finger and thumb, the performer first lifts the nut out of one of the folds in which it gets concealed; then he drops it into the hat, afterward picking up the handkerchief by two corners in such a manner that when it is lifted above the hat the nut is invisibly dragged behind it and the production repeated as often as desired.

Wall Paper Paste.

Sour skimmilk added to flour paste gives a good sticking quality to wall paper put on with the mixture, even on whitewashed walls.

St. Thomas.

The little island of St. Thomas, in the gulf of Guinea, although only about 350 square miles in extent, produces more cacao than any other region in the world, besides coffee and tropical fruits in abundance.

An Elephant's Hide.

Notwithstanding its thickness, an elephant's skin is very sensitive.

The Burmese Mile.

The Burmese equivalent for "mile" is a word that means "to sit" and is used to indicate the distance a man can ordinarily go without sitting down to rest.

Starfish and Urchin.

The starfish has an eye on the tip of each of its five rays or arms, and in the sea urchin, which is nothing but a starfish with the ends of its rays drawn close together, the five eyes are gathered in a circle around what is considered the hinder portion of its body.

Where It Always Rains.

There is a group of islands to the south of New Zealand called the Sisters, or Seven Sisters, which are reputed to be subjected to a practically constant rainfall. The same may be said of the islands and mainland of Tierra del Fuego, saving for the difference that the rain often takes the form of sleet and snow. On a line running round the world from four degrees to eight degrees or nine degrees, there are patches over which rain seldom ceases to fall. This is called the "zone of constant precipitation," but at the same time there are several localities along it with very little rainfall.

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.

A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery —the great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES.

Qualities Which Prevent Their Being Counterfeited Successfully.

About the year 1819 a great outcry was raised against the Bank of England for not adopting a style of note that could not be imitated and at the same time preventing the sacrifice of life which at that period was common, the punishment for forgery being death. The subject at last became so pressing that the Goverment appointed commissioners to investigate the cause of the numerous forgeries and whether a mode could be devised whereby the forging of bank notes might be prevented.

Previous to this investigation the directors of the bank had been endeavoring to remedy the evil, many plans having been submitted to them, all of which they were obliged to reject.

The bank placed before the commissioners 180 different projects that had been recommended for adoption and and 70 varieties of paper made by way of experiment. The result of all this labor was the bank note of today.

The color of the paper is peculiar, and cannot be imitated exactly by counterfeiters except at great expense. The combined thinness and strength of the paper are also unique. It is made in sheets large enough for two notes. Each note before it is sized weighs about 18 grains and then if doubled it is strong enough to suspend a weight of 36 pounds.

The texture of the paper is also peculiar. It has a crisp feel invariably the same and such that bank clerks of experience can readily detect forgeries by this test alone. Then the wire mark impressed in the making by a frame, costly to make and difficult to use, is practically inimitable.

Each note has thin rough edges uncut not to be produced by any note of cutting paper that is not devised expressly for the purpose. The paper for printing is damped with water in the exhausted receiver of an air pump. The ink used in the plate printing is made of Frankfort black, which is composed of the charcoals of the tendrils and husks of the German grape ground with linseed oil. This ink has a peculiar and very deep shade of black, common black inks being tinted either with blue or brown.

Giant Birds Now Extinct.

In the British Museum, and in several continental institutions for the advacement of science, there may be seen specimens of birds' eggs which are almost as large as a two-gallon jug. These eggs were laid by the epiornis, an extinct and gigantic bird of Madagascar. The cubic bulk of an epiornis egg is eight times that of the egg of the ostrich, which means that each of them is equal in point of capacity to 150 hens' eggs.

The first discovery of these interesting relics of past times was made by the captain of a merchant vessel which had stopped at a port on the northeastern coast of Madagascar to trade with the natives. During the stay at this point the curious vessels used by the natives for water vases attracted the attention of the captain. Upon investigation it was found that these odd utensils were in reality gigantic egg shells cut in halves.

Upon questioning the water carriers in regard to the bird that laid the eggs, and the place where they were procured, the captain was given to understand that the bird itself was unknown, but that the eggs were discovered in a large sand bank some distance away in the up-country, and could not be found elsewhere, to the knowledge of the natives. An offer to purchase all that could be procured soon resulted in the discovery of several fine specimens, all of which fell into the hands of Isadore G. St. Hilaire, the French naturalist. These curiosities were afterward distributed among the largest museums.

Caution.

Tales of grafting all remind
Legislators can be bought,
And the rising would be leader
Sure will shove us if we're caught.

For he needs a reputation
Just to help him catch the vote,
And just now the young reformer
Is the man of greatest note.

So that if to run your business
You some legislators need
Of the fearless young attorney
You would better take good heed.

That Old Account.

"Do you know Wilkins?"

"Wilkins?"

"Yes."

"No, I don't know him."

"Why, I thought he said you used to trade at his grocery store."

"That's the reason I don't know him now."

Nothing Doing.

"Temptation never fools with me much."

"Indeed!"

"No."

"Are you so stern and unrelenting?"

"Not at all. I throw up my hands at once and it goes on its way."

No Linguist.

"How are you coming on with your new auto?"

"Pretty fair."

"Understand it yet?"

"Not altogether. It speaks a simple sputtering language, and I haven't separated all of the words as yet."

Labor Adviser.

It is doubtful if a better man could have been selected for the post of Labor Adviser to the British Home Office than Mr. D. J. Shackleton, M.P. for Clitheroe. He has fought his way from poverty to his present influential position. At nine years of age he started work as a half-timer in a cotton mill, and, getting his education at the local school as best he could out of working hours, he was a teacher by the time he was twelve, with pupils almost old enough to be his father. Known in the House as "Baby" Shackleton, he is one of the biggest and brawniest of M.P.'s, standing well over six feet and weighing 225 pounds. He has a soft corner in his heart for "strugglers," particularly the struggling widow with three or four children to bring up. As he told Mr. Lloyd George on one occasion, "It is an easy matter to make out a Budget when you have got the money to budget with, but it would be a difficult matter for the Chancellor to budget on $4 or $5 a week."

Trained For the Part.

Canon Rhodes Bristow, who is to succeed Canon Benham as chairman of the Poor Clergy Relief Corporation in England, has had a large and varied experience of life in the underworld of London. He once had an amusing experience at a christening. Infants usually cry while undergoing this ceremony, but this one was as quiet as a lamb. Throughout it smiled cheerfully in the canon's face. "Madam," he remarked later to the young mother, "I must congratulate you on the little one's behaviour. I have never before christened a child that has behaved so well as yours." "No wonder he behaved well," was the unexpected reply; "his father and I have been practicing on him with a pail of water for the last ten days."

A Word Picture.

Rev. E. Lipkin of Oudtshoorn, Cape Colony, has, says The Jewish Chronicle, completed and presented to the King a remarkable portrait in words of King Edward. The lines which make up the drawing contain about 35,000 words, being a history of the late Kings' life.

George Was Not the Only One.

"Come in this evening and our daughter will play and sing some of her own compositions."

"All right."

"Now I know that Washington was not the only one who could not tell a lie."

"Why so?"

"You might have said you had another engagement."—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE PROPOSED CIVIC INVESTIGATION IS TO BE THOROUGH

INDEPENDENT ENQUIRY IS ASKED FOR

Property Owners' and Taxpayers' Association Ask For Judicial Enquiry Into Sale of City Lots—Their Settled Purpose Expressed in Able Speeches—The Resolution Which Was Passed—The Ward System Condemned—Allegations as to Political Persecution of Trustees Marsh and Price Contradicted by Liberals.

A largely attended and thoroughly business-like meeting of the Property Owners' Association was held in the police court last night, at which the business transacted was:

To ask the City Council to request the appointment by the Ontario Government of a commissioner—preferably a Judge from some other county—to investigate civic affairs, as provided by statute.

To confer with the Board of Trade as to the abolition of the ward system and with reference to civic government, whether by the restoration of the general system or by commission.

To endeavor to secure the removal of the rocky shoal in the river above and below the site of the C. N. R. bridge, whether by the Government or by the railway company.

To enlarge the scope of the Association by including all taxpayers, and change the name of the organization.

Finally, the assertion that the Association is a Tory organization formed for the purpose of blighting the political aspirations of Mr. L. W. Marsh was given its quietus by such undoubted Liberals as Messrs. J. J. B. Flint and P. McL. Forin.

THE OPENING.

Mr. Henry Corby, Vice-President, presided in the absence, owing to illness of the President, Col. Lazier, and Mr. J. F. Wills, Secretary, recorded the minutes.

Mr. Corby, in opening the meeting, spoke fluently and forcibly for a few minutes. He congratulated the Association on the result of the city elections, in which all the candidates whom they had endorsed had been returned, with one exception. He was sorry that matters of a personal nature had been dragged into the discussion of the sale of citl lots. He repudiated the idea of there being any political animus in that connection. He was not present at the formation of the Association or at its second meeting, but it was composed of Liberal and Conservative citizens who had banded themselves together for the purpose of securing the good government of the city. He had been drawn into the matter, but would not shirk the duty which he had undertaken. If any wrong had been done, they would try to place the responsibility where it belonged, and if any were found guilty they would have to take their medicine. He suggested that the meeting should pass a strong resolution asking the Cit Council to ask for a judicial investigation into anything that was believed to be corrupt in the civic administration in 1910 or in previous years, to be held by a Judge from some other county, who, knowing nothing of our affairs, would not be influenced by local knowledge or considerations and would be in a position to give an impartial decision. This could be secured from the Ontario Government by resolution of the Council or by petition from thirty ratepayers. The ward system of election of aldermen had proved a failure. They would be better off under the general system which was in operation here for several years, namely with ten aldermen elected by the vote of the whole city. Hard things might have been said in the heat of the contest, some of which were to be regretted, but as to the main charges, he had nothing to retract. The charges must be probed to the bottom. They had been published in definite form in the press, but no reply had been attempted. Still, it was only fair to the accused that they should be held to be innocent until they were found guilty. (Applause.)

Mr. Wills then read the following letter from the President of the Board of Trade:

January 5, 1911.

Mr. Henry Corby, Vice-President,
Property Owners' Association.

Dear Sir,—The Board of Trade of this city intends at its next regular meeting in this month to take up the matter of our aldermanic representation in our City Council.

It is the opinion of the thinking men of our city that something must be done to lessen the number of aldermen, and raise the standard to the highest possible level. We will discuss whether this city should be governed by a commission or two or three, or be represented as we are now by electing annually a certain number of aldermen. Personally, I believe that we should bring to bear, together with your Association and the City Council, the very best scheme that will secure for the City of Belleville the most efficient government that can be devised. I feel confident that our city will increase in population, and that its business interests will be materially added to in the next few years.

With the Canadian Northern Railway assured, the Canadian Pacific a possibility in the very near future, our harbor facilities, deep water navigation and cheap power, we cannot help but move forward in a very material way. However, unless we, as citizens, put our shoulder to the task of making this not only a good business, but a well governed, city, we will fail in securing what is ours. The only way we can secure this ideal is the active co-operation of the different municipal bodies acting in harmony with one another to secure one desired end.

Kindly have your Association give this matter their consideration. I am

Yours very truly,
W. B. DEACON,
President.

Mr. Wills also read the following letter from Mr. W. B. Northrup, M. P.:

Ottawa, Jan. 6th, 1911.

Dear Frank,—On my return this morning, I went to the office of the Commissioners and found that the judgment had been given and you notified. The only thing that you can now do is to present a petition to the Board asking it to reconsider its judgment and setting forth the reasons therefor.

Yours in haste,
W. B. NORTHRUP.

J. F. Wills, K. C.,
Belleville, Ont.

On motion of Mr. Flint, it was resolved to appoint a committee to confer with the Board of Trade in regard to President Deacon's letter.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who seconded Mr. Flint's motion, suggested that the Association concur in the views expressed in Mr. Deacon's letter, and the motion was amended accordingly.

The Executive Committee was appointed on motion of Mr. Flint, seconded by Mr. D. R. Leavens.

THE INVESTIGATION.

Mr. Corby then asked for an expression of opinion as to the proposed investigation.

NO POLITICS IN IT.

Mr. Forin said there was an impression getting abroad that this organization was political or semi-political. That was not correct. Their sole object was to assist in getting cleaner and better government for the city. There had been too much log rolling in the past under the ward system—"you help me and I'll help you"—and an investigation was necessary.

Mr. Corby suggested that all taxpayers, whether property owners or not, should be admitted to the Association.

Mr. Flint related, as he had previously done, that the Association had been formed in opposition to the plan proposed by the Council for the pavement of a portion of Front Street, in which they succeeded. Col. Lazier had suggested the formation of an association to protect the interests of the property owners. He emphatically denied the report, stated by and on Mr. Marsh's behalf, that the Association had been formed to balk his political career. The President is a Liberal, as also are a majority of the members, and their only object was to aid in advancing the interests of this community. He thought a judicial investigation was the proper course as no tribunal appointed by the Council could demand the production of papers and the attendance of witnesses. Such investigation should be held by a Judge from a distance, who knew nothing of the circumstances. Any investigation by the Council would be a farce. The matter had gone so far that it must be probed in every respect.

BROADENED THE SCOPE.

Mr. Wills read the law relating to civic investigations, as stated by Mr. Corby. A few simple verbal alterations of their constitution would carry out the suggestion of Mr. Corby as to admitting taxpayers to membership.

This was done on motion of Mr. Walter Alford, seconded by Mr. F. R. Lingham, and the title of the organization now is "The Belleville Property Owners' and Taxpayers' Association."

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who was called on, said he was fully in accord with the remarks which had been made by the previous speakers. Some men, when they got into difficulty, tried to divert attention from their actions by the familiar device of dragging a herring across the scent, or, like the cuttle-fish, emitting a dense fluid in order to screen them from observation. Mr. Marsh had raised the political cry with the object of diverting attention. The association had no political object in the late election. As a matter of fact, he had personally solicited three well known Liberals to become candidates for aldermen, and all three had offered themselves and had been elected. He entirely repudiated politics in municipal affairs, but if they wanted a political fight he was ready to meet them on that ground. He agreed with Mr. Deacon's letter as to the failure of the ward system of electing the aldermen, as there was too much log-rolling under it. If the city was governed by a commission composed of three men, who had a thorough knowledge of municipal affairs, it might be better even than the general system. He was glad to see the admission of the taxpayers to membership in the Association. It was mere clap-trap to raise a cry that the interests of landlord and tenant were conflicting and to try to set landlord against tenant and tenant against landlord. He could assure them that in his experience few property owners realized more than four per cent. on their investment. No one would be better pleased than he if the parties accused in connection with the sale of lots were exonerated, but at the same time it was their duty to put down corruption. If there had been any corruption in former years let it be brought to light. He knew that some charges, which were being made on the street, were untrue; for instance, that some parties had made a profit of $40,000 on one transaction. As to the vinegar works, concerning which corruption had been alleged, he only knew that he had lost $1,000 in that business, but was content, as it was in operation. Sir Mackenzie closed by asking all to assist in making Belleville a manufacturing centre by investing in the local industries.

FRONT ST. SEWER.

Mr. Walter Alford expressed his sympathy with the Association. He believed that the Front Street sewer was a waste of money. The old sewer was better, in his opinion, than the new one, as some of the joints were laid in clay, from which the odors would escape, as had been alleged of the old sewer, and he would like to know who ordered it. If it was the City Engineer, all right. He urged careful supervision of the city's expenditure, and in conclusion strongly disapproved of the saddling of the cost of the Front Street pavement on the property owners.

Mr. Flint said he had made enquiry but had failed to discover who ordered the construction of the Front St. sewer. There was nothing on record in the Council or the Board of Health. A by-law was passed after the contract had been let.

Mr. Thomas Manley said tenders for the sewer had been advertised for two weeks, and the work was done according to specification, and he would be $500 betetr off if he had never seen it.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, with a little explanation and jocular remarks, threw oil on the troubled waters.

FOR INVESTIGATION.

Mr. J. P. C. Phillips moved, seconded by Mr. R. S. Solmes:—

"That we would recommend that the City Council at its next meeting do petition the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to appoint a commission to enquire into the financial affairs of the corporation, and things connected therewith, respecting particularly the years 1909-1910, and such other years and affairs as it may find necessary to have the fullest investigation into any and all matters in question referring to the affairs of the Corporation, as provided for in Section 428 of the Municipal Act;

On motion of Mr. Forin, seconded by Mr. Flint, the annual fee from this date was reduced to fifty cents per year.

COMMISSION RULE.

By request, Mr. Wills read an article on government by commission in the United States, where that system is in force in eighty cities.

Mr. Flint spoke strongly in favor of commissions.

THE RAILWAY BRIDGE.

Mr. Corby spoke of the letter of Mr. Northrup, relating the facts already published in that connection.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell had grave doubts as to the commission changing their report, but it should be impressed upon the Railway Commission that the railway company should do the dredging.

Mr. Wills was of opinion that the Council should at once urge the Government to act as to the dredging recommended by Mr. Sing, the Government's engineer. There was not a moment to be lost in this connection.

Mr. Forin moved, seconded by Sir Mackenzie Bowell,

"That this Association request that the City Council take immediate steps to secure an amendment to the judgment of the Board of Railway Commissioners compelling the dredging of the river before the construction of the C.N.R. bridge.

MR. LYNCH'S CHARGE.

Mr. James Lynch charged that City Solicitor Mikel is in the pay of the C. N. R. and is working in their interest.

The meeting then adjourned.

ALLEGED POISONING MYSTERY NOW AGITATING PICTON

Was John Bongard, who died suddenly before Christmas, poisoned, asks the Picton Gazette.

Much of the mystery now surrounding his death it is expected will be cleared on Monday.

The report from the Toronto analyst, who has made an autopsy on the stomach of the deceased, is expected here to-morrow. This will tell if poison was found, and will determine if John Bongard went to death by unfair means.

The inquest will be held in the county buildings Monday night at 7.30 o'clock. Dr. Morley Currie, the coroner, is expected back from Ottawa to-morrow. He will have charge of the inquest.

JURY ORDERS AUTOPSY.

The primary investigation into Bongard's death was held in Glenwood cemetery chapel during Christmas week. Little was done to solve the matter. The jury empanelled there ordered the stomach of the dead man sent to Toronto for an analysis. Further investigation rests on the analyst's report. If poison is found in the stomach, the Crown attorney will endeavor to find out if Bongard took the poison by way of mistake, or if it was administered by other persons.

It was one of the dead man's sisters who called for the probing.

"MYSTERY" AT DEATH.

There was a certain amount of mystery in connection with Bongard's death. He had been about the day previous. Death came suddenly in the night. For some time previous to death Bongard had had "queer" spells, fainting and vomiting on the streets. These gave rise to nasty rumors. When death finally stepped in these rumors became further exaggerated, with hints of foul play.

It was to dispel all suspicion that the investigation was started. Now all hinges on the result of the autopsy.

For some time previous to his death Bongard and his wife had been living together. But they have had periods of unhappy domestic life, much quarrelling and wrangling. For a whole they lived apart.

THE SPRINGER LOCK MANUFACTURING CO.

At a meeting of the directors of the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company, held to-day in the premises of the company, a dividend of seven per cent. was declared upon the first preference stock for the year ending 31st December, 1910.

The shareholders of the company are to be congratulated on its success since its reorganization.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Another January thaw is about due.

Toronto's street Railway is of more profit to that city than many gold mines. The city's share of the profits in 1910 was no less than $697,337.

Many a man will growl about the incompetent municipal government and yet will be too shiftless to shovel the snow off his sidewalk.

Noxious weeds have been the subject of discussion, and not without cause, at several agricultural meetings held lately. If the railways are compelled to keep their property clear of weeds a long step will have been taken towards eradicating the evil.

The Labor Department of Great Britain has been investigating the wages paid agricultural laborers. It has found that on the average the Scotch laborer receives about $248 a year, the English laborer about $23[illegible] and the Irish laborer about $14[illegible]. Even these wages are about 8 per cent higher than they were 10 years ago. A large percentage of these laborers are married and have families which they somehow manage to support on these wages. Such are among the blessings of Free Trade.

If anyone could tabulate the amount of public money which has been squandered through the blundering of the Laurier Government and the grafting of their friends and employees in connection with the Quebec bridge, the Transcontinental railway and Intercolonial railway, the Marine, Printing and other departments, not to speak of the sawdust wharves, dredging contracts and other comparitively small affairs, the expose would stagger the people of Canada.

The Asquith Government are now at the mercy of the Labor members who threaten to defeat them if they do not abandon the preamble to the Lords' Veto Bill, which declares for a second chamber on a popular instead of a hereditary basis. The political situation in the mother country is certainly very unsatisfactory. With the balance of power as it now is, in the hands of the Home Rulers and the Laborites, neither of the parties can form a stable administration.

A Boston writer advances the novel view that Heaven does not consist of a single abode of the blessed, but scores of planets will be the future abiding place of those who can earn their reward on earth. The qualifications for admission vary, and classification will be according to order of merit. Kindred spirits will be assigned to celestial bodies where they will not have to associate with those who might differ with them in matters of detail, thus averting any undesirable friction. If the Bostonian idea works out, it looks like a great scheme.

The Globe says that protection means not more work, but less work for the wage earner. How is it then, asks the Toronto News that Free Trade in Great Britain shelters more unemployed than any two protectionist countries of much larger population? The Globe declares that protection means not higher but lower wages for the worker. How is it then that the English railway workman earns little more than $5 a week, that tens of thousands of British laborers try to subsist on $3 to $4 a week, and that tens of thousands more are starving to death on sums even down to nothing but doles of chartiy?

CANADIAN NORTHERN BRIDGE AT TRENTON

Messrs. Henderson Bros., who have the contract to build the C. N. R. bridge over the River Trent, are busily engaged in construction work, says the Trenton Courier. Fully fifty men are employed, besides an army of inspectors who check over every portion of the work. The abutment pier at the west side of the river is finished and piers one and two, counting from the west side of the river, are under construction. Yesterday being a mild day concrete was being put in in a lively manner. The mode of construction is as follows: The form is built on the ice and sunk to the bottom of the river and weighted down with tons of steel rails. A small portion of the concrete is put in a box and sunk to the bottom and let loose by a trap door. This is packed with a specially made flat instrument and left a day or so to harden. The form is then pumped dry and concrete put in, in the usual manner. The ice makes a splendid platform to work on and derricks and steam boilers find a sufficiently firm foundation on the ice. The plans call for nine piers besides the two abutment piers. Piers Nos. eight and nine are the next two to be built, they being now well under way.

W. R. WILSON DEAD AT GOOD OLD AGE

Mr. W. R. Wilson, an aged gentleman, who resided on North Front Street, near Albert College, passed away last evening from an attack of pneumonia. Deceased, who was 78 years of age, was born in Camden East, and for years was a yeoman of Sidney Township. For the past ten years he had lived in Belleville. Mr. Wilson had been for years a member of the Methodist church. An aged widow, who is seriously ill with pneumonia, and one daughter, Mrs. E. H. Wise, of Clinton, Ont., survive.

HOLLOWAY STREET'S COMING PASTOR

Rev. Arthur R. Sanderson, who has been unanimously invited by the Holloway Street Methodist church in this city to succeed Rev. Benjamin Greatrix, in June next, was received on trial for the ministry in the Toronto Conference in 1892. After attending Victoria University he was ordained in 1897. He was transferred into the Bay of Quinte Conference and appointed to Oshawa three years ago.

Mrs. Sanderson is a frequent visitor here, as she is the sister of Mr. J. M. Watson, the energetic and enterprising manager of the Messrs. Sloan & Co.

Shot by Litigant.

Caney, Kans., Jan. 9.—J. D. S. Neeley, president of the Wichita Pipe Line Co., president of the Lima (Ohio) Trust Co., and head of several large oil companies, was shot and killed in the Palace Hotel here yesterday morning by Al. O. Truskett, a prominent business man of Caney.

The shooting was the result of litigation over an oil lease. Truskett surrendered immediately.

Truskett was taken by automobile to the county jail at Independence, Kansas.

The shooting occurred in the rear of the hotel. Mr. Neeley had been sitting in the lobby reading a letter. Truskett, sitting opposite, had been watching him closely. When Mr. Neeley got up and walked toward the rear of the hotel, Trusket hurried around to the sample room. As Neeley passed the door of this room, Truskett fired at him twice. One bullet passed through Neeley's heart and the other through his left arm. When employes of the hotel reached the prostrate man he was dead.

REPORTER ON AEROPLANE.

London Times Man Describes Flight With an Aviator.

There are plenty of reporters at the aviation meets, but as their observations are usually made from terra firma, we have so far had very few accounts of how it really feels to fly. The man who runs the machine has other things to think about, and is not usually a graphic writer. A correspondent of The London Times, however, recently took an air trip, being invited to go because he weighed 196 pounds. The aviators were having a weight carrying contest. The wind was blowing about 20 miles an hour, and the rest of the competitors declined to take the risk, so the aviator and the reporter had a "walk over," but not as tame as most victories of that kind. We read:

"The worst part of such a journey for the novice is the waiting until everything is ready for the start. The sensation of anticipation is not unlike the feeling that one has when one is waiting for a wounded boar to break cover from the corner into which he is driven. But once the propeller starts to whirl behind you all other thoughts beyond exhilaration of rapid motion vanish. You have gripped the struts thinking that you will have to hold on like grim death, but you immediately find that this is not necessary. The machine moves along the ground at an extraordinary pace, and I only knew that it was actually flying when I saw the elevating plane change from the horizontal. Of the motion of flight it is difficult to speak clearly. Even in the high wind that Mr. Grace was now climbing, it was not more than the sensation of a beautifully balanced motor car. The earth—in this case the sward of the Lanark race course—seemed to be racing away from under us, and in a flash we were level with the first pylon and the judge's box.

"The machine was now up to 150 feet, and I became engrossed in Mr. Grace's method in flying. It seemed to me that his attention was glued to his elevating plane, with just momentary glances out of his eye to judge the distance by which he had to shun each pylon in its turn. We were now crossing fields and water. I could observe the gates, the wire fences, and a man bathing in the water. Then we were round into the wind. Our pace immediately slackened, and Mr. Grace was working to keep his machine in the air. As we crossed a road we were going so slowly that I could observe the direction of the hoof marks of a horse that had recently passed. Here all observation ceased, as Mr. Grace was now battling with the wind. We had only 500 yards to traverse to cross the winning line, but the dead weight against the wind was bringing the machine down. Then there came a gust heavier than them all. It took the machine just up the requisite amount to cross the line, and we came gently to earth. It had only been a four minutes' ride, but it was certainly the most delightful ride that I had ever experienced. The only recollection that I have that will describe the general sensation is that of exquisite motion."

The Important Question.

"What was the matter with that customer?" asked the proprietor of the swell restaurant.

"When he was through his dinner," explained the waiter excitedly, "he asked for his check, and when I gave it to him he just simply went crazy."

"But did he pay as he went?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

Bags of Rupees Crusted With Mould.

The boarded wealth of India is traditional, and all sorts of suggestions have been made to bring about the utilization of this wealth which lies fallow. A few years ago Sir Ernest Cable had a good deal to say on the subject, and only a few months back Mr. T. H. S. Biddulph, financial adviser to a native state in Northern India, in the course of a speech at home, suggested that all existing railway lines should be converted into companies for the purpose of "unearthing India's hoarded millions." In his opinion, the reason why Indians are unwilling to invest their money in commercial undertakings is, that they have no ready means of selling out in times of need. But all attempts to unearth "India's hoarded millions" had failed until the co-operative credit society came into operation. We find the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab stating, in his review of the working of the co-operative credit societies in his province during the past year, that "bags of rupees, crusted with mould" have been deposited in the banks which have been established in connection with these societies. Sir Lewis Dane says that the restoration of these mould-crusted rupees into circulation shows that "the co-operative movement is beginning to tap the hoarded wealth of the province." He even looks forward to the movement as "one means of securing the erection of elevators in the great wheat exporting tract." The co-operative credit system results in India, and may help in developing the industrial resources of India in a manner undreamt of by the Government.

Birds Without Nests.

There are scores of different kinds of birds in and around the coasts of Britain which never dream of building nests. These either steal nests or do without them altogether.

The kingfishers and the woodpeckers, as well as the cuckoos, never build, but dump their eggs into the nest of any other bird that comes handy. Our commonest little hawk, the kestrel, has a fancy for the disused nest of a carrion crow or magpie if she can find one at a sufficient height above the ground to suit her.

That odd-looking bird, the nightjar, makes no nest, but, choosing some hollow on the bare ground sheltered by bracken, there lays its two mottled, lead-colored eggs. Game birds mostly have no nests, and lay their eggs in a hollow on the ground. None of the plover family take much trouble about nest-building. The stone curlew, or Norfolk plover, neglects even the few bents which the plover generally places below her eggs. That rare member of the plover family, the dotterel, lays its four pear-shaped eggs in a depression of the sand or shingle on the summit of a hill or mountain.

Must Have a Tunnel.

An interesting story of the construction of the Canterbury and Whitstable line in 1824 is told by the writer of that part of "Our Home Railways" devoted to the Southeastern and Chatham line. John Dixon, the engineer sent down by George Stephenson, made a survey and chose an easy route through Blean. The Canterbury committee was then called to consider his plans. "What! no tunnel?" asked one of these intelligent men. "No sir," said Dixon; "I am pleased to say no tunnelling is necessary, and the line is practically level." "Oh," said some of the others, "we must have a tunnel." They insisted, and Stephenson journeyed to Canterbury to choose a route with a nice tunnel in it. There was, of course, no difficulty, and the site for a tunnel was found at Tyler Hill.

Acts Disallowed

The following acts, passed by the Legislature of the Province of Saskatchewan in the ninth year of His Majesty's reign, 1909, have been disallowed, presumably on the ground of being ultra vires. The official Gazette gives no reason:

Chapter 43, "An Act to incorporate The Gardner Boggs Investment and Trust Company."

Chapter 44, "An Act to incorporate The Saskatchewan Securities and Trusts Corporation."

Chapter 45, "An Act to incorporate The Saskatchewan Loan Company," were received by His Excellency the Governor General on the 11th day of January, 1910.

Assessment For Taxation

The Financial Post points out, with regard to local assessment for taxation, that "under-valuation reduces the legal borrowing power of a city, which is based on a percentage of the total assessment. That city is best off, other things being equal, which has the largest margin of unappropriated borrowing power or line of credit. Not only is the power to borrow restricted to the assessment, but by it is the ability to repay determined. It follows, therefore, that the credit of a municipality in the bond market is materially influenced, because, unquestionably, the real security for a city's debt, of any nature, for interest as well as principal, rests in the assessment for taxation. The greater the assessment, not exceeding actual value, the better will be the demand for debentures, other conditions being favorable."

Belleville, with a debt the great bulk of which has been incurred for public utilities of various kinds, such as the water and gas works, public buildings, schools, sewers, permanent walks, etc., and which debt is being annually reduced by a considerable amount, is yet in no better position in the eyes of investors and as to legal borrowing power than are other places which have little to show in comparison with Belleville for the liabilities that they have incurred.

The following table shows that, with a single exception, namely Guelph, the case of which is exceptionally favorable, Belleville's assessment per head of the population is lower than that of any other city in the province.

	Assessment for taxation.	Assessment per capita for tax'tn.
Guelph	$6,307,680	$426.51

The average is $623.77; Guelph being lowest with $426.51 per capita. All of the cities, with the exception of Port Arthur, $626.09, Toronto $720.28, and Fort William $742.62 are below the average for the whole.

From this it is clearly evident that the whole subject of exemptions should receive the attention of the Legislature and it should also, in Belleville, receive the attention of the City Council.

NATIONAL ECONOMIC WASTE WAS MOST ABLY DISCUSSED

Prof. Lloyd of England, Was Guest of Canadian Club--His Discourse Clear and Well Thought Out--A Dainty Banquet and a Delightful Evening--All Were Impressed With the Country's Future

The attendance at the Canadian Club last evening was not as large or representative that it otherwise might have been owing to other important meeting. The banquet served in Wallace's parlors was very dainty. The lecturer of the evening, Prof. Lloyd, of Cambridge University, took for his theme, "National Economic Waste," and handled the subject with more than ordinary ability. Though youthful like, he is in possession of a penetrating style in his remarks, and delivers his message in clear and well thought out manner. The stable English enunciation grips his hearers in close touch to the issue at hand.

Tracing the history of individual liberty down from the past century, the listener could not help but be impressed with the wonderful heritage meted out to us in this advanced day. Radical changes in laws to lessen human oppression acts towards conserving national resources of forest, stream and proper land production were features of the address. The learned professor contended that scientific forestry would hardly work out to be practicable unless undertaken wholly on a large scale. It was pointed out that much could be done by curbing extravagant use of our timber and in the prevention of great destruction yearly by fire. The depletion of our streams through ineffective game laws, and the education of our agriculturists towards fuller returns possible out of the soil are subjects well worth our study.

Monopoly, aggrandisement and the reflex moral sense of the community need to be carefully guarded.

Altogether, those present could not help being impressed with the significance of our country's future and the responsibility which rests upon us to see that our land measures up to the ideal.

After Mr. C. M. Reid, as President, had conveyed the hearty thanks of the Club to the speaker, and made announcements of the dates of further gatherings, the instructive and pleasing function closed at the customary seasonable hour.

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE

BETWEEN PROMISES AND ACTUAL RESULTS.

Promises won't overcome hair trouble. The manufacturers of Newbro's Herpicide promise nothing which is not justified by an intelligent use of this preparation. The desired end ultimately becomes an accomplished fact. This is the reason that Herpicide has thousands of friends all over the world.

By keeping the scalp clean and healthy and destroying the dandruff germ Newbro's Herpicide makes beautiful hair. Herpicide prevents the hair from falling out and allows it to grow unhindered and naturally except in cases of chronic baldness which is incurable.

One dollar sized bottles are guaranteed by J. S. McKeown to do these things.

Dairymen Conclude Session.

Stratford, Jan. 14.—The Western Ontario Dairymen's Association concluded its best convention Thursday night.

Valentine Stock, M.P.P., Tavistock, warned the dairymen that if reciprocity materializes, they will face the unfair competition of adulterate, low-grade American dairy products.

The new officers are: President, Wm. Waddell, Kerwood; first vice-president, D. A. Dempsey, Stratford; second vice-president, S. R. Wallace, Burgessville; third vice-president, W. S. Stocks, Britton; secretary-treasurer, F. Herns, London; auditors, J. A. Nelles, London, and J. C. Hegler, Ingersoll. Representatives to Western Fair, I. W. Steinhoff, Stratford, and the secretary; representatives to Toronto Exhibition, R. Johnston, Woodstock, and the secretary; directors, the officers and J. N. Paget, Canboro; J. J. Parsons, Jarvis; J. A Legal Mix-Up.

Montreal, Jan. 14.—Two eminent King's Counsel and a young lawyer engaged in a brief fisticuff battle in the police court before Judge Lanctot Thursday. The participants in the scuffle were James Crankshaw, K.C., Horace Hutchins, K.C., and Jimmy Crankshaw. The Crankshaws were prosecuting a girl on a charge of perjury, and Mr. Hutchins was defending her. He offered to make an affidavit himself, and ironically remarked that his learned friend could then go after him for perjury. Mr. Crankshaw replied to the effect that this was not advisable as the Montreal jail was already overflowing.

Mr. Hutchins responded with a righthand swing to Mr. Crankshaw's jaw. He sidestepped. Jimmy Crankshaw then landed a left jolt flush on Hutchins' chin. Subsequently several apologies were tendered the judge by the belligerent lawyers.

Victim of Street Car.

Montreal, Jan. 14.—Jean Labbe, a well-known citizen, 22 years old, a member of the firm of Labbe, Freres, plumbers, was the first victim of the deadly street car here this year. He was struck by an electric street car at the crossing of St. Denis and Blenville streets, at six o'clock Thursday evening, and died a few hours later in the General Hospital. When struck he fell into the fender and was carried along for ten or fifteen feet.

History.

History is made by one set of men and written by another.

The character of the written history depends upon the politics of the historian.

Most histories are written many years after the history was made. In these circumstances no one can step forward and dispute the historian.

History is studied at school and forgotten at home.

We are told to judge the future by the past, and after we read the histories we are as badly muddled as ever.

Some statesmen make history, but most of them make speeches.—Judge.

John O'Groat's House.

John O'Groat's house was formerly situated on Duncansby head, the most northerly point of Great Britain. It took its name from John of Groat, or Groot, and his brothers, who came, it is said, from Holland about 1489. The expression so often heard, "From John O'Groat's to Land's End," means the whole length of Great Britain from north to south, like the other expression, "From Dan to Beersheba," meaning the entire length of Palestine.

Name Became a Verb.

The verb "to wallop," though perhaps a little "slangy," is a perfectly legitimate expression. It comes from the family name of the Earls of Portsmouth. Sir John Wallop, K.G., was Admiral Commander, in the reign of Henry VIII., of the fleet which avenged French raids by burning French ships and twenty-one French villages. This was called in the current talk of the time "Walloping" them, and thus the phrase passed into our language and still survives.

The Pillar Of Light

(BY LOUIS TRACY)

it cannot be. No one would permit it. Father would never give his sanction. Enid, my dear one, why do you say such things? You frighten me!"

But Constance's lips were bloodless, and her eyes dilated with the fear which she, too, would fain deny.

They were perched so high above the sea that the dancing hillocks of green water could not wholly obscure the stoutly built craft which bobbed into startling prominence round the stern of the tender.

"It is, it is!" shrieked Enid. "Look, Connie! There is Jack kneeling in the bow. Oh, dear! oh, dear! Is he mad? Why don't they stop him? I cannot bear to look. Connie, tell me—shall I see him drowned before my eyes?"

The girl was distraught, and her sister was in little bettor plight. Fascinated, speechless, clinging to each other like panic-stricken children, they followed the leaping boat with the glassy stare of those who gaze, open-eyed, at remorseless death.

They scarce understood what was toward.

As the boat, a strong craft, yet such a mere speck of stanch life in the tumbling seas, was steadily impelled nearer, they saw the tug lurch ahead of the other vessels until a line was thrown and caught by Stanhope, who instantly fastened it round his waist. The rowers wore cork jackets, but he was quite unprotected. Bare-headed, with his well-knit limbs shielded only by a jersey, loose-fitting trousers and canvas shoes, he had declined to hamper his freedom of movement with the cumbrous equipment so essential for anyone who might be cast adrift in that dreadful sea.

The girls even in their dumb agony, were fully conscious of a scurry of feet up and down the stairs. What did it matter ? They paid heed to naught save the advancing boat, now deep in the trough of a wave, now perched precariously on a lofty crest. Whoever the rowers were, they trusted wholly to the instructions given by the gallant youth who peered so boldly into the wilderness ahead. The flying foam and high-tossed spray gave to the lighthouse the semblance of alternately lifting and lowering its huge frame amidst the furious torrents that encircled it. Nerves of steel, strong hearts and true, were needed by those who would voluntarily enter that watery inferno.

Yet the men at the oars did not falter nor turn their heads. They pulled evenly and well, with the short, deep-sunken stroke of the fisherman, and Stanhope, now that they were almost in the vortex where the waves lost their regularity, produced a paddle wherewith to twist the boat's head to meet each turn and swirl.

Stealthily the powerful tug-boat crept in the wake of the smaller craft, until it became clear to the girls' strained vision that watchful helpers, lashed in the vessel's bows, were manipulating another rope as a drag, thus helping the sailors' efforts to prevent his frail argosy from being swamped by a breaking sea.

"It doesn't appeal to me in that light. There was a miscalculation about the water. Why not about the food?"

"Because my father went through all the stores personally and portioned them out. Some flour and tinned meat have gone; I am quite sure of it. The question is—who can have taken them. The flour, at least, must have attracted attention if anybody tried to eat it."

"Did you say all that to the purser?" he asked, suspending his labors and looking at her steadily.

"No. We could not remember exactly what proportion of the various articles there ought to be left."

"Then, take my advice, Miss Constance, and keep on forgetting," he said.

A quick flush came into her pale cheeks.

"You are not saying that without good cause?" she murmured.

"I have the best of reasons. If the least hint of such a thing goes round among the men there will be ructions."

Constance went to the door and closed it.

"Enid," she said, "I believe father and Mr. Pyne have got some dreadful plan in their minds which they dare not tell us about."

But the American was not to be cornered in such fashion. He opened the door again and went out, pausing on the threshold to say:

"I wouldn't venture to guess what might be troubling Mr. Brand, but you can take it from me that what he says, goes. Talk about grasping a nettle firmly, I believe your father would grab a scorpion by the tail if he felt that way."

And with this cryptic utterance he quitted them, intending to warn Brand at the first opportunity that the time was at hand when he must harden his heart and take the decisive step of cutting off communication between the service-room and the remainder of the building.

This could be done easily. The flanges of the uppermost iron staircase were screwed to the floor above and below. A few minutes' labor would remove the screws; the steps could be lifted bodily into the service-room and there utilized to seal the well.

"What a howling menagerie will break loose here when they find out," thought Pyne. "It's a hard thing to say, but we ought to have the door open. Quite a stack of folks will need to be pitched outside."

A comforting reflection truly, yet his face bore no token thereof as he joined the lighthouse-keeper and several of the Chinook's officers and men on the gallery.

The wind had shifted another couple of points to the north, and the sea, apart from the reef, was running in a heavy unbroken swell. That was the tantalizing part of it. Any ordinary ship's boat, properly managed, could live in perfect safety in the open.

But the iron-toothed reef, with its totuous channels and battling currents changing with every stage of the tide, surrounded the pillar with an apparently impassable barrier, whilst the lighthouse itself offered as frowning a front as any of the black rocks which reared their weed-covered crests at low water.

Signals were being exchanged between the gallery and the Trinity tender. Brand seemed to be very emphatic in his answers to the communications made to him by Stanhope.

"No, no," he muttered aloud, whilst the anxious man near him wondered why he was so impatient.

"It is utterly impossible!" he said again. "No boat can do it—some one should stop him. It means certain loss of life!"

At last, becoming aware that his companions could not understand what was going on, he turned to them with the passionate explanation.

"That brave fellow Stanhope says that, with two others at the oars, he intends to row near enough to the rock at half flood to endeavor to spring onto the ladder. I cannot persuade him that no man has ever yet succeeded in such a mad project. Look below, and see how each wave climbs around eighteen or twenty feet of the base. The thing is wildly impracticable. He will be swept off and smashed to pieces before our eyes, even if the boat escapes."

"If the boat can come near enough for that purpose, couldn't we heave a line aboard her?" asked one of the ship's officers.

"We can try. I shall signal them to that effect. Anything is better than to sanction an attempt which is foredoomed to failure, and must result in the death of the man who tries it."

Thereupon more energetic flag-waving took place. Finally Brand desisted in sheer exasperation.

"I cannot convince him," he cried. "He has made up his mind. May the Lord preserve him from a peril which I consider to be a mortal one."

"Has he put forward any theory?" asked Pyne. "He was doing a lot of talking."

"Yes," explained Brand. "He believes that a strong boat, rowed to the verge of the broken water, might watch her opportunity and dart in close to the ladder on the backwash of a big wave, allowing its successor to lift her high enough for an active man to jump onto the rungs. The rowers must pull for their lives the instant the wave breaks and leave him clinging to the ladder as best he can. There is more chance of success in that way, he thinks, than in trying to make fast a line thrown by us, even if it fell over the boat. It is all a question of time, he argues, and I have failed to convince him that not only he but his companions will be lost."

"Is there no chance?" inquired the second officer.

"Look below," repeated Brand hopelessly, and indeed, when they obeyed him, craning their necks over the rail to examine the seething cauldron from which the granite tower tapered up to them, no man could say that the lighthouse-keeper deplored Stanhope's decision without good reason.

They understood matters a little better, perhaps, when, one by one, they re-entered the lantern, the Falcon having flitted away to make her final preparations. Brand asked them not to make known the nature of the pending undertaking.

On the rock they were undoubtedly in grave danger. Death confronted them—death at once extraordinary and ghastly. No tyrant of the Middle Ages, with all its paraphernalia for wringing truth or lies out of cringing wretches, had devised such a fate as threatened if the inconstant sea should choose to render the reef altogether unapproachable for many days. Yet, if help came, he and those dear to him were already steeped in unavoidable notoriety, bringing in its train certain vague disabilities which he had striven to avoid for over twenty years.

And all this because one fierce gale, out of the many he had endured, sprang into being at a moment when his mates were incapacitated and his daughters happened to pay him a surprise visit.

FOR A LONG LIFE

Fresh air and exercise, with proper food and a sufficient amount of sleep are the essentials.

Under such a regime or living or living, germs cannot develop and many diseases are prevented.

Should the system require a tonic take only such as you know their ingredietns—such as is Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the health-giving properties of the cods' livers, with all the useless grease eliminated, and tonic iron added, happily blended in a mild, medicinal wine.

For this reason Vinol is regarded as one of the greatest body builders and invigorators for aged people. It invigorates and builds them up and keeps them up.

We sell Vinol with the understanding that if it does not give satisfaction the price will be returned. J. S McKeown, Belleville.

"Night Watch" Is Damaged.

Amsterdam, Jan. 14.—Rembrandt's most famous picture, "The Night Watch," was badly damaged yesterday by a discharge naval cook named Sigrist, who entered the Rijks Museum, and with a knife deliberately slashed the masterpiece.

Sigrist, who was arrested, declared that his vandalism was an act of vengeance against the state, because of his discharge from service in the navy.

The cuts traverse the principal figures of Captain Frans Banning Cocqus' Company of Arquebusters, but experts, who later viewed the work, expressed the opinion that the damage was not beyond repair.

Lost Season's Crops.

Markdale, Jan. 14.—The large barn belonging to F. Johnston was burned to the ground, with all the session's crops, three horses and a number of cattle and pigs, besides all his implements and rigs. There was no insurance, and the loss is probably $4,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The Traveling Triangle.

Kingston, Jan. 14.—Yesterday twenty members of the Ancient Frontenac Cataraqui Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, went to Montreal, to hand over the traveling triangle to Carnaivan Chapter. This triangle was sent out by St. Patrick's Chapter, Toronto, and is going around the world.

Relations between Japan and China are said to be strained. As the news comes through the cable correspondent's sieve, it doesnt bother me much.

HELPLESS CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

Five Boxes Of "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her

4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO, DEC. 15th, 1909.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Rheumatism for nearly a year, and my right arm was swollen and the pain was fearful. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful, and I could hardly move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians but their medicine did me no good, and I tried numerous other remedies but received no benefit. I was simply a helpless cripple and suffered from Rheumatism all during last winter.

I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in "The Telegram" and decided to try this remedy. After I had taken one box, I was much better and the pain less, and I continued the treatment with good hopes. When I had taken three boxes, I was so well that I could use my arm again and the pain was practically gone. After I had taken five boxes, I was entirely well again—no pain—no suffering—and now I am as WELL as I ever was.

The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me of my sufferings.

For the sake of others who may suffer from this terrible disease, Rheumatism, I give you permission to publish this statement."

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy that actually cures Rheumatism, and Sciatica because "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that actually prevents Uric Acid being formed in any quantity in the body. If there is no excess of uric acid in the blood, there can be no Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" keeps the stomach clean—the liver active—the bowels regular—the kidney strong and the skin healthy. These are the organs that rid the body of all waste. When "Fruit-a-tives" so regulates the system that all waste is eliminated, then there can be no waste or "urea" to be changed into uric acid. Thus, there can be no uric acid in the blood, to inflame nerves and cause the pain which we know by the names of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuralgia. "Fruit-a-tives" will cure every trace of Rheumatism, Pain In The Back, Swollen Hands and Feet, and other troubles due to the blood being poisoned by uric acid.

If you are subject to Rheumatism, cure yourself now with "Fruit-a-tives" and be free of pain this winter.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers, or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

"LIKE A CHESSY CAT."

Where Common English Phrases Originated.

Who first gave utterance to some of the popular phrases of to-day it is practically impossible to say, but it is not so difficult to trace the origin of the sayings. Cheshire cats, for instance, are no different from those of other counties, but because Cheshire cheeses used to be made in the shape of cats with fixed, broad grins, the phrase, "Grinning like a Cheshire cat eating cheese," arose.

The phrase, "He's a brick," originated from an eastern ruler, who, while visiting Sparta, asked his host to show him the fortifications. Waving his hands toward his troops, which were drawn up in soldierly array, the Lacedaimonian said to his guest: "These are my fortifications; every man is a brick."

The phrase, "Mad as a hatter," really means as venomous as a viper. "Mad as a hatter" is simply a corruption of an ancient form, "Mad as an atter, or adder." Mad in this case is generally synonymous with poisonous.

The clause "It suits to a T," meaning it fits exactly, is as old as the familiar instrument, the T-square, or T-rule (so called from its resemblance to the letter T), used by mechanics and draughtsmen for making angles true and for obtaining perpendiculars. The expression was in common use in the time of Dr. Johnson, who is quoted by Boswell as saying of Warburton, "You see they have fitted him to a T."

Many people are shocked when they hear the expression so often used, "I don't care a dam." They think it is profane. The word "dam," however, when used with "I don't care," is not in the least profane, and is equivalent to saying, "I don't care two cents." The dam is a two-cent piece current in India, and this phrase is of Indian origin, and was originally used to convey the idea that the user was utterly indifferent. "I don't care a brass button" or "I don't care a cent" are equivalent expressions.

There are two accounts of the origin of the expression "Mind your P's and Q's." According to one, it arose from the early method used in public-houses of charging customers for the amount of beer they had consumed on credit. P stood for pint, Q for quart, and, as the scores were settled weekly, it was necessary for the toper to watch his P's and Q's. According to the other explanation, the phrase owes its origin to the difficulty printers have experienced from time immemorial in distinguishing between the lower-case p's and q's of the Roman type. The similarity between the two letters is so great, particularly when they are reversed, as in the process of distributing, that the printer's apprentice is always warned by the foreman to "mind his P's and Q's."

Comedy of a Sham Fight.

A Birmingham, Eng., man, who is a most enthusiastic Territorial, had quite a remarkable adventure during the recent manoeuvres. He was supposed, writes Looker-On, to be a wounded man, and had been posted at a spot where he was to be picked up later by the ambulance men who followed the force, presumably in pursuit of a defeated enemy. A label had been given to him for the information of the ambulance men, describing his "serious injuries," which consisted of a broken arm, fractured jaw, bullet wounds in both knees; in fact, he was a "terrible case." The ambulance men came along and dressed his "wounds" so effectually that he could neither move legs nor arms; in consequence of the "fractured jaw" his face and mouth were strapped and bandaged so tightly that only his eyes could be seen. This done the men laid him carefully on the roadside for the waggons to pick up later, and they pushed on to the next "case." Before the arrival of the ambulance wagons a motor party passing caught sight of the fearsome object on the roadside and pulled up. In consternation they gazed on the trussed-up man, who, being quite unable to speak for himself, could offer no explanation. They held a consultation, and unanimously decided it was out of the question to leave him on the roadside, so he was carefully lifted into the car and driven to the nearest hospital some fifteen miles away. Explanation soon followed his arrival at the institution, and it was with mixed feelings that the motor party continued their interrupted journey, while the victim of their misplaced concern, with a large parcel of splints, bandages, and other dressings, made their way back to camp to explain his disappearance, which had by then been reported. Needless to say, that same explanation was the source of constant amusement in camp.

Plans For Coronation.

London chroniclers have already discovered that the coronation will draw to London five heirs to thrones.

They have heard also that the Princess Royal and her daughters will winter in Egypt and return after Easter with Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria, who will have a long yachting cruise in the Mediterranean.

The successor to Dr. Jos. Armitage Robinson, Dean of Westminster and adapter of the mediaeval coronation ceremony, may be Archdeacon Wilberforce, who has remained a strong Liberal in politics. Westminster Abbey will be closed for four months during the coronation period.

Neither.

A little city-bred boy who had never seen a cow, while on a visit to his uncle's in the country, walked out across the fields with his grandpa. Seeing a cow, he was greatly excited, and asked:

"What is that, grandpa?"

"Why, that is only a cow," was the reply.

"What are those things on her head?"

"Horns," said the grandpa.

The two walked on. Presently the cow mooed loud and long. The boy was amazed. Looking back he exclaimed:

"Which horn did she blow, grandpa?"

SCHOOL BOARD WIND UP BUSINESS FOR PAST YEAR

Inspector Clarke Presents Two Important Reports --Night School and Other Important Matter Suggested—A Fitting Tribute to the Retiring Chairman of the Board

The final meeting of the Board of Education as constituted for 1910, was held last evening, presided over by Mr. W. S. Morden, chairman. Other members present were Messrs. J. H Anderson, C. F. Sharpe, W. P. Hudson, G. A. Bennett, J. F. Wills, S. S Moore, B. Mallory, W. N. Ponton, F E. O'Flynn, W. S. Smith, P. Harrison J. Wallace and C. M. Reid.

After confirming the minutes a few unimportant coommunicactions were read and referred to committees.

REPORTS.

Inspector Clarke presented a lengthy half-yearly report of his visitations to the public schools of the city. The report showed that in all the schools excepting Grier street the rooms were rather overcrowded. He also referred to the fact that the light in the various schools was faulty. The equipment in the schools was satisfactory as alo the discipline. The total registration of scholars was 1182 and the average attendance was 1023.

The inspector also presented a monthly report for December which showed that the attendance in the public schools for that month was as follows:—Queen Victoria, 473; Octcavio street, 276; Grier street, 140; Pinnacle street, 86; Canifton Road, 111 Station street, 39; total 1125.

He had been spoken to in reference to a night school being established for those who for vadious reasons have had to leave school and desire instruction. If any action is taken in this matter it must come from the Board. It may possibly be that some teacher would take it up as a private venture, with the Board's consent.

The Inspector also referred to the fact that the revised Assessment Act requires the assessor to take the record of children between the ages of 8 and 14 years for the Department of Education's annual report. It might be well to call the attention of the assessor to this requirement.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of the following accounts:

Greenleaf & Son	$30.00
D. Morley	2.00
Wm McGie	15.80
J. W. Walker	14.36
Downey Coal Co.	88.82
McCarthy & Hurley	3.93
Downey Coal Co.	87.10
N. Allen	4.50
The Ritchie Co.,	2.74
C. B. Foster	15.00

On motion the Board went into committee of the whole on reports etc., Mr. W. N. Ponton in the chair

The Finance Committee's report was aropted without discussion.

A motion prevailed that a telluris be provided for Principal Barragar, of Octavia Street school, also six small chairs for the primary division.

A portion of the Inspector's report in reference to the advisabiltiy of establishing a night school was on motion referred to School Management Committee and the Inspector.

The secretary was authorized to notify the city assessor to obtain, according to law, the number of children in the city between the ages of 8 and 14 years.

The committee arose and reported The report was adopted.

MOTIONS

Ponton—Mallory,—That the Board of Education of the City of Belleville ccannot part with their retiring chairman, Mr. W. S. Morden, K. C., without expressing and recording their hearty appreciation of his faithful and fruitful services in the cause of education in Belleville, both as a member and as Chairman of the Board, for the past two years. His own early experience as a teacher and his earnest unremitting work have been of exceptional advantage to the Board and his public spirit as a citizen is worthy of all commendation. Both as chief executive of the Board and in his private capacity as a man for whom we have the highest regard and esteem. We bid him a regretful farewell and wish him and his all prosperity and happiness in the future.

The mover and seonder spoke in a feeling manner of the removal of the Chairman of the Board from the city regretting that his services would not be available.

The motion was adopted by a standing vote.

Mr. Morden, in replying, said he deeply appreciated the motion that had just been adopted. He regretted leaving Belleville and also the Board of Education. He was pleased to state that the past few years the Board of Education had made progress in the matter of education. It had been a pleasure for him to be presiding officer of the Board. He considered that he was a Belleville boy and that he would always be such.

Mr. Bennett moved, seconded by Mr. Moore,—that the matter of the value of the city school buildings, lands, etc., and the placing of insurance upon the same be referred to the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee.—Carried.

The Board adjourned for a few minutes and re-assembled, when the minutes were confirmed. The Board then adjourned sine die, after singing Auld Lang Syne.

ENERGY—THE HUMAN POWER-HOUSE.

This energy continues to manifest itself as electricity. But when it passes on to a less perfect conductor, like carbon, it takes on the wave length of light; and as long as the medium for light is appropriate, energy continues in the wave length of light, even through the period of thousands of years and the space of millions of miles. But when the light comes in contact with another medium, a dark color, then the energy takes on the wave length of heat, and so on forever this energy continues to change its pace of travel and wave length in accordance with the character of the medium through which it passes.

Energy is never annihilated or lost; it manifests itself in different wave lengths, such as electricity, heat, light magnetism, nerve-force, etc.. The medium and surrounding conditions

TRAVERS SAYS GUILTY

Banker Springs a Surprise on Crowd at Trial.

Before a Large Gathering of Financial Men at Toronto Police Court He Admits Forgery and Sentence Is Withheld Until Monday — Crown Had Prepared an Elaborate Case Against Him.

Toronto, Jan. 14.—W. R. Travers, former vice-president and general manager of the collapsed Farmers' Bank and director of the Keeley Mines, Ltd., pleaded guilty to charges of forgery, theft and making false returns to the Dominion Government when arraigned in the police court yesterday morning. Even with the rumor of a plea of guilty current in the streets, the denouement came as something of a shock to the courtroom full of spectators of a weight and prominence not often seen within its dingy walls.

The staging was dramatic, and so arranged that the collapse of the defence at the last moment came as a bolt from the blue. At the close of the regular calendar, detectives and others marched into the courtroom bearing great shoulder-loads of impressive ledgers. The scene was set for an extensive probing, when Magistrate Denison looked up from his own book to remark:

"Now, is Mr. Corley ready to go on in that Travers' case?"

"Yes, your worship," was the reply.

"Which case will you take up first?"

"We will take the general charge, that of making false returns to the Government."

Here H. H. Dewart, K.C., counsel for the defence, interrupted to remark that Travers had not yet pleaded to the second charge, that of theft of $40,000. Crown Attorney Corley added that Inspector of Detectives Duncan had a further charge of forgery of minutes of a directors meeting to add, and this was put upon the calendar.

The charge of theft was then read and Travers was asked to plead.

In answer to the magistrate's question Mr. Dewart remarked quietly: "Upon the advice of counsel, he pleads guilty."

There was a stir in the courtroom, a quick catching of many breaths, and even the magistrate looked up with something of surprise.

"But what does he say himself?" he asked, "perhaps he knows better than his counsel."

"Guilty, sir," said Travers, who stood behind his counsel and directly in front of the magistrate. The whole man was eloquent of weariness. It spoke in the heavy shoulders, bowed as he leaned upon the back of a chair, and from the tired eyes over the heavy flesh pouches of his cheeks.

The magistrate then read the charge newly laid by Inspector Duncan:

"That W. R. Travers did unlawfully make a false document in words and figures. That is to say:

"'The general manager reported the following credits of $5,000 and upwards had been granted since last board meeting, viz., George Wishart and Keeley J. W. Mine —— $50,000.'

"'The general manager explained the formation and interests in the Keeley Mine, which was satisfactory to the board and further advances were authorized if necessary,' with intent to defraud contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided."

Mr. Corley later explained that the final figures in the first and the words of the last paragraph of the quoted minute of a meeting of the bank directors had been altered by a clerk upon the order and at the dictation of Travers.

Travers elected to be tried summarily, and pleaded guilty in the same quiet but husky voice.

Then Mr. Dewart announced that his client desired to withdraw both plea and election on the charge of making false returns, and in this case a plea of guilty was also entered.

Mr. Corley plunged into the reading of a document which he had announced was a statement of the case prepared by the liquidator. The magistrate interrupted.

"Before I can sentence this man," he said, "I must know some of the circumstances surrounding the case."

"No, and you couldn't hear the evidence without understanding these features of the case. I was about to give you the facts," replied the crown attorney.

"No," said the magistrate, and Mr. Corley once more began to read the statement, elaborating its points from time to time.

At the close of Mr. Corley's remarks, Mr. Dewart arose to address the court.

"At the outset," said Mr. Dewart, "I would like to say that rumors that the delays and adjournments in this case were intended to hush up proceedings are absolutely without foundation. Nor is the plea entered by my client intended to stop investigation. Since the adjournment my client and I have had an opportunity of seeing the data in the hands of the crown, and in that way the time of the court was saved. I trust that the statement I am about to make may throw some further light on the unfortunate affairs of the bank."

Mr. Dewart then went on to say that he did not think his client should be made a "scapegoat" for others.

Mr. Dewart wanted the court to remember that already Mr. Travers had offered $500,000 for the Keeley mine, and that if this asset of the bank were not sacrificed, its ultimate sale would go a long way toward preventing any of those connected with the failure from feeling the pinch of distress, if it did not actually provide sufficient to meet all liabilities.

Counsel closed with a plea for mercy. He said:

"He stands here to-day a penniless, broken man, 57 years of age. Seven years is the utmost that you can say, but I think that I can ask for a lesser sentence than that, in view of the circumstances.

"Three years would be more to him than would twenty to a younger man.

"Temper justice with mercy. He suffers more from the humiliation and degradation of this day than he could suffer from any penalty which your worship could impose.

"He has made full acknowledgement of any guilt, and has showed in every way an earnest desire to repair the fortunes of the bank in any transactions into which he may have entered."

Chief Accountant J. G. Fitzgibbon was then called and identified the false entries in the books.

ON GOOD TERMS.

Mrs. Thomas Finton Says There Was No Quarrel With Father-in-Law.

Hamilton, Jan. 14.—The Finton trial is attracting larger crowds every day. At the sessions yesterday morning, afternoon and evening the court room was jammed to suffocation. In the morning the crown concluded its case and the defence had put in several of its witnesses before the adjournment last evening.

Dr. Raspbery of Dundas, a veterinary surgeon, said he saw the pig-trough at the Finton farm, and thought it had not been repaired. There was only one half bright nail in it.

Dr. Thompson, recalled, said he did not notice a scar or a scab on prisoner's index finger. He would not swear there was not a scar.

Governor Ogilvie at the jail said the prisoner had $1,366 when searched. This concluded the case for the crown.

Miss Theresa Dens testified that she worked for the Fintons. On the morning of the tragedy she met Tom driving to Hamilton about 8.30 to 9. Later she saw someone open the door and cough. She identified the cough as that of Elijah Finton.

Mrs. Thomas Finton was then called. She noticed on the Sunday before the death of Mr. Finton that her husband had a rag wrapped around one of his fingers.

Dealing with the reason for her leaving the Finton farm, the witness said that she objected to Mrs. St. Johns being there. She had no quarrel with her father-in-law and never saw anything but the best of feeling exhibited by either Tom or his father towards one another. To Mr. Blackstock she said that she knew that by suddenly leaving the house she was inconveniencing her husband and her father-in-law, who would be left without a housekeeper.

"Now, Mrs. Finton, according to your reasoning, there cannot be any reason why your husband should say that his father treated him like a dog."

The witness hedged for a while and then said "No."

Coals from the overturned locomotive set fire to the wreckage, adding to the horror. Two of the dead were found pinned under the upset engine.

Two Toronto people are among the injured. They are: Mrs. John Shaw, severe scalp wound; John Shaw, carpenter, cut and otherwise slightly injured.

MURDER NEAR BERLIN

Franz Lobinski Is Beaten to Death For His Money.

Neighbor Passing by Home of Wealthy Polish Farmer Finds Latter's Body Tied by Leg to Post and Horribly Mutilated—Tin Box In Which He Kept His Money Found Empty in the Snow—He Lived Alone.

Berlin, Jan. 14.—Murdered for his money was the fate which overtook Franz Lobinski, a seventy-year-old Pole, whose body was found tied to a post in the yard of his late home on the second concession, two miles west of Wellesley Village. His body was horribly mutilated, the head being battered almost beyond recognition. A neighbor named Leyes, passing by the house, made the horrible discovery at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, being attracted by the loud bellowing of cattle. Going in from the road to investigate, he received a nerve-racking shock, upon beholding the body of Lobinski, lying beside a post near the back door, one leg being tied to the post. The body was covered with blood and frozen stiff, indicating that it had lain there all night and possibly all the previous day. The loud bellowing of the cattle was due to their not having been fed.

The tracks of two men were found in the snow, also the tracks of a team of horses. Footsteps led to the front window, but an entrance had evidently been effected by getting Lobinski to open the back door, where he was attacked. The kitchen presented a horrible blood-bespattered scene, and it was apparent that the old man had put up a fight for his life. Outside the door was a still worse spectacle of bloodshed, a pool of blood being frozen there.

It can only be conjectured as to the reason for the body being tied to the post, the most reasonable theory being advanced by High Constable Huber, who came back from the scene of the murder last evening, to the effect that his assailants, apparently thinking they had done for the old man, threw him outside the door, which would account for the pool of blood there, but that he recovered sufficiently to come back at them, whereupon they dragged him to the post by his foot, using a wire. Fifty yards away a blood-covered hammer was found.

There is no question but that the motive for the murder was robbery, as a little tin box, in which Lobinski was known to have kept gold, was found outside in the snow.

When interviewed last night High Constable Huber said that the man Leyes had been the murdered man's confidential adviser, transacting most of his business. Lobinski was worth probably in the neighborhood of ten thousand dollars.

A complete search of the house has been made by the authorities, but among the articles found were a number of personal notes for good-sized amounts which had been held by Lobinski. The old man had often taken a delight in showing gold to people, according to Leyes' story. Since the death of his wife, six years ago, Lobinski had lived alone.

Coroner Gleister of Wellesley was notified in the morning, but could not proceed to empanel a jury as he had not taken the oath of allegiance since the accession of King George. Consequently he had to drive to Berlin, where he was sworn in by Crown Attorney Bowlby, returning to Wellesley towards evening. The inquest consequently will not be held till this afternoon.

Taft Endorses Commission.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Significant progress was made yesterday in the movement for the creation of a permanent tariff commission. Not only did President Taft in an address at the banquet of the National Tariff Commission Association openly endorse the Longworth bill, characterizing it as "a conciliatory measure embodying all the important features that are necessary to make the commission effective," but early yesterday he summoned the Republican members of the ways and means committee to the White House, and urged them to harmonise their differences.

Preparing for Coronation.

London, Jan. 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The aggregate representation of colonial contingents attending the coronation will number 2,000, five per cent. of which will be officers. The contingents will be camped at Alexandra Park. The coronation festivitives begin on June 19 and continue until the 30th.

London hotels have already raised rates. A Canadian, a regular visitor to London, endeavored to engage a room in a hotel on the route of the procession, but was informed prices were ten guineas, where they were ordinarily a guinea.

Postmaster Half a Century.

St. Catharines, Jan. 14.—Alonzo W. Riggins, who for close on to half a century has been deputy postmaster here, died yesterday morning, aged 70. He had served under three postmasters. He was a brother of Magistrate C. S. Riggins of Beamsville, and leaves a widow and two daughters, one of whom is the wife of J. A. McArthur of the National Drug Co. of Toronto.

A Brutal Assault.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 14.—Mrs. Mary Normanzell was brutally assaulted yesterday morning by a thief, who awakened her with a terrible blow on the head. He also choked her and demanded her money. She escaped in her night clothes and bare feet, and rushed across the street for help. The robber did not find any money.

Will Rebuild Church.

Kingston, Jan. 14.—The trustees of the Methodist Church at Verona, destroyed by fire, have decided to build a new edifice at a cost of $15,000.

MAJORITY IS NINE.

Government Is Nearly Caught on a Snap Vote.

Ottawa, Jan. 14.—On a snap verdict the Government's majority was reduced yesterday to nine votes, which is said to be the smallest since 1896. The question arose over a motion to reduce an appropriation of $17,000 for a postoffice at Marieville, Que., which the members of the Opposition denounced as granting large public buildings to small places in the Quebec Province in the hope of affecting votes, while larger and more important places throughout the Dominion were suffering from the need of increasing facilities for postoffice and customs purposes. The amount expended so far is $32,000, and the $17,000 additional is asked from the House. Marieville has only 800 inhabitants. The vote in question stood 43 to 34.

It is interesting to note that while appropriations of $15,000 for a postoffice in Arthabaska was under discussion, Arthur Gilbert, the Nationalist member, remained silent.

Hon. Frank Oliver introduced a bill providing for the creation of a new schedule of forest reserves. Included in it is the reserve on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, the eastern boundary of which will be from the Yellow Head Pass north. Powers are provided for the expropriation of property which may be held by private individuals. Any rights which exist as, for instance, timber limits or leases, will not be interfered with, but patents may be expropriated.

E. N. Lewis (East Huron) introduced two bills, one to make it possible to deport immigrants within four years of their landing in Canada, if found guilty of carrying offensive weapons. The other is to make the acceptance of secret commissions a criminal offence.

W. D. Northrup (East Hastings), drew the attention of the Prime Minister to the fact that the Minister of External Affairs, Hon. Chas. Murphy, had not been sent to Washington to conduct, as such, the negotiations with the U. S. Government. It was proof, he said, that the new Department was not required.

The argument for the negative in the debate between the agriculturists and the manufacturers on the resolutions proposed by the organized farmers' deputation anent lower tariff, reciprocity with the United States, and a general tearing down of the protectionist ramparts was presented to the Government yesterday morning by a deputation of fifty manufacturers, representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and industries generally throughout Canada that would be affected by any trade agreement with the United States involving decreased protection to Canadian manufacturing and industrial interests.

The case for the manufacturers was presented by Mr. T. A. Russell of Toronto, chairman of the tariff committee of the association, succinctly reviewing all the arguments in favor of a steadfast adherence to the policy of adequate protection, pointing out the dangers of opening the Canadian market to competition from the United States under unequal economic conditions, and urging that the Government would be well advised to let well enough alone in the matter of tariff relations with Washington.

"In accepting the proposal to negotiate with the U.S., we were not oblivious to the disparities which existed," said Sir Wilfrid in the course of his reply. "We were aware that the Americans had been longer in business, had a larger population to cater to, and that conditions in the two countries were not identical. I can assure you that Mr. Fielding and Mr. Paterson, our commissioners in the negotiations, have the fact constantly before them that there is not a parity between the two countries. At the same time I cannot, for my part, see that it is impossible to reach some trade arrangement which will not in any way interfere with the manufacturing community of Canada."

New License Board.

Kingston, Jan. 14.—H. W. Richardson, R. Easton Burns and J. P. Henley have been appointed license commissioners for Kingston. The old commissioners were: Andrew McMahon, George Hentig and James Mallen. It is hinted that people were dissatisfied with the action of the board, in cutting off the license of the Ottawa Hotel and demanded a change, and that the Ontario Government saw the necessity of making new appointments.

Pretty Hard Luck.

Kingston, Jan. 14.—With both hands frozen, feet almost frozen and suffering from hunger, Lawrence Perrin, a former batteryman, arrived in the city yesterday, having walked most of the way to Toronto with a car of horses, and says that when he got to Toronto the man who hired him skipped out without paying him, and left him penniless. He then started out to tramp home.

American Perfidy.

London, Jan. 14.—The Daily Graphic, in an editorial, assuming with regard to the fortification of the Panama Canal that President Taft "proposes to ignore other nations' treaty right," indignantly asks whether Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, has been dumb in the face "of this scandalous proposal to trample on solemn treaties."

Chairman of Interstate Commission.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Judson C. Clements of Georgia was elected chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, to succeed Judge Martin A. Knapp of New York, at a special conference of the commission held yesterday. Mr. Clements is the senior member of the commission, and is a Democrat.

Rotten Eggs.

Montreal, Jan. 14.—Concerted efforts are being made by the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association and the Montreal Board of Trade with the Toronto Board of Trade to secure legislation making it a legal as well as a moral crime to sell rotten eggs.

The Duke of Connaught has also appointed his private secretary. He will be Arthur F. Sladen, who is at present private secretary to Earl Grey, the present Governor-General.

KING GEORGE RISES EARLY

His Cup of Coffee and Rolls are Taken to His Room Shortly Before Seven

King George, since he came to the throne, has surprised those about him with the rapidity with which he works and the quickness with which he can make himself the master of any document or state paper that is put in front of him. The late King was deliberate in his methods, and liked to consider every point with the greatest care. The present King, on the other hand, takes everything at top speed, but there is nothing that misses his eye. He is naturally a rapid thinker, and possesses a wonderfully retentive memory.

He is a very early riser, and, whether he is staying at York Cottage, Windsor Castle, or Buckingham Palace, his cup of coffee and roll and butter are taken to his room a little before seven. By eight o'clock he is seated at his desk, and is going through the papers that have accumulated from the previous day. He reads carefully every letter that reaches him, no matter how humble the source; and when he has finished it he pencils a few instructions upon it and places it in one of the red morocco leather despatch-boxes that stand in front of him.

There are many papers, of course, that cannot be dealt with by the King in a moment or two, and these are placed on one side for more careful consideration. Between ten and eleven in the forenoon communications from the Prime Minister and the heads of the various government departments reach the King, and by this time his two most trusted advisers, Lord Knollys and Sir Arthur Bigge, are at his elbow ready to advise him. It is stated about the court that among the last words of the late King to his son on his death-bed were, "Trust Knollys," and to this King George has steadily adherred. He does not maintain that regular and voluminous correspondence with the heads of foreign Powers that King Edward did during his reign, but his letter-bag, day by day, is of very considerable dimensions.

Practically the whole of the King's work is done in the morning, and he contrives to keep his afternoon's free for recreation of one form or another. The evening, however, finds him back at work again, glancing through the matters that have been submitted for his consideration during the day, as he likes to have everything clear before he retires for the night.

HELENE ODILON

At one time Germany's foremost actress, who has become a dramatic authoress. She is collaborating with the well-known dramatist Otto Behrende and their play, it is said, is based on the experiences of Madame Odilon. As she has had a very sensational career, great interest is manifested in the first production.

PREPARING FOR HOME RULE

Early Duty of Cabinet Will Be Appointment of Committee

A London correspondent writes: "One of the Cabinet's earliest duties after their reassembly will be to appoint committees for drafting an Electoral Reform Bill and a Home Rule Bill, and it is recognized that the preparation of the latter Bill will prove by far the more difficult task. The Prime Minister and Lord Morley of Blackburn are the only two members of the Cabinet who fully realize this from personal experience, and they have a lively recollection of all the troubles involved at a succession of Cabinet Councils in the late autumn of 1892 in crystallizing into acceptable clauses the platform pledges that had been given on Gladstonian Home Rule. The plans of Mr. Gladstone embodied in the Bills of 1886 and 1893 are acknowledged now on all hands to be dead; but what is not so generally perceived is that the present Government have never laid any Home Rule plan of their own before the country. It may be believed, indeed, that they have never thoroughly considered one among themselves; and the projected committee of the Cabinet on the subject, therefore, will have to take up the work de novo, and their labors will be far from light.

SOUTH AFRICA A SOLID UNION

The Duke of Connaught Recounts His Impressions on the Newest of British Federations

The Duke of Connaught, upon his return from South Africa, made the following statement regarding the consolidation of the English and Dutch races:

"I consider that the Union is solidly based, and that its establishment holds out great promise for the prosperity of the land comprised within the four amalgamated Colonies. That there should have been sacrifices of local interest was inevitable, but I trust that what the Union has taken away with one hand it may repay abundantly with the other.

"That the Union should be established without a number of minor dissensions and without political strife was unlikely, but it is really remarkable how far the Union has already become a reality and not a name only. This is in a large measure due to the action of the members of the Houses of Parliament, who have dealt with many important matters, particularly the education question, in a way calculated to placate both great political parties.

"The two races whose interests were for generations opposed have settled down with the firm intention of working together. It is impossible that there should never be questions in which the line of cleavage of opinion lies between those two races, but with the mutual respect which exists between English and Dutch there is no reason why racial disagreements should not steadily diminish until those two great racial descriptions are merged in the appellation of South Africa."

A MODEL AIRSHIP

For Twenty-Six Years G. Daw, Southampton Row, Has Been Pegging Away at It

In Southampton Row, one of the principal thoroughfares of London, the passer-by will observe on fine days an elderly gentleman standing guard over a model airship.

For twenty-six years Mr. G. Daw has been pegging away at perfecting an airship that will have the advantage of travelling with a crew of three against a wind of unusual velocity. His model is perfect in every detail and quite capable of demonstrating its originator's theories.

Instead of being fashioned cylindrically, the portion of the airship enclosing the envelope is made shallow, very broad, and with a sharp cutting edge. The wind in every way is cleaved, and it is claimed to be decidedly superior to those airships fashioned on other lines.

To build the airship will cost about $10,000, but the inventor possesses only a couple of thousands, and is now trying to collect the remainder from interested spectators.

SENSATIONAL RUNS OF LUCK

One of the Latest "Wins" at Monte Carlo is Darnbrough, who Made $320,000

Now and again one hears authentic instances of large sums having been won at the gaming-tables at Monte Carlo.

One of the most fortunate players at Monte Carlo for a considerable time past has been Mr. W. Darnbrough, whose exploits figured in the newspapers a few days ago.

A Fortune in a Month

According to one of the London dailies he left with $320,000 in his pockets, as the result of a month's stay and play. But this did not represent all Mr. Darnbrough's winnings.

To go a little into details, on the opening day of his play he staked $6,000, and won all along the line. Emboldened by this success, he continued playing, winning again and again with marvellous luck.

At one period his credit balance amounted to no less than $465,000, but from this point Dame Fortune ceased to smile upon him. He steadily lost from $60,000 to $80,000 per day, until, recognizing that luck had turned against him, he had sufficient strength of mind to turn his back on the tables and strike for home with the very substantial winnings that still remained.

On another occasion a certain well-known member of the London Stock Exchange was said to have walked off from Monte Carlo with little short of $200,000. This remarkable performance occasioned no small amount of excitement in the rooms, as such an unusual incident invariably does.

Bent on embarking in more or less of a "plunge," he went from one table to another, placing the maximum on the same number. Marvellous to relate, at each table this number came up.

The Man Who Broke the Bank

Recognizing that perhaps this might be his lucky day, the fortunate player wended his way to the gaming room and put the maximum on three of the tables there. To his amazement he found that at each he had selected the right color.

According to one of the head croupiers, this was the worst day that the rooms had had for some time. He gave it as his opinion, too, that what the London stockbroker had netted by his spirited play was little less than the amount above mentioned.

One of the most successful players at the Monte Carlo tables was Wells, who, according to the once popular music-hall song, "broke the bank" there. He was at the zenith of his fame about twenty years ago, when his doings—and winnings—were widely talked about and envied.

In ten days he was said to have made upwards of $200,000 at the tables after starting with so modest a capital as $2,000. It must not be forgotten, however, that Wells denied this at his trial, stating that all he made was $35,000 at three or four consecutive sittings. Even then he claimed to have in the end run out a loser.

The reader can take his choice of the two statements; but amongst frequenters of the rooms at Monte Carlo it is generally considered impossible to amass large winnings without risking large stakes. Even then the chances are a thousand to one in favor of the bank.

Yet there undoubtedly are occasionally wins running into four or five figures.

CINEMATOGRAPH DUEL

French Editors Fight While an Operator Takes Pictures of a Real Encounter

In the favorite duelling ground of Paris—the enclosure surrounding the Great Wheel—an encounter took place on Boxing morning between two well-known Paris journalists—M. de Jouvenal, editor of the "Matin," and M. Marcel Hutin, editor of the "Echo de Paris." The duel was provoked by an alleged offensive letter which M. de Jouvenal received from M. Hutin after an incident in the lobby of the Chamber of Deputies.

An announcement that nobody would be allowed to see the duel—which, by the way, had been announced several days previously—naturally made everybody anxious to be present, and accordingly when the encounter began there was quite a crowd of the ordinary public, pressmen, photographers, and even a cinematograph operator present.

The principals were not expert swordsmen, and the seconds seemed to be in the most danger from the glittering weapons. What advantage in skill there was rested with Jouvenal, who touched M. Hutin on the chest, and for a moment everybody was afraid that he had really been hurt. The seconds, however, intervened in time, rushed forward and tore open his shirt, and found that he was not scratched.

At the fourth engagement M. de Jouvenal succeeded in scratching M. Hutin's forearm, and the battle was over. The two men were reconciled, and embraced each other before leaving the ground.

MILLIONS OF SNAILS

A plague of snails on the coast of Ceylon is assuming serious proportions. Millions of snails are to be found, and some of them weigh as much as a pound. The snails have begun feeding on the young cocoanut trees, and it is feared that they may attack the young rubber trees.

A Christmas Stocking

It Brought an Unexpected Message of Good Cheer

By LUCY K. WYNKOOP

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"De chil'en is gittin' big enough to understand about Christmas now, and I reckon we better git some toys fo' 'em. Tommy is five yea's old, and Pinkey is nearly fou'. De gen'leman what visit de house las' month gib me some money fo' takin' keer ob his horse, and we kin spend it fo' a fust class Christmas."

"And de lady what was wid him gib me money fo' washin' some lace clothes. We kin hab a fine Christmas this yea'. Missy Alice done tole me she goin' gib us a turkey."

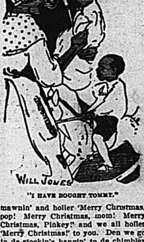
This conversation occurred between Ben and his wife, Sue, a young couple who were slaves on a plantation in Virginia. The time was a week before Christmas, and preparations were being made both by the whites and by the colored people to celebrate the day. From that moment Ben and Sue spent all the time they were allowed for themselves planning to give their children the first Christmas they had ever known or at least could appreciate. The last Christmas little Tom was ill, and his father and mother were hourly expecting him to be taken away from them by death. That he had been spared to them and was now in good health added zest to their preparations to make the coming celebration the Christmas of their lives. Ben secured a rocking horse for Tommy and smuggled it into the cabin when the children were asleep. Sue bought a doll with a fine china head for Pinkey and made the clothes for it herself. Besides the gift of the turkey, a lady living on a neighboring plantation gave them a whole mince pie for their Christmas dinner. A few little things might be expected from the church.

Every night when Ben came home from work Tommy would run out to meet him, and the father would take his child up in his arms and say:

"Christmas comin', honey."

"Wha's Kismas?" the boy would ask with shining eyes, knowing that it was something enjoyable, but ignorant of its nature.

"Christmas is de day de blessed Lord was bo'n. Fust yo' wake up in de mawnin' and holler 'Merry Christmas, pop! Merry Christmas, mom! Merry Christmas, Pinkey!' and we all holler 'Merry Christmas!' to you. Den we go to de stockin's hangin' to de chimbley and see what Santa Clause brung fo' de chil'en. And we take 'em out and gib yo' you's and Pinkey hers. Den we hab a fine dinner ob turkey and stuffin' in it and mince pie, and yo' chil'en play wid yo' toys all day. Won't dat be fine?"



"I HAVE BOUGHT TOMMY."

And the boy would share his gratification by tightening his arms about his father's neck and covering his face with kisses.

The preparations went on and the anticipations continued to rise till the day before Christmas. Then Ben surprised Sue by coming to the cabin an hour earlier than usual, and the moment she looked at him she knew that something terrible had happened. His face had taken on that sickly hue which in the colored race corresponds to pallor in the whites. He came in and threw himself face down on the bed.

"Oh, Ben," cried his wife, "what is it?"

There was no reply.

"Tell me, Ben! Do tell me what's de matter."

"Tommy's sold."

The mother dropped as if she had been shot. Ben had been told the news by his master and sent home to break it to the wife and mother. Colonel Torrance, the planter, had for some time intended to get rid of some of the children he owned. He had no idea of doing so at this Christmas season, but a trader had come along, had made an offer of $300 for Tommy, and his master had concluded to accept it.

The southern gentleman planter was usually a kind man, whose slaves were fond of him. But a slave was a chattel representing a certain sum of money, and a thrifty owner would naturally make the most of his capital. Colonel Thomas was one of this class. He disliked to separate families, but under the system of slavery it at times became to his interest to do so. And what was his interest he considered his duty to himself and his family.

Ben, hearing his wife fall, sprang up and took her limp body in his arms and laid it on the bed. Just as she came to herself the children toddled into the room and Tommy, seeing that something was the matter, began to cry. This started his sister. The two went to the mother, who, seeing her boy, arose and with a moan took him in her arms.

"Oh, what a Christmas eve!" wailed the father.

There was a rap at the door.

"Don't come in heah!" cried the mother fiercely. "Yo' shan't take ma boy! I'll kill him befo' I'll let him be taken away from his mother!"

Nevertheless, the door was opened. The face of a young girl appeared.

"What do you mean, Sue? I haven't come to take your boy. I've come to bring you the turkey for Christmas. Here it is." And she held up a four pound bird.

"Oh, Missy Alice," said the father, "we don't want no turkey. Dey ain't no Christmas fo' us. De Lawd hab struck us down. Mars' done sold Tommy to a trader, and de trader gwine take him down souf. Take de turkey away, Missy Alice. We ain't got no use fo' it."

The visitor, Alice Wharton, was a girl of twenty, whose face bespoke the kindliness of her nature. But over kindliness triumphed indignation.

"It is brutal!" she exclaimed.

The mother continued to moan. Several times Alice essayed to speak words of comfort, but her lips refused to say what was untrue. There was no comfort for her to speak. Colonel Torrence prided himself upon his strength of will to do whatever he considered it to be his duty. He had had such unpleasant episodes in his life before and had never shrunk from carrying out his plans. Alice took the hand of the father in one of hers, the mother's hand in the other, pressed them, and with the words, "God help you," turned and left the cabin.

It was, as Ben had said, a melancholy Christmas eve. Little Tommy was put to bed early, his mother lying beside him. On the morrow he would pass out of their lives.

It was near midnight when there came a rap at the door. Ben arose and opened it. A boy stood in the opening, but he was as black as the night and consequently invisible. Ben heard a voice say:

"Missy Alice tole me to tote yo' de stockin' fo' to hang up on de chimbly. She sais she done tole Santa Claus to bring somepin nice fo' Tommy."

Ben felt a stocking shoved into his hand, heard the departing footsteps, closed the door, hung up the stocking and returned to bed.

When it began to be light Tommy, who did not know that anything had occurred to interfere with Christmas, shouted:

"Merry Christmas, pop! Merry Christmas, mom! Merry Christmas, Pinkey!"

The only reply he received from his parents was a sigh. They lay for a while, dreading to get up. It was Christmas day, but the day as well that their little boy was to be taken from them. Finally Ben, urged by the children, arose and uncovered Tommy's rocking horse and Pinkey's doll. He glanced at the stocking Miss Wharton had sent, but, seeing that it gave no more sign of contents than when he had hung it up the night before, paid no further attention to it. But Sue, with a woman's inclination for investigation in such matters, took it down, put her hand into it and pulled out a bit of paper. This she opened, and on it in large printed letters that she and Ben could read was written:

Merry Christmas! I have bought Tommy. ALICE WHARTON.

The father and mother looked at each other for a moment before the full meaning of the words penetrated their brains; then, taking the two children in their arms, all were united in a single embrace.

In a twinkling all was changed. Miss Wharton now being the owner of Tommy, his parents knew well that he would never be separated from them. The girl was beloved by the colored people, both her father's slaves and those on other plantations, for she devoted all her time to ministering to them. She had a little money of her own, and as soon as she knew of Tommy's sale went to the trader, offered him a good profit on his purchase, it was accepted, and the boy passed into her ownership.

As soon as Ben and Sue felt assured that Miss Wharton had arisen they started for her home to hear the good news from her lips and thank her for having been the means of sparing them a suffering worse than their child's death. She met them with a smile not less happy than their own. Ben tried to speak his thanks, but failed. Sue then tried, but did not get very far before she broke down in tears.

And so it was that the Christmas which came so near being a day of agony was saved to this humble family by an angel of mercy. The children enjoyed the toys and the turkey and the mince pie. But there was in their parents that which did not come of several things, for theirs was a great comfort of the soul. That which they held most dear had been taken on Christmas eve and returned on Christmas morning.

Tommy remained for several years with his mother, it being his owner's intention to give him free papers as soon as he was of an age to take care of himself. But before that time came around a great change had come over the colored people of the south. It was reserved for another to give Tommy his freedom. Abraham Lincoln one day wrote his name, and all the slaves were free.

The Lady or the "Tiger?"

"Will you be my wife?"

"This is so sudden!"

"I know it, but will you?"

"I must have time to consider."

"How much time?"

"An hour. Would the suspense drive you frantic?"

"Nope. 'Tisn't the suspense, but if you are going to turn me down I want to know it and get away in time for a poker party I have halfway promised to join."—New York World.

Not at All Private.

In the trial of a case recently in one of the English courts a witness was asked to repeat a conversation that she had with her husband. Objection was made that the question should not be answered because the conversation was private in its nature. The judge then asked the witness whether anybody except herself and husband was present. She replied that her mother and the husband's mother were, whereupon the judge remarked: "It appears that both mothers-in-law were present. I shall therefore rule that the conversation was public."

PARIS NIGHT DANGERS

"It is humiliating to admit," says M. Achille, a member of the Paris Municipal Estimates for 1911, "that in the twentieth century the security of Parisians is scarcely better assured than it was in the days when the watch was given a drubbing every night. Respectable citizens shut themselves up closely in their houses, leaving the purse-snatchers and brigands masters of the streets. Do not accuse me of exaggerating; rather read over the columns of the press devoted to the numerous robberies committed daily in the heart of Paris, to the burglaries of unheard-of audacity, and to the frequent murders—many of them unpunished—as well as to the innumerable strikes, the mysterious sabotages, and anarchy everywhere."

HIS LAST TOAST

A wedding at Berwick on Boxing Day was followed by a tragedy. At the breakfast the bridegroom's father, Mr Thomas MacKenzie, sixty-nine, Quay Master of North Shields, rose to propose the health of the bride and bridegroom, when he fell back suddenly and died.

THE BELTED PLAID.

This Was the Original Dress of the Scottish Highlander.

The original dress of the highlander was the belted plaid. This was a piece of tartan cloth, two yards broad and four long, which was drawn around the waist in nicely adjusted folds and tightly buckled with a belt. The lower part came down to the knees in much the same manner as the modern kilt, while the upper part was drawn up and adjusted to the left shoulder, so that the right arm might be perfectly free. This upper part was the plaid, which was used as a covering for the shoulders and body in wet weather, and when the use of both arms was required it was fastened across the breast with a brooch, often curiously enriched. A brooch was also used to fasten the plaid on the left shoulder. To attire himself in the belted plaid required on the part of the highlander no small amount of dexterity. The usual way was to lay it on the floor and after carefully arranging the folds to lie down upon it and then buckle it on. The lower end was fastened at the right hip. The utility of such a dress in the highlands is obvious, for the plaid rendered the man indifferent to storms and prepared to pass a night in the open air in the most inclement weather, while the loose undergarment enabled him to wade rivers or ascend mountains with equal ease. It was thus peculiarly adapted to the warrior, the hunter and the shepherd.—London Mail.

It Might Have Happened Otherwise.

An old Pennsylvania German living in the mountains had a hard three hours' dusty walk to accomplish one morning, and he arose very early to make his start. He had gone but a little way when he was overtaken by an automobile, which was probably the first that had ever passed along that way. The driver picked up the old man, and they were at his destination in about twenty minutes.

"Danks so much awfully mit de ride. If I had known myself to be here already two hours in front of de clock yet I vud be at home fast asleep already to start unless I knew you vud not have picked me up since."—Housekeeper.

A PRINCE'S HOUSELOLD.

James I.'s Son Had an Establishment With 400 Servants.

Now, when the titles, styles, and appanage of the young Prince of Wales are coming into such prominence, it is interesting to notice how, in the seventeenth century, another Prince of Wales set up housekeeping, says Modern Society.

He was Henry, the eldest son of our first Stuart King, the Scottish James, whose ideas of royal state had hitherto been limited by the grim walls of such castles as Stirling and Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Falkland, and their like. But now—the master of Windsor, Greenwich, Whitehall, and half a score of other kingly abodes—James Stuart shook out his feathers and felt himself indeed a monarch.

One of his first cares was to create his boy Prince of Wales and a Garter Knight, and to install him in St. James' Palace, with his own household, stables, and guards — a Court second only to his own in stateliness. The household consisted of more than four hundred persons, over whom, child as he was, Henry ruled with a decorum and graceful kindliness that made him both the pride of his courtiers and the darling of the populace.

The palace itself was then pretty much as it is to-day, although its immediate surroundings were so vastly different. Henry VIII. had built it upon the site of a monastery and hospital for lepers which had stood in the "Westminster meadows." Here, with Holbein's help, he built "a magnificent and goodly house," which he presented to his second bride, Anne Boleyn, during the brief season of her ascendancy over his heart and purse. The initials H. and A. can still be seen entwined with a true-lover's knot on the fire-place of the old Presence Chamber of the palace.

The young Prince of Wales had a country-house at Bramshill, down in the Berkshire woods, and he had his own suite of rooms in Theobalds, another of his father's palaces. But St. James' was his real and best-loved home. Here he lived and here he died—"the handsomest in body, the knightliest in minds of all the Stuart race."

It is idle to speculate how different our history might have been had this kingly boy lived to fill the English throne in place of his brother Charles, whose reign was so disastrous; but it is interesting to picture him in the old Tudor palace, riding forth through the gateway we moderns know so well, his hawk on wrist, his hounds careering at his horse's heels—for there were herons in the Chelsea marshes and wild duck among the reeds of Battersea; and plover and partridges could be shot in the lonely land beyond the Tyburn stream and in the fields outside the mulberry gardens on the road to the village of Kensington.

There were deer in the royal park of Hyde, but King James kept these for his own hunting; and although he adored his son, every sportsman can see the jealousies and reserves that come cropping up when game is in question!

Prince Henry quite understood. He contented himself with the fur and feather of the open country, and left the royal stags in Hyde Park for the days when the King invited him to join the hunting party. There was good sport to be had in the country west of London City in the Stuarts' days.

Depend on Rain Water.

Bermuda is a cameo set in liquid opal. Within the fringe of outlying reefs the water is mottled by the tints of the ledges and sea growths beneath it. This opal effect comprises all the water immediately surrounding the crescent-shaped chain of islands. Seen from one of the heights of the islands Bermuda is an intaglio for from every height surrounded by the sea the water at a little distance looks higher than the land. The intaglio seems carved with picturesque irregularity.

Bermuda is one of the cleanest inhabited spots in the world. There is no level ground there, every shower flushes the islands into the bays and the outgoing tides carry the rain sweepings to sea. The dust is so heavy that except in a stiff breeze it doesn't rise as high as the roofs of the low buildings and it never reaches the higher grounds where sit the picturesque villas of the winter residents.

There are no fresh water springs in Bermuda. The islands depend for drinking water upon rain caught on the roofs. It is as clear as spring water and it never has any bad effect on tourists. The ice, frozen artificially from the rain water, is used freely in the water drunk, for it is as clear as the rain itself.

The cement roofs for catching water are a feature of Bermuda. Almost every building has one. They show as white patches amid the verdure of the hillsides and add to the cameo like appearance of the towns and their surroundings. Even the roofs of the churches are designed to catch water.

Puzzles In Weights and Measures.

The weights and measures used in the Old Country are confusing to very many more than foreign visitors. Home men are frequently at a loss in making up their reckoning when they chance to be considerably afield in a strange district.

Some butchers and cattle dealers of the old school still calculate by the Dutch stone of 17 1-2 pounds. London men keep by the stone of 8 pounds, but in many parts of England, notably in the southern counties, the score of 20 pounds is adhered to in making out weights of farm animals.

HAVE STATE PAY ALL PHYSICIANS

Professor Moore, of Liverpool, Proposes to Establish a National Medical Service

To have the State pay all doctors' bills in the United Kingdom is the rather startling idea of Professor Benjamin Moore, of the Liverpool University. He proposes to substitute a national medical service for the present system "whereby a mob of 32,000 sweated and underpaid British doctors in private practice earn on an average less than $1,200 a year. An interesting point is that Professor Moore regards the foreshadowed legislation for invalidity insurance and Poor Law reform as a step towards his ideal of a national medical service. He estimates that for an expenditure of less than $50,000,000 a year for ten years the eradication of consumption, producing an annual saving of $105,000,000 to the nation, could be guaranteed. From the point of view of the medical profession, as well as the nation, Professor Moore makes out an attractive case for his scheme. The State would employ the 32,000 doctors at an annual average pay of $1,500 a year, total cost about $50,000,000 per year. They would no longer be sweated (as he says they are) by the friendly societies, tontines, etc., and their quarterly cheque from the State would relieve them of the annoyance and waste of time in sending out bills and hunting up debts, and allow them more leisure to keep in touch with the rapid progress of medical science. From the public point of view, he suggests that the gain would be immense.

IRISH LABORERS

Many of Them Go to England and Scotland Because of Better Wages and Conditions

"The question of the employment and carriage of Irish agricultural laborers in Great Britain is one of direct interest in connection with the study of agricultural work and wages in Ireland," says a report issued recently by the Department of Agricultural and Technical Instruction for Ireland.

Approximately 20,500 migratory laborers went for temporary employment to England and Scotland in 1909, as compared with 22,500 in 1908.

The low rate of wage for such labor in Ireland as compared with England has the effect of draining Ireland of labor. "The remedy for this state of affairs," says the report, "can only lie in one direction, namely, the making of as good a career for the agricultural laborer in Ireland as there is for him in England and Scotland.

"The question of the supply of labor is of fundamental importance in the present situation of Irish agriculture. There are in Ireland more than 165,000 holdings of over 30 acres in extent, occupying three-fourths of the total area of the country, and if the future of tillage on this very large proportion of the land of Ireland is to be safeguarded there must be an improvement in the work and wages of the laborer on this land."

PRODUCTION OF GOLD

More Than One-half of the Precious Metal is Produced in the British Empire

In Great Britain there occurs gold-bearing quartz in several districts, notably in Cornwall, the Highlands, and Wales. There is a regular gold-mine in operation on the banks of the River Mawddach, near Barmouth. It is worthy of note that gold is found only in the oldest rocks in this country, and could never be expected in the clays, gravels, or chalks of the South of England. At present the two great gold producing countries of the world are South Africa and Australia; gold is also found largely in the United States of America, Japan, the Ural Mountains, India, Ceylon, and Burmah. Also there is gold from one end of the Rocky Mountains in Alaska—the Klondike neighborhood—to the isthmus of Panama. The Andes, from the extreme north to the southern extremity of South America, are also auriferous. The richest deposits are, however, within the bounds of the British Empire, which produces more than one-half of the gold marketed every year.

CONSUMPTIVES FOR THE NORTH

Sir Ernest Shackleton Thinks Spitzbergen a Good Health Resort

Sir Ernest Shackleton, who got nearer to the South Pole than any other explorer, has declared his intention of visiting Spitzbergen this summer. He further voices the opinion that it would be a good thing if a sanitorium for consumptives could be established in the polar regions. A two months' stay amid the ice and snow of Spitzbergen would do wonders for a person suffering from lung and chest troubles, declares Sir Ernest. He points out that Arctic air is absolutely pure, and beneficial to all chest complaints.

SARDINES IN FRANCE

Interesting statistics on the French sardine industry show that there are 200 canning factories on the French coast engaged in canning the fish; 14,000 women prepare the fish as they come from the nets, and 2,500 men are employed in canning them. The average annual production of tinned sardines is 20,000 tons. About 12 lb. of tin is used on every 100 square yards of sheet iron from which the tins are made.

People seldom realize what a good time they are having until it is all over.

Many a man is kept busy acquiring the things he doesn't want.

The sting of defeat lasts longer than than the sweets of victory.

KING GEORGE AND THE PRESS

His Majesty Inquires as to Arrangements being Made for them at the Coronation

King George evidently does not harbor any ill feeling against the press, for although the Coronation is nearly six months off, he has already inquired as to what arrangements are being made for the convenience of the press representatives on Coronation Day, adding that he remembers that they were rather badly handicapped at his father's coronation through lack of suitable accommodation.

As a result of the King's interest in the matter a well-known journalist has been placed in charge of the press arrangements, and as soon as he has mapped out his plans, he has been commanded to attend an audience at Buckingham Palace to lay his scheme before the King, who has further intimated that he wants the representatives of foreign newspapers to enjoy the same privileges as their English colleagues. A representative of the London Society of Foreign Journalists has, therefore, been appointed to co-operate with the English newspaper man in charge.

The whole of Westminster Abbey is to be closed to the public from about the middle of February, and will then be handed over by the Cathedral authorities to the Office of Works, which will then arrange for the necessary seating accommodation. At the coronation of King Edward seats for about seven thousand people were provided in the Abbey, but the number will have to be increased upon this occasion, since King George has expressly intimated that he desires room to be found for the members of the House of Commons and their ladies, and seats for these will probably be provided by the erection of galleries in the Edward the Confessor Chapel. Under any circumstances the accommodation will be taxed to the utmost, and many of those who receive the much-coveted "commands" will find themselves unable to obtain anything like a complete view of the entire ceremony. The sham Gothic annex to the Abbey, which was built for the last coronation, will be erected again. This acts as a convenient space in which the lengthy procession can be marshalled; while provision is also made for retiring-rooms for the King and Queen and the Royal Princes who will attend on this occasion.

THE ROYAL GEORGE

The Disaster Which Occurred to the Namesake of the New Battleship

The fact that one of the new battleships is to be named the "Royal George" reminds one of that former "Royal George" and the disaster which occurred to her, well known by reason of Cowper's poem, "Toll for the brave." The story of the terrible calamity will probably interest readers.

Making Ready

In 1782 Britain was in a more humbled state than she had been for a century. The wars with America, and France, Spain and Holland, had exhausted her resources, and there was seen the unusual spectacle of a French fleet menacing the coasts. It was at this period that a calamity occurred which resulted in the loss of the first ship in the navy. At Portsmouth a fleet was beng prepared for the relief of Gibraltar, then besieged by Spain, and one of the ships destined for this expedition was the "Royal George," of 108 guns. She was the oldest first-rate in the service, having been laid down in 1751. Lord Anson, Lord Rodney, and Admiral Boscawen had commanded in her often, and Lord Hawke commanded in her the squadron which fought the French under Conflans. Before she could sail it was deemed necessary that the "Royal George" should undergo a careening—that is, an inspection and repair of those parts under water. If time had not pressed she would have been towed into dock for this purpose. As the case was, it was resolved that she should be laid over on her side, as usual when a slight careening was required, in calm weather and smooth water. So little was any difficulty or danger apprehended that the admiral, captain, officers and crew, amounting to about 900, remained on board, and in addition there were about 300 women and children, relations of the seamen. Neither guns, provisions, nor water were removed.

The Catastrophe

Early in the morning of August 29 the work was begun. The ship was made to incline in the water so as to expose her lower timbers, but as a leak was discovered it was necessary to heel her over still farther, in order to get at it. About ten o'clock a.m., while Admiral Kempenfelt was in his cabin writing, and the larger number of the people were between decks, a sudden squall threw the ship clean over on her side, and as her portholes were open she filled and sank at once. The Admiral, several officers, and, in fact, about a thousand people were drowned altogether, some three hundred being saved, among them Captain Waghorne. The calamity was universally lamented, not so much for the ship as for the number of lives lost, more especially Kempenfelt, as he was one of the first naval officers of the world. (His father was the Captain Sentry of the "Spectator.") A large sum of money was publicly subscribed for the relief of the families and relatives of those who perished. Captain Waghorne was court-martialled, but was honorably acquitted.—T. P.'s Weekly.

Under the will of the late Mr. William Whiteley, who left $25,000 to be invested for annual distribution among the poor of the borough, 221 sovereigns were distributed to the poor people by the mayor and aldermen of Paddington.

Even a mere pudding can surround itself with an air of secret mystery which will set the whole household agog just at this time of the year.

WHEN a woman is irritable she says it is "nerves." When her husband shows the same symptoms she tells him he smokes too much.

It is said that it takes nine tailors to make a man, but often double the number turns out a cad.

A man may split his infinitives and still be able to collect his interest.

When a legislature starts to making laws governing women's attire it is evidence that they are trying to duck on something else.

WOMEN SUFFER

MORE THAN MEN

Women have more than their share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity. They must "keep up" in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, etc. Mrs. Edward Calwood of 123 S. Harold Street, Fort William, Ont., says:

"I suffered with dull, miserable pains, soreness across my back and in my sides for months. They would catch me so badly at times that I could scarcely move around. I would have dizzy spells, and altogether, felt generally run down. After using a number of remedies without finding relief, I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and found them an excellent remedy. They not only relieved me of the miserable pains and soreness in my back but cured me of my kidney trouble."

Some Suspicious Persons

Enquired if we were "hiring" a certain "weekly" paper to abuse us.

Of course every time a spot light is turned on from any source it offers a splendid chance to talk about the merits of the products, but 'pon honor now, we are not hiring that "Weekly."

The general reader seldom cares much for the details of "scraps."

A few may have read lately some articles attacking us and may be interested in the following:-

Some time ago a disagreement arose with a "Weekly." They endorsed our foods by letter, but wanted to change the form of advertising, to which we objected.

The "Weekly" discontinued inserting our advertisement while they were negotiating for some changes they wanted in the wording and shape of the advertisements, and during this correspondence our manager gave instructions to our Advertising Department to quit advertising altogether in that "Weekly."

Quite a time after the advertising had been left out, an editorial attack came. We replied in newspapers and the scrap was on.

Then came libel suits from both sides, and some harsh words.

Generally tiresome to the public.

That "Weekly" has attacked many prominent men and reputable manufacturers.

Our Company seems prominent enough for a sensational writer to go after, hunt for some little spot to criticise, then distort, twist and present it to the public under scare heads.

So an attorney from New York spent more or less time for months in Battle Creek hoping to find impurities in our foods, or dirt in the factories. After tireless spying about he summoned twenty-five of our workmen and took their testimony. Every single one testified that the foods are made of exactly the grain and ingredients printed on the packages; the wheat, barley and corn being the choicest obtainable—all thoroughly cleaned—the water of the purest and every part of the factories and machinery kept scrupulously clean.

That all proved disappointing to the "Weekly." There are very few factories, hospital, private—or hotel and restaurant kitchens that could stand the close spying at unexpected times and by an enemy paid to find dirt or impurities of some kind.

In any ordinary kitchen or factory he would find something to magnify and make a noise about.

But he failed utterly with the Postum Works and products. Twenty to thirty thousand people go through the factories annually and we never enquire whether they are there to spy or not. It makes no difference to us.

He next turned to discover something about our advertising that could be criticised.

An analysis of the methods and distorted statements of the "Weekly" may interest some readers, so we take up the item one by one and open them out for inspection. We will "chain up" the harsh words and make no reference in this article to the birth, growth and methods of the "Weekly" but try to confine the discussion to the questions now at issue.

Some Facts

Battle Creek, Michigan, December 30, 1910.

We the undersigned certify that never to our knowledge has a testimonial letter been printed by the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., which did not have behind it a genuine letter signed, and believed to be an honest statement.

To the best of our knowledge and belief the Company has received upwards of fifty thousand, (50,000) genuine testimonial letters.

This Company has never knowingly made nor permitted an untruthful statement regarding its products or its methods.

Distortion No 1 stated that we have been accustomed to advertise Grape-Nuts and Postum as "cure-alls for everything."

It has never been the policy of this Company to advertise Grape-Nuts or Postum to cure anything.

We say that in cases where coffee disagrees and is causing sickness its dismissal will remove the cause of the trouble, and we suggest the use of Postum for the reason that it furnishes a hot palatable morning beverage, and contains natural elements from the grain which can be used by nature to assist in rebuilding nerve centres that coffee may have broken down.

Likewise Grape-Nuts food does not cure anything, but it does assist nature tremendously in rebuilding, provided the undigestible food that has been used is discontinued and Grape-Nuts taken in its place.

Charge No. 2 states that the passage of the National Food & Drugs Act compelled us to drop from the packages some assertions regarding the nutritive value of Grape-Nuts.

We have never been "compelled" to make any change.

Since the beginning it has been a universal rule to print clearly on every package exactly what the contents are made of.

Before the passage of the Pure Food Law the packages stated that Grape-Nuts food was made of wheat and barley.

We did not esteem the small amount of salt and yeast as of value enough to speak of, but after the new Law came in we became as technical as the officials at Washington and added the words "yeast" and "salt," although we have no recollection of being asked to.

We believed that our statement that Grape-Nuts will supply elements to nourish the brain and nerve centres is true and bring authorities to support the fact.

Some state chemists believed this a gross exaggeration and inasmuch as the Food Dept. at Washington could easily harass grocers, pending a trial on the disputed question, we concluded that much the better way would be to eliminate from our packages such claims, however certain we may be that the claims are true.

Another statement objected to read as follows:

"The system will absorb a greater amount of nourishment from one pound of Grape-Nuts than from ten pounds of meat, wheat, oats or bread."

Some Department chemists deceive themselves as well as the public.

"Calorie" is the word which defines a unit of heat determined by the amount necessary to raise one kilogram of water one degree centigrade. On this basis a table of calories is prepared showing the percentage of different kinds of food. Butter shows 8.60; Grape-Nuts 3.96; milk 0.70. Remember the statement on the package spoke of the nourishment the system would absorb, but did not speak of the calories of heat contained in it, for the heat is not nourishment, and the nourishment cannot be judged by the number of heat units, notwithstanding the fact that certain chemists would have the public believe so.

As an illustration: Attempt to feed a man sixty days on butter alone, with its 8.60 calories. The man would die before the experiment had run sixty days.

Then, take Grape-Nuts with 3.96 and milk with 0.70,—the two combined equal 4.66—about one-half the number of calories contained in butter. The man fed for sixty days on this food would be well nourished, and could live not only sixty days, but six months on that food alone, and we do not hesitate to say from our long knowledge of the sustaining power of the food that a man at the end of sixty days would be of practically the same weight as when he started,—if he be a man of normal weight.

We will suppose that from his work he lost a pound a day and made up a pound each day from food. If that promise proved to be true the man in sixty days' time would make sixty pounds of tissue to replace what had been lost, and this would be done on Grape-Nuts and milk with half the number of calories of butter, upon which no one can sustain life.

Therefore, we have reason to believe that our contention is right that concentrated food like Grape-Nuts, which is partly digested and ready for easy assimilation by the body, presents more nourishment that the system will absorb than many other forms of food, and we will further say that in cases of digestive troubles where meat, white bread and oats cannot be digested, that Grape-Nuts and milk contain more nourishment that the system will absorb than many pounds of these other foods.

Distortion No. 3 charges that our testimonials were practically all paid for and re-written in Battle Creek.

These testimonials were demanded by the opposing lawyers. Naturally this demand was refused, for they are held in vaults and kept safe to prove the truth, and are not to be delivered up on demand of enemies.

Testimony at the trial brought out the fact that we never printed a single testimonial that we did not have the genuine letter back of. Many of these letters came spontaneously. A record was kept of twelve hundred and four (1204) letters received in one month from people who wrote that they had either entirely recovered their health or been benefited by following our suggestions on food and beverages.

On three or four occasions in the past ten or twelve years we printed broadcast in papers offers of prizes to users of Postum and Grape-Nuts,—two hundred $1.00 prizes, one hundred $2.00, twenty of $5.00 and five of $10.00 each,—stating that each must be an honest letter with name and address. We agreed not to publish names, but to furnish them to enquirers by letter. These letter writers very generally answered those who wrote to them, and verified the truth of the statements.

Under this agreement not to publish names literally scores of letters came from doctors. We kept our word and neither printed their names or surrendered the letters.

Right here notice an "imitation spasm." The "Weekly" says: "Post got those testimonials by advertising for them. In New York he used for that purpose the New York Magazine of ——— whose editor is now in the Federal Penitentiary for fraudulent use of the mails. For example, Post announced in that magazine in 1907, etc.," (then follows our prize competition).

We used nearly all of the papers and magazines in New York, and the rest of America, but the sensational writer gives the impression to his readers that the only magazine we used was one "whose editor is now in the Federal Penitentiary," etc., something that we know nothing of the truth of now, and never did. Space was bought in the magazine spoken of on a business basis for the reason that it went to a good class of readers. The incident seems to have furnished an opportunity for a designing writer to deceive his readers.

We look upon honest human testimony from men and women as to the means by which they recovered health as of tremendous value to those in search of it. Our business has been conducted from the very first day upon lines of strict integrity and we never yet have published a false testimonial of human experience. Many of these letters covered numerous sheets; some, if printed, would spread over half a page of newspaper. If we would attempt to print one such letter in every one of the thousands of papers and magazines we use, the cost for printing that one letter would run into many thousands of dollars.

We boil down these letters exactly as a newspaper writer boils his news—sticking sacredly to the important facts and eliminating details about the family and other unimportant matters. This work of boiling down, or editing, is done honestly, and with a full knowledge of our responsibility, but notice the art of the "twister" in the way he presents to his readers this matter of testimonials.

Distortion No. 4 This is a bad one. It reads as follows: "The only famous physician whose name was signed to a testimonial was produced in Court by Colliers and turned out to be a poor old broken down homeopath, who is now working in a printing establishment. He received ten dollars ($10.00) for writing his testimonial.

We will wager ten thousand dollars ($10,000.00) with any investigator that we have, subject to inspection of any fair committee, upwards of three hundred (300) communications from physicians, many of them expressing the highest commendation of our products, but these will not now or ever be turned over to the publisher for his use.

Notice the statement in this charge: "The only famous physician whose name was signed to Postum testimonial, etc."

The truth is, this Dr. Underwood was one of a great many physicians who have not only written commendatory words about the value of our foods, but every now and then some physician writes an article on coffee or on food, and sends it to us with a suggestion of compensation for his time and medical knowledge. Previous to the time when we employed physicians in our own business, we occasionally employed a doctor to write an article on coffee, always insisting that the article be an honest expression of his opinion and research.

The "Weekly" hunted up this physician, and because he seemed to be poor, and as it says, "brokendown," had him brought to Court to be exposed before a jury as the "only physician that had ever endorsed Grape-Nuts," but much to the chagrin of the "Weekly," when our attorney asked him if the article he wrote about coffee was true, he replied: "yes."

Statement No. 5 reads: "The health officers of Mich., Maine, Penn. New Hamp. and other states in their official bulletins have for years been denouncing as preposterous and fraudulent the claims made by the Postum Cereal Company." We do not recall any criticism except from Mich., Penn., Maine and S. Dakota.

The average reader might think that the opinions expressed by the State Officials are always correct, but that conclusion is not borne out by facts.
